LONDON, Monday, June 8.—The Suffragtte Church brawling squad transferred their operations from the Protestant to the Roman Catholic churches of London to-day and they got rough handling with which they had not met with in their previous interruptions of Church services. Brompton Oratory was the scene of the chief disturbance, and this was during the law mass at noon. Father Bowden had just entered the pulpit to speak when several women in different parts of the Church began the customary Pankhurstian sing-song. They were promptly ejected with little trouble.

Then a hard-featured woman stalked up the centre aisle toward the pulpit and shouted something about forcible feeding. The verger and several other men seized the woman. One man put his hand over her mouth. The woman bit through his glove and nipped the flesh. She was hustled out, struggling violently.

This disturber had just been gotten rid of when another woman rushed up to the altar and began to scream. She was seized by several men, and was finally thrown out, but not without a violent scene. She hit right and left with an umbrella which she carried as people began to leave their seats to help the vergers. Well-dressed women in the congregation jabbed her with their umbrellas, while men seized the "wild woman's" wrists, and wrested her umbrella from her. She continued to kick, struggle and shout like a maniac, but was finally ejected.

Series of Furious Fights.

This virago had hardly been thrown the Church and a series of furious fights resulted. The congregation took a hand, which has never been the case hitherto in the Church raids and they showed no mercy to the "furies." The women worshippers in the Church were especially fierce in their attacks on the interrupters. One of the militants after another was ejected amid shrieks and struggles.

There was an amazing scene on the steps of the Oratory as the vergers and others plunged out with the wild, yelling women in their grasp. Twice the vergers rolled down the steps clutching and clutched by screaming women. One of the ejected women was just about entering a taxicab when an incensed woman worshipper who had followed her out, rushed up and struck her in the face.

Father Vaughan Also Annoyed.

Father Burnham, the Superior of the Oratorians, was sent for at the height of the disturbance. Just as he entered the Church he was confronted by a wild, elderly French woman, who yelled in French that "the English are torturing woman as they have always done since they tortured Joan of Arc." A hand was clapped over the woman's mouth and she was unable to deliver the remainder of her speech. She was then ejected.

After the battle was over it was found that the floor near the pulpit was strewn with smashed combs and feathers, scraps of veils, ribbons and handkerchiefs. One woman who had been ejected lay down on the sidewalk outside the Church and refused to move. Her teeth had been injured by somebody's fist and she talked with difficulty. Her hat was torn off and her clothes were in a disordered condition and covered with dirt caused by the scufflers trampling over her. Eventually the police arrested her. Some of the other women disturbers wer also arrested temporarily but were afterwards released, except Christin Andrews and Mrs. Mary Fausten, who is said to be an American. She was bailed out by her husband.

Father Bowden said afterwards: "The men and women of the congregation handled the interrupters in the most violent manner, and I do not blame them. The vergers tried to protect the interrupters but it was useless. Their hats were torn off, and their dresses were in a disordered condition and their hair was hanging loose. A sort of whirlpool settled around each 'fury.' They looked like epileptics with their gaping mouths, wild eyes and contorted features."

The evening service at the Westminster Roman Catholic Cathedral was also disturbed by the Suffragettes. They started to interrupt as Father Bernard Vaughan, the noted Jesuit preacher, was about to begin his sermon, but the brawlers presumably had learned of the rough treatment of other women at Brompton Oratory and submitted to ejection without resistance.

WHAT THE W. A. A. IS ACCOMPLISHING

Members of the Women's Art Association, who are not active members, sometimes have no idea of the work the Association is doing. One of the many things to their credit is the distribution of medals and honourable mention cards which are awarded to scholars in different schools in the city. These medals and cards for which the children of the different schools competed during the past term, have been presented. There were 63 honourable mention cards and 8 medals awarded. One of the medals—a special prize for the best rug design, was competed for by the children from all the schools. The other five medals were competed for by the children of the different grades in the different school—that is the winners would require to compete with all the scholars in the same grade in the different schools, and the winning of these medals is, therefore an honour.

The Women's Art Association are to be congratulated on the work they are doing in this way and other means they take of advancing art.

WARM DEBATE ON SUBJECT OF CHURCH UNION

Speakers at Assembly Declare the Presbyterian Church Could do More Effective Work By Herself

REPORT PRESENTED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 8.—There was a warm debate at the Presbyterian General Assembly this morning on the question of church union. Several delegates resented the fact that Rev. Dr. Clark of the Church Union committee had presented views of the minority as well as the majority. Later when those not in favour of church union got a chance to speak, they declared that the Presbyterian Church would continue to do more effective work in the cause of Christianity if she worked by herself. The majority of the members of the committee said Presbyterians would be breaking faith with the Methodists and Congregationalists if the report was not followed.

SUFFRAGETTES ARRESTED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., June 8.—Three militant suffragettes were one after another ejected from the horse show and arrested this afternoon when they attempted to harangue King George and Queen Mary, who were present in the Royal box.

PETERBORO' STUDENTS WERE SUCCESSFUL

In the list of the successful students who passed their first year at the University of Toronto in the Faculty of Arts, appears the names of the following Peterborough people: Meredith Huycke, who obtained honours in English and History and Classics; Keith Corkery, General Course; Miss F. O. Galbraith, General Course; Miss H. McDonald, General Course; Gordon Matthews, Biological and Physiological Science; Miss L. Potter, daughter of Rev. Mr. Potter, formerly of St. Andrew's Church, was also successful in obtaining her first year in Arts. Mr. Wilbert Hayes, son of Mr. John Hayes, Park Street, was in the list of the honour graduates of the fourth year in Medicine at the University of Toronto.

91 IN THE SHADE WAS HIGH MARK

Peterborough smeltered to-day in the hottest temperature of the year. The official high mark was 91 in the shade. Considerably the highest for 1914. The probabilities are that the heat wave will continue for a day or so. At least the weather man promises a continuation of the present over-heated brand to-morrow.

Leper Registers At Hotel And Mingles With Many Notables

Unfortunate Man Said to Have Leprosy Stops at Hotel at Which Vice-Presidet Resides

NOW IN CHARGE

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Consternation ran riot on Tuesday in the fashionable Shoreham Hotel, where Vice-President and Mrs. Marshall and other notables live, when it was discovered that John Early, the escaped "leper," had been living there for two days.

Early registered at the hotel on Sunday afternoon under the name of E. J. Weston, of New York, and has since been mingling freely with the guests, walking about the Washington streets, attending moving picture shows and enjoying the sights of the town.

TIRED OF BEING FREE MAN.

Tiring of the uneventful visit, however, he telephoned the local health officers on Tuesday morning of his presence, and they arrested him in his hotel room and hustled him to his former isolation quarters in Anacostia. He is now occupying the same brick house built there for him six years ago.

From Early's own account of his wanderings since he took French leave of the public health station at Port Townsend, on May 15, he spent part of the time in New York as a guest of the York Hotel. He arrived there on May 23 and remained until last Sunday, when he left for Washington.

Arriving at the Washington Union Station he calmly took a taxicab and drove to a hotel where he registered and was shown to his room without question. It is said by the health officials who are familiar with his case that the ravages of leprosy have made great inroads on him since his incarceration in Washington some years ago.

While formerly Early always denied vehemently that he was a leper, he now freely admits a belief that he has the disease of something similar to it. His chief purpose appears to be to stir agitation about his case and bring about the establishment of a national leprosarium where unfortunates may be taken care of by the government.

TO KEEP HIM ISOLATED.

The future of Early in Washington is a matter of much concern to the authorities. He will be kept isolated until final disposition of his case is made.

Since his former visit here, Early has been divorced by his wife, who stood loyally and faithfully by him during his Washington trials. A child was born to them after his freedom. For a while Mrs. Early and his children lived next to him in the brick house of isolation, their living quarters divided by a thin partition.

Health Officer Woodward was watching for Early's appearance in Washington. Early acted as a government guard for several other lepers and was under no particular restraint.

John Early first attracted attention in 1908 when he was taken in charge in Washington and pronounced a leper. The question of his leprosy was agitated pro and con for a long time and Dr. H. Bulkeley, a skin specialist of New York, declared he was not a leper. He was then freed and for some time resided in New York. His army record secured him a pension, as he had served as a volunteer in Cuba, the Philippines and Porto Rico.

DID NOT WALK OFF FIELD IN TORONTO GAME

Manager Blount and members of the Peterborough team claim that the Toronto papers were wrong in claiming that the Peterborough squad left the field in the disputed game in Toronto last week. The facts of the case are that Umpire Hallinan, without pulling a watch on the Petes as required by the rules, declared the game forfeited to Peterborough. The Petes did not walk off the field at all.

Condemned By Both Parties

that certain sums of money, for which he could not account 'may have gone into the Liberal campaign funds.' But Mr. Ferguson never called as a witness a single one of the persons implicated by McClellan to give evidence on this point, though they were available and could have been examined at any time. All of these men have sent me affidavits in absolute denial of what was said of them. The fact is that the report repeats the insinuation which McClellan made when he couldn't account for money which he had put down in his own pocket."

A number of these affidavits, including one from Hon. J. R. Stratton and another from Mr. R. Hall, were read by Mr. Guthrie. Continuing his comment the South Wellington member declared that some of Mr. Ferguson's finding could "only be described as rotten." They were absolutnonsense when placed before intelligent men. Dealing incidentally with the question of dredges and boats used on the canal, Mr. Guthrie showed that a boat owned by a prominent Peterborough Conservative had been hired under the present Government and renovated at the expense of the people."

Col. Sam Doesn't Believe It.

"I do not believe the findings brought by the Commissioner so far as McClellan is concerned," declared Col. Sam. Hughes. "As for this man Harris," he continued, "he is as square a man as every lived." Replying to a Liberal comment that a statement made by the Minister did not agree with what Mr. Ferguson had found, Col. Hughes retorted warmly, "I don't care about that; I'm telling what the facts are." Col. Hughes also agreed with Liberal speakers that names of innocent people mentioned in the report should never have been brought out, a statement which was also concurred in by Hon. J. D. Reid when he spoke a little later. "I think that in the great majority of cases," added Col. Hughes, "that the Government got dollar for dollar for everything supplied in connection with the canal."

Mr. Graham's Criticism.

Hon. George P. Graham, in speaking briefly, emphasized the unfairness of the report and the injustice which had been done in publishing abroad the names of many of the people mentioned in the document when they had been guilty of not the slightest wrong-doing. Mr. Graham also drew attention to the fact that the Ferguson report supplied another example of the unfairness and bias shown by Commissioners under the present Government. The course of the present Ministery, he said, had been such as to throw disregard upon the plan of investigation by Royal Commissions in Canada.

Pete's Beaten 4 to 1 Saturday Kubat Chased Out Of Game

Score Was 4 to 1 in the Third Game of the Series—Welsh Had Three Hits For the Petes

NO GAME SUNDAY

OTTAWA, June 8 — Ottawa hit Louis Schettler with freedom in today's game and defeated Peterborough by 4 to 1. They scored one in the first and though Peterborough tied in the fourth, Ottawa at once went ahead. In the seventh pitcher Kubat, who had held the Petes to five hits, jostled Umpire Miller and was put out of the game. Shocker succeeded him and they only attained one more single. In the eighth Ottawa scored two more on hits by Dolan and Shocker. A big row resulted in the banishment of Kubat. He disputed a decision at first and Nill, Dolan and several others joined in the argument Miller told Kubat to get out of the park and the Ottawa infield surrounded him threateningly, Shaughnessy then raced in from centre field, ordered his players back to their positions, sent Kubat to the dressing room and called on Shocker. Ottawa played fast ball and redeemed their showing of Friday when they made nine errors. Rogers sprained his right ankle in sliding to second and will be out of the game for some time. Score:

TORONTO'S HERE FOR A SERIES

The Toronto Ball Club is with us to-day, and will clash with the Blountmen for the first three days of this week. Mr. K. Lee, erstwhile of Hamilton, is piloting the Beavers, and some familiar faces will be found in the batting order. Our admired and respected ex-fellow townsman Irwin Trout is with the visitors as well as Bill Schaeffer, who once upon a time twirled here and who has seen service in Guelph and Berlin. Ort, formerly of Hamilton, Isaacs, who used to be with Guelph, Kirley with Guelph last year, and Auld with Berlin, are with the little Leafs. Schneider, the big first-baseman, has jumped the team, and Trouties will probably play first this afternoon. Schultz, the hard-hitting outfielder is also an absentee to-day. He was given a day off to visit his home in Pittsburg. Lee has six pitchers, Auld, Kirley, Schaeffer, Roberts, Graham and Galm. The latter, who was with Buffalo last year, may work to-day.

To-morrow will be Ladies' Day, and a big turnout of the fair sex may be expected. The week day games will all start at 3:45, with Saturday's game at 3.

Formal Opening Of Golf Links

On Saturday afternoon the formal opening of the Golf Links took place with a large tea, which was highly successful in every respect. About a hundred and twenty members were present, besides a number of guests who are visiting members in the City. Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Miss Laura Davidson, who had the arrangements in hand, are to be congratulated on the admirable manner everything was carried out.

Wonderful Twirling Feat By Huycke Featured Mercantile League Games

Bankers' Pitcher Struck Out No Less Than Twenty Men in Saturday's Game Against the Red Caps—Financiers Won by 5 to 2—Draughting Room Beat De Laval.

The masterly pitching of "Merry" Huycke was the outstanding feature of Saturday's double-header in the Mercantile League series. Twirling for the Bankers, Huycke fanned no less than twenty of the Red Caps, keeping Jack Pilling's gang swinging like leaves in a spring gale. As a result the Financiers beat the Red Caps 5 to 2, and assumed the leadership of the League.

Huycke showed fine speed, and as good curve, and the losers could do nothing with him. In the first six innings, only two men reached first base, Kendry on a scratch hit and Rahmel on an error. Just seventeen others faced Huycke in that period. He threw out one himself, Minorgan got another on a grounder, and the rest fanned.

Rahmel started for the Red Caps, but was no mystery to the Bankers, who combed him for eight hits and five runs in the first three innings. In addition his support was wobbly. Flaherty succeeded him in the fifth and the Bankers were through scoring runs right there. The veteran twirler mowed the men of money down in great style, striking out nine in four innings.

The fielding features were supplied by Heenan who cut Smyth out of a triple by a beautiful running catch, and Moran who went back and pulled down Guerin's long fly with the bases full in the ninth.

The Bankers opened the scoring in the first, Smyth singled and went to second on Sheehy's infield out. Huycke singled through short and Kendry fumbled Parsons' grounder, Smyth scoring. Cavanah's single filled the bases, but Paton popped to Kendry, and Moran's grounder to shortstop forced Huycke.

In the second two errors by Kendry, a muff of an easy fly by Heenan, Smith's double and singles by Minorgan and Parsons counted three for the Bankers.

The Financiers added another in the third when Moran poled one to deep centre for three bases and scored on Minorgan's single.

With Flaherty in the box the Bankers' scoring was cut off with a jolt.

Only nineteen men faced Huycke in the first six innings, and fifteen of them fanned. In the seventh Swanston beat out a swinging bunt and took second on Huycke's low throw. Cavanah misjudged Guerin's high one in front of the plate and the batter got a cheap hit. Swanston was out stealing third, but Guerin scored when Cavanah threw wild to second base.

O'Heron led off in the eighth with a safety but was out stealing.

Huycke weakened in the ninth but got by safely. Rahmel opened with a single over short and Primeau and Swanston were passed, filling the bases. Guerin boomed a long high one to centre, Moran making a beautiful catch and the runners had taken such a lead that they were unable to advance after the ball was grabbed. Then Huycke fanned Kendry. Rahmel made a clever steal of home for the Red Caps' second run, but Huycke struck out Conners, his twentieth victim of the afternoon, and the game was over. The score:

Easy for Draughters.

In the first game the Draughting Room had no trouble in beating the De Laval team, the final count being 12 to 4. The Draughting Room took an early lead scoring four in the first and five in the second. Mahoney, who pitched such a fine game on the previous Saturday, was wild, and the D.R.'s mixed their safeties with errors by the losers to pile up the score. Carson succeeded him in the third and the southpaw got by in good style for the balance of the game.

Henderson pitched fine ball for the winners, allowing the Separators only five scattered hits. The Draughting Room had their batting togs on, Cranfield leading in the attack with a double and two singles. The winners fielded snappily behind Henderson, a fast double play featuring. The score:

A. H. Stratton vs. N. H. Campbell.
R. M. Hamilton, bye.

The game must be played by Saturday, June 13th.

On Saturday next the mixed foursomes will be played. Ladies and gentlemen are requested to be on hand by 2:45 p.m., at which time the draws will be made. The winners of the last competition are barred in this match.

"SUWANEE RIVER" IN SONG BOOK

The popularity of "Suwanee River" dates back to the time when Christine Nilsson, the fair haired daughter of a farmer near Wexio, Sweden, surprised all who heard her with the sweetness and compass of her voice as she sang Foster's plaintive melody. She was an accomplished player on the flute and violin and she made her debut at the early age of 17 at Stockholm. Like many of the famous prima donnas, the opera chosen for her appearance was "La Traviata." She made a concert tour of the United States and sang many years in Italian opera. At her farewell concert given in London her voice was exquisite in its purity and sweetness and evenness of tone, having a compass of three octaves, an exceptional range. In America she will be known and long remembered for her singing of "Suwanee River" in the height of her success and operatic triumphs. She was the acknowledged incomparable artist of her times. This beautiful song, and many others sang by Nilsson, are to be found in "Heart Songs" now offered by this paper to its readers, who will find the terms given in the coupon published on another page of to-day's issue.

Lacrosse Practice To-Night For Wednesday's Game

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club plays the return game with Hastings in the village on Wednesday, and a full turnout is requested for practice this evening at Riverside Park. Had the locals been at full strength last week it is felt that there would have been a different story to tell. Thanks to the perspicacity of Mr. T. P. Lancaster, convenor of the local schedule committee there is very much Hastings vs. Peterborough at the very opening of the season. The schedule for this district is top-heavy with the games between these two teams. A little foresight or ordinary ability for schedule planning on the part of that committee might have done a great deal for the good of the game. But now, Hastings boasts that they have practically won the district. They claim to be able to put any of the other teams away on any grounds, and also state that they will trim Peterborough on Wednesday night next.

This is virtually the deciding week for the league and every man should report at Riverside this evening. It may be expected that Hastings will put up a strong game on their own grounds, but the locals are going down, if they can get the men away, to redeem themselves upon last week's contest. There is no necessity of giving the names of those who are wanted out to-night. All those who have been practising and any others who want to turn out are requested to be present.

PETERBOROUGH CRICKET CLUB DEFEATED GROVE SCHOOL

On Saturday afternoon the Peterborough Cricket Club added another game to their victories when they defeated the Grove school in Lakefield 94—74. For a bunch of youngsters the Prep. school boys played remarkably well, especially McCullough, who is a good bowler, and Patterson at the bat; also their fielding was good.

The local eleven are getting better every game and their bowling and batting is very fair. Thompson knocked up 27 of; Peterborough's score. On account of the team arriving late in Lakefield, the game only lasted one innings.

Next Saturday afternoon the Campbellford cricket team are going to play the Peterborough eleven here at Nicholls Oval.

BRITISH POLO CAPTAIN WILL BE OUT OF GAME

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 8.—Badly shaken by a smashed nose received in practice, Captain Leslie St. George Cheape, England's famous poloist, will not be able to play in the first game of the series to-morrow. This is a serious loss to the British team. It is expected that Lord Wimbourne, the backer of the team, will play himself.

OLDEST INDIAN PASSED AWAY

Isaac Johnson, the Patriarch of the Chemong Indian Village Reserve, for ninety years a resident of the village in which he passed away, died Saturday evening. Johnson, whose parents came from the fork of the Credit river, was a Mississauga Indian and was about ninety years of age. He has lived since birth in the Indian Village and was the oldest living resident of the village at the time of his death.

The old Indian who died from blood poisoning, was a familiar figure to all who summer at the Lakes. In his old patched canoe he was to be seen all summer long paddling the lakes of the district, travelling from one point to another, fishing or offering goods for sale. Though comparatively active for a man of his age, he graduated from the fraternity of Indian guides that is to be found on the Kawartha Lakes on account of his age, and made a livelihood by hunting, fishing and making wicker verandah chairs.

Johnson was well known among the summer and other residents of the north country. His canoe was a light one of ancient vintage, patched with tin, and his craft is as familiar to the cottagers as the old patriarch himself. He is survived by a wife and four sons, in Indian Village.

WEDDING BELLS

PEEL—WATTERS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Peter's Cathedral, this morning, just as the bell tolled the Angelus at 6 o'clock, when Miss Kathleen Watters and Mr. John Peel were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Father Meagher. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Violet Watters, while Mr. Master Watters, brother of the bride, acted as best man. After a short wedding trip to Toronto Mr. and Mrs. Peel will reside in this City.

PITCHFORD—AUSTIN.

St. John's Church was the scene of a pretty June wedding Saturday afternoon at 2.30, when Miss Ethel Ivy Austin, daughter of Mr. John Austin, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Pitchford, son of Mr. Jas. Pitchford, of London Street. Rev. Canon Davidson officiated.

After a short honeymoon the young couple will reside in the City.

PALMER—LOVEKIN.

The wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Manse, on Saturday afternoon, of Mr. aHrry Milton Palmer of Welland to Miss Mildred Evelyn Lovekin of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robt. Pogue. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer left on the afternoon C.P.R. train for Welland, where they will reside.

MAHONEY—COLNAN.

A quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized this morning in St. Peter's Cathedral, between Mr. Jas. Mahoney, of Toronto, and Mary (Maynie) Colnan, of Peterborough. The bride, who was given away by her brother, John Colnan, looked charming in white crepe de Chine, trimmed with shadow lace and a white lace hat. She was assisted by the groom's sister, Miss Margaret Mahoney, of Toronto, who was attired in pink satin. The groom was supported by Mr. W. J. O'Connell, of Rochester. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Dean McColl.

After the ceremony a dainty repast was served at the home of the bride's mother, at which the immediate relatives were present.

The happy couple left for a short trip to Niagara and Buffalo, after which they will reside at 5 Huron Street, Toronto.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, indicative of the high esteem in which she is held.

OBITUARY

AN ACTION OVER AN ELEVATOR

His Honour Judge Huycke is occupied this afternoon, hearing the case of the G. Water Greene Co. vs. Roland Denne. Mr. Greene, the plaintiff, claims the sum of $42.38 for repairs done to an elevator.

Mr. Denne, stated Mr. Kerr, counsel for the plaintiff, in his warehouse, desired to have an elevator put in, for purpose of business, and Mr. Greene undertook to put in the elevator. He did so, and the elevator was in use for some time. For two and a half months the elevator worked satisfactorily, and was paid for.

About two and one-half months after its erection, one day, the elevator went down to the ground with a crash and was, to some extent, broken. Mr. Denne sent for Mr. Greene, who sent workmen to repair the damaged elevator. Mr. Denne said the elevator was not identical with the one in Duffus' garage. After some talking, evidence will, I believe, prove Mr. Greene agreed to make the repairs, and at the same time, make the elevator identical with the one owned by Ald. Duffus.

This was done, and now, said Mr. Kerr, addressing the jury, we have brought this action, against Mr. Denne for the amount of these repairs, and he comes forward with a counter claim, that we had originally agreed to provide him with a machine identical with the one owned by Ald. Duffus, and, further, that the one we did supply, was defective.

He is asking damages and we are asking payment for our work.

Mr. G. W. Green was then called and stated his claim.

The case is proceeding.

MR. THEOBALD'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm. Theobald will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence.

Storstad Owners Coming.

MONTREAL, June 9.—The formal petition for the bailing out of the Storstad, the collier which rammed the Empress of Ireland, was presented to the Admiralty Court yesterday and arguments were postponed until the representatives of the owners of the ship who are coming from Norway, reach here. The vessel was placed under arrest by the C. P. R. at security in their $2,000,000 damage suit against her owners, th/ Actieselskabet Maritime Co. of Christiania, Norway.

John Kendrick Dead.

BROCKVILLE, June 9. — John Kendrick, 80, a lifelong resident of Elizabethtown, died Sunday at his residence in New Dublin, after a short illness. In his younger days he was a farmer, but of later years he had devoted himself to the raising and care of bees. His wife and one daughter survive.

Your Face Can Be Kept Free From Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

Try this simple, inexpensive home treatment for banishing hairy growths if you want a clear, hairless skin. With some water and powdered delatone, mix into a stiff paste enough to cover the hairy surface. Apply and in two or three minutes rub off and with it will come every bit of hair or fuss. Then wash the skin and you will find it remarkably clear and free from hair. You will be delighted to find how easily this is done. Only be careful to get real delatone.

SENATE KILLS THE BILL

OTTAWA, June 9. — The bill to reimburse the depositors in the defunct Farmers' Bank was defeated in the Senate last evening by 32 to 28. The defeat of the measure was not unexpected, but it was anticipated that the division would be on party lines. The vote of the Conservatives was evenly divided for and against the motion, while fourteen Liberals vote to give the bill a six months' twist.

The following was the division:

Conservatives, for six months' hoist moved by Senator Power—Bolduc, McKeen, Daniels, McKay, Ross (Middleton), Derby, Murphy, Lariviere, Curry, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Montplaisir—11.

Liberals, for six months' hoist—Beique, Pinet, Legris, Thibodeau, Godbout, Kerr, Dandurand, Power, Thompson, Forget, Jaffray, Tessier, Roche, Farrell, Desaulles, Choquette, Yeo, Baith, Gillmor, Cloran and Lavergne—21.

Conservatives against—Lougheed, Baird, Mason, Gordon, McLaren, Taylor, Pope, Smith, Donnelly, McCaul, DeBoucherville—11.

Liberals against—Mitchell, Dives, McHugh, Domville, Casgrain, Bostock, Derbyshire, Davester, Young, Watson, Ross (Moose Jaw), Ratz, Boyer and Talbot—14.

The two party leaders, Messrs. Lougheed and Bostock, both voted for the bill, while Sir Mackenzie Bowell, the old Conservative Premier, voted against.

Several Liberal Senators alleged that the purpose of the bill was merely to fulfill election promises and blacken the character of the former Finance Minister, Hon. W. S. Fielding.

Senator Bostock declared that notwithstanding the information which was said to have reached Mr. Henderson of Halton, that members had not taken the trouble to go across the floor of the House and tell Mr. Fielding.

Practically the whole of the afternoon's sitting of the Commons was taken up with a discussion of the mail service between Canada and Great Britain, with the rivalry between St John and Halifax as mail ports forced to the front by Maritime Province members. On the Liberal side the existing service came in for considerable criticism, while Hon. L. P. Pelletier and other Government men cited improvements since the present Ministry took office.

GOVERNMENT FORCES WIN.

Albanian Rebels Are Put to Rout by Prince William's Troops.

VIENNA, Austria, June 9.—Albanian Government troops yesterday completely routed a force of 5,000 insurgents in the vicinity of Tirana, to the east of Durazzo, according to a despatch from the Albanian capital. The insurgents after a victory over the Government troops had threatened to advance on the capital.

Although the insurgents declare themselves ready to submit to most of the demands of the international commission in regard to the future of Alban... they steadfastly refuse to recognize Prince William of Wied as their ruler and demand the nomination of a Moslem prince. Most of them favor Essad Pasha., former Minister of War, who was recently deported and went to Italy.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

PUBLIC IS ROUSED.

"Let Them Die" In Attitude Towards Hunger Strikers.

LONDON, June 9: — "Let them die!" is becoming a rather popular slogan in connection with the "hunger striking" suffragettes, since the public has become so profoundly resentful of the actions of the militant women.

It is reported to-day that the Government had decided to take a step in this direction by introducing legislation to indemnify the prison authorities against the consequences of allowing suffragettes to starve themselves to death while in prison.

The Evening Standard yesterday interviewed a number of prominent people including clergymen, on the subject, and all of the latter who are quoted by the newspaper, express themselves in favor of the proposal.

Father Bernard Vaughan, brother of the late Cardinal Vaughan, replied "There would be nothing ethically wrong in letting them die. Let them start at once and make up for lost time."

Rev. Arthur Waldron, vicar of St. Matthew's, Brixton, said "If the women refuse food they should be allowed to die."

Rev. Richard Free vicar of St. Clement's, Pulham, replied: "I think the suggestion very good. I have advocated it for many months."

Several of those interviewed denounced impartially both forcible feeding and the "hunger strike," while Willoughby Dickinson, a Liberal member of Parliament; Lady Cowdray and Lady Mul-Mackenzie dismissed the suggestion as preposterous.

Armed Men Guard Structures.

LONDON, June 9.—The guardians of ancient structures in all parts of the county have adopted the most stringent precautions to protect the buildings against the vandalism of the militant suffragettes. Guns and dogs have been requisitioned for the service. Two men armed with rifles and accompanied by two bull dogs have been placed on guard in the grounds of the historic priory of Christchurch, Hampshire, which dates from the twelfth century. This plan also is being adopted at other places.

TO FORM CABINET.

Senator Ribot Undertakes To Unite Warring Factions.

PARIS, June 9.—Senator Alexander Felix Ribot last night accepted President Poincare's invitation to form a Ministry. He has already obtained promises of adhesion from Leon Bourgeois for the Foreign Office, Theophile Delcasse for the Department of Marine, and Jean de Pay for public works, and hopes to be able to present a complete list of the new Cabinet before to-night.

M. Ribot is in his 73rd year and has held various positions in previous Cabinets, as well as the Premiership.

Doubts, however, persist in political circles of his ultimate success, and these are strengthened by the undisguised opposition of the Caillaux radical, who have called a meeting for to-day, at which it is stated a motion affirming in the plainest terms the party's hostility to a Ministry led by M. Ribot, will be proposed.

One of the burning questions of the day is that relating to the three-year military service, and if the new Cabinet adheres to this measure it will have to face a strong Socialist opposition in the Chamber of Deputies.

Several Barns Burned.

BELLEVILLE, June 9.—This section of the community was visited by a severe electrical storm, which did considerable damage. Barns belonging to C. H. Bonisteel, in Sydney Township; Walter Meyers, in Thurlow Township; Mr. Hamblin, in Sydney; William Collins, in Huntingdon, and William Preston, in Rowdon were burned, with their contents. A number of horses and cows were killed by the lightning.

She Was In Bed For Seven Weeks

THEN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MADAME BERUBE.

Montreal Lady Tells How, After Four Years' Illness, She Found a Complete Cure for all Her Troubles.

Montreal, Que., June 8.—(Special)—Madame J. Baptiste Berube, residing at 1303 Logan Avenue, this city, asserts that after for years' suffering from kidney disease she has been completely restored to health by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had a pain in my left side around the heart," Madame Berube says in her statement. "I suffered constantly with headache and backache, and for seven weeks I was in bed with kidney disease and feebleness. The doctor could not help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills.

"After the first box I was some better. I continued to use Dodd's Kidney Pills till now the palpitation has left me, and I am a well woman, able to do my work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me and I recommend them to all persons who suffer as I did."

Notice how many women are rising to tell their suffering sisters they can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills. The reason is that nine-tenths of women's ills spring from diseased or disordered kidneys. Every woman whose kidneys show signs of weakness should use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THE LEADERS IN DEBATE

WOODSTOCK, June 9. — The expected clash between church unionists and anti-unionists took place at yesterday's session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. Dr. W. T. Clark of Westmount, Que., who presented the report for the committee, and Rev. Dr. D. D. McLeod, of Barrie, represented the opposing forces.

The minority report will be presented by Dr. Scott of Montreal today, along with an overture signed by 32 commissioners.

Both the minority report and the overture ask that negotiations with the Methodists and Congregationalists be shelved for some years.

Dr. Clark, in opening the discussion, said the amendments offered were the result of a large number of suggestions the committee had received from time to time. He also called the attention of the assembly to the changes now going on in their ranks. "At least six members of the committee who, when they joined, were strictly opposed to church union have now come to think the same as I," he said.

Dr. McLeod took exception to several of Dr. Clark's statements and gave a vigorous address in support of the minority report. He asked the assembly to banish from their minds the opinion that the members of the minority are narrow-minded. "They want to deal with the subject with an open mind," he said. "I do not think that the time has come for the end of the Presbyterian Church."

In presenting the report of the finance committee for the eastern section the treasurer said that the year had been a good one from the financial point of view. The receipts for 1913-14 totalled $151,264.32, against $140,218.86 for 1912-13. The western receipts were $13,638.76.

PLAGUE THAIN WITH COAL

Hunter Prevents Disaster on C. P. R. By Prompt Action.

WOODSTOCK, June 9.—By taking off his coat, tieing it to a gun, waving it, lighting matches, and shouting, Edward Dutton of this town, succeeded in stopping a C.P.R. freight train and thereby preventing it from being wrecked through running on a section where the tracks had been washed away by the rains about three o'clock yesterday morning.

Dutton was returning from a hunting trip, and he came across the washout at Pine Pond, 12 miles east of Woodstock. He and several companions began to hurry to a point where a warning might be given to the railway officials, but they had proceeded only 200 yards when they saw a freight train coming thundering along. After it was stopped and the crew had examined the condition of the road bed, it backed up to Woodstock, and the auxiliary was sent to make the repairs.

Russians Win Trophy.

LONDON, June 9.—Russian cavalry officers yesterday, for the third year in succession, won the $2,500 gold vase, founded by the late King Edward VII. for military horsemanship. The case thus becomes the permanent property of Russia.

The event, which is regarded as the most important on the program of the International Horse Show, attracted teams from most of the European armies. The vase had previously been carried off twice each by Russia and France and once by Belgium.

To Investigate Wireless.

LONDON, June 9. — A state organization to study, in the public interests, the science of wireless telegraphy, ordinary telegraphy and telephony is proposed by the Postmaster-General's committee of experts, whose report was issued last night. The committee suggests the establishment of a national research laboratory and a national committee of research to conduct theoretical investigations and experiments, and to co-ordinate and supplement the work now being done by Government Departments.

MANY LOST IN STORM.

Disaster Overtakes Fishing Fleet on North Shore of New Brunswick.

ST. JOHN, N.B., June 9.—During a severe storm on Friday night the fleet of fishing vessels on the shore of the province was badly crippled, and reports vary concerning the number which have been lost, though it is definitely known that nine have been drowned, eight from Caraquet, N.B., and one from St. Simons.

The reports which reached the city only yesterday said that at least forty small fishing vessels had gone down in the storm which raked along the coast. Some of the crews of one or the other of the smacks were rescued by the more sturdy vessels of the little fleet, but it was impossible, owing to their being so widely scattered, to save all. No less than five bodies were buried yesterday morning at Caraquet, and many homes have been bereaved by the disaster, which is one of the worst in the shipping history of the north shore.

The latest word with regard to loss in the storm on Friday on the north shore was to the effect that two vessels had gone down and a third was missing. Nine men were drowned, and the crew of the missing schooner have not been heard from. Eight of the men were from Caraquet and one from St. Simons, while each of the vessels was from the former place.

On board each of the schooners a father and two sons went to a watery grave. Joseph Carlault was the master of one of the little vessels and his two sons, John and Arthur, sailed with him. All three were drowned and a neighbor named Bugas also. The master of the other schooner was R. S. Albert and his two sons, Lorain and John, were member of his crew as were his father and another man, Oliver Paulin.

To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight
A Physician's Advice
Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of he individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.
Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They just absorb enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from he body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.
For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

CALL TO THE ELECTORS

TORONTO, June 9. — Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Liberal party in the Province of Ontario, has issued a manifesto to the electors, presenting his platform in the coming elections.

After declaring that the present contest is premature and unnecessary, Mr. Rowell says that the measures referred to by the Premier in his manifesto are not the controversial issues in the present contest. Workmen's compensation, the good roads policy, are all Liberal proposals, says the manifesto and the only question regarding them is whether they shall be administered by their initiators or by a Government which has resisted them inch by inch.

With regard to the development of New Ontario the manifesto says:

"We propose to enter upon this policy of development and settlement as a business and patriotic enterprise, put the department of colonization under a Minister who will devote the necessary time and ability to this great task, and if the creation of a new department should prove necessary we will not hesitate to create it.

"We disapprove of and protest against the alienation by the present Government of 2,000,000 acres of our finest land by way of land grants to railways, and we propose to put a stop to this policy.

"We protest against the financial waste of the present Government, of which Government House serves but as an illustration, while the Government last year cut down the grants to our rural public schools twenty-eight per cent."

The Department of Agriculture comes in for criticism and concerning it the Liberal leader says:

"We promise, if returned to power, to put at the head of the Department the best man to be found in the Province of Ontario, whether elected at this general election or not."

Mr. Rowell then deals with industrial conditions and concludes:

"We have presented to the Legislature and the people during the past three sessions important and far-reaching proposals, indicating the first steps to be taken along the line of progress. I shall not take space even to enumerate them all here. They deal with the settlement of New Ontario and the improvement of our educational and agricultural conditions; reform in land taxation; a department of labor; enlarging the opportunities of women to help us solve our problems, social legislation to improve the conditions of the workers; stopping the alienation of the public domain, and the extravagance and waste and expenditure of public money, and the curtailment of the liquor traffic."

With regard to the last named, the Liberal leader says the party's policy, would result as follows:

"Hotel liquor licenses. Every one wiped out. This means that liquor cannot be sold anywhere on the premises.

"Club liquor licenses. Every one wiped out.

"Treating system. Abolished.

"Shops would be further restricted and could be wiped out by local option on a majority vote.

"In nine-tenths of the municipalities, therefore, our policy means the complete abolition of the retail sale of liquor."

"I believe the conscience of Ontario is against the open bar," says Mr. Rowell in conclusion. "To that conscience I appeal with confidence. Every vote cast in this election is a vote for or against the bar. Which will yours be. We are fighting your fight. We ask every man and every woman to do their utmost from now until June 29; and if you do the open bar in Ontario will be forever wiped out.

TO RECOVER BODIES.

Divers Will Release Victims From Wreck of Empress.

RIMOUSKI June 9. — The first step towards recovering the 800, or more bodies lying imprisoned in the wrecked Empress of Ireland, was taken Sunday afternoon when a diver descended from the Canadian Government lighthouse tender Druid and for upwards of an hour investigated the accessible parts of the sunken liner. The Empress was found to be lying on her side in about 150 feet of water.

On board the Druid, besides several Government officials, were Capt. Walsh, marine superintendent of the C.P.R., and George Weatherspoon, wrecking expert, who has been engaged by the railway company to undertake the task of bringing the remainder of the victims of the disaster to the surface, several divers and embalmers. The last-named will carry out the work of preparing the bodies for burial immediately they are recovered.

Farmer Met Sudden Death.

CORNWALL, June 9.—Alexander Lauson of Williamstown was instantly killed at the G. T. R. crossing near Lancaster Sunday, by being struck by a westbound express. Lauson was watching a freight train and did not see the express approaching. His son-in-law was in the rig with him at the time, but was thrown out and escaped injury. The horse was not injured. Lauson was 41 years of age and leaves a widow, six daughters and two sons.

It's a poor major league team this year that hasn't at least two highest salaried players in the world.

THOMAS COFFEY PASSES.

Liberal Senator and Catholic Editor Was 71 Years of Age.

LONDON, Ont., June 9.—Senator Thomas Coffey died here last night at his home, 504 Wellington street. Heart disease was responsible for the death of the Senator, who had been confined to his bed for three weeks.

Senator Coffey, who was in his 72nd year, was well-known throughout the Dominion as the editor and proprietor of The Catholic Record of this city, which he founded in 1859 and conducted up to the last. He was born at Castle Connell, Limerick County, Ireland, coming to Canada with his parents when a child. He was educated in Montreal, and in this city, entering the newspaper business as a journeyman printer. The deceased had held high offices in the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, and was one of the stalwarts of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada. He was honored by Ottawa University with the degree of LL.D. in 1907, and was called to the Senate by Lord Minto, in 1908. His name had frequently been mentioned in connection with a Cabinet position under Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who was an intimate friend.

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.20 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p. m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library, Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origina gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.30 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fares are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

If you are contemplating making a trip ask Grand Trunk Agents for full particulars or write C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont. 14d-122-3w22

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

Perhaps she knew. She must have known. Her forlorn soul must have gaged his distress by the measure of her own sorrowful longing. But she had deceived Power so thoroughly that not for many a year did he even guess that her flight was undertaken solely on his account. And it was better so; for the story of their love might have been stained by a sordid tragedy, and Power, instead of going West that night, would have taken a special train to Newport with fixed intent to choke Willard's wretched life out of him. As it was, he crossed two-thirds of the great land which had given him vast wealth, and much tribulation, and little joy. At New York, and elsewhere en route, he received telegrams from his trusty friend at Bison. They were not reassuring; but they did, at least, contain one grain of comfort in the tidings that his mother still lived.

But therein MacGonigal allowed his heart to control his pen; for Mrs. Power breathed her last before her son had quitted New York, and it was to a town in mourning that Power returned. His mother had endeared herself to every soul in the place. The people looked on her as their guardian angel. They almost scowled on John Darien Power when the flying feet of his horse clattered along the main street in his haste to soothe the fretfulness of a woman who was already three days dead. Why did he leave her? they asked. Where had he hidden that the country should be scoured for him during the last week, and none could find him? He used to be a decent, outspoken sort of fellow, Derry Power; but wealth had spoiled him, as it seemed to spoil every man who secured it. Queer thing! Deponent thought that he, or she, would risk the experiment at the price.

Thus, light-hearted gossip, which talks in headlines, and reeks little of the subtler issues of life.

CHAPTER XII.

AFTER DARKNESS, LIGHT.

Death brings peace. Having accomplished its dread mission, it atones to the body from which the soul is snatched by smoothing away the lines of agony from the face; it seems even to relent for awhile, and restore to worn and aged features the semblance of long-vanished youth.

When Power looked at his dead mother, he saw her as she might have looked in placid sleep when he was a boy in San Francisco. But a discovery that is often soothing to those who are bereft of their nearest and dearest brought him no consolation. His stupor of grief and misery was denied the relief of tears. Rather did his brooding thought run to the other extreme. The mother he loved was at rest—why should he not join her? He believed, like many another man who has passed through the furnace of a soul-destroying passion, that he had drunk the flame-wreathed cup of life to the dregs. The fiery potion had swept through his veins and reduced him to ashes. He was no longer even the recluse of the Dolores Ranch, finding in books solace for a lost love, but the burnt-out husk of his former self. What was there left that he should wish to live? Why should he not end it all, and seek the kindly oblivion of the grave?

Ever stronger and more insistently did this idea take root in his mind, and some evil monitor seemed to bellow it at him when he stood next day in the cemetery, and saw the coffin lowered into the earth. The beautiful words of the burial service give sorely needed help to stricken hearts; but this man's ears were closed to their solemn promise.

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The minister's voice, hitherto broken and tremulous, for he held the dead woman in much esteem, and her loss was grievous to him, rang out with a new confidence when it declaimed that splendid passage; yet Power was conscious only of a desire to cry aloud in frenzied protest. Then that phase passed; the tumult died down; he shrank into a lethargy which was infinitely more dangerous than a state of wild revolt.

In that black mood he was watched unceasingly by faithful friends. MacGonigal and Jake were never far from his side. Though he did not know of, and would have angrily resented, their quiet guardianship, he could not have taken his own life just then, and the time was yet far distant when he would ask himself in wonder and thankfulness how he had escaped death by his own hand during the first dreary hours following his return to Bison.

But there were other influences at work, and one of these made its presence felt speedily. After the funeral he was sitting alone in the room which he had converted into a library. His unseeing eyes were fixed on the smiling landscape into which irrigation had converted the once arid ranch. A troop of brood mares, with foals at heel, were emulating mankind by neglecting the lush pastures at their feet and craning their graceful necks over a palisade to nibble the thorn hedge it protected. This double barrier shut off the lawn and garden from the meadow lands. Here and there the green of apple orchards, planted with artistic regard to open vistas, was already flecked with golden fruit. Soon the reapers would be busy on the sections where maize and oats and wheat were ripening. The lowing of cattle announced that milking-time was near; for, among her other activities, Mrs. Power had established a model dairy, and it was her gentle boast that she had made it pay; thus bringing out in the mother the money-coining instincts which the son had developed so unexpectedly.

Such a scene might well lull the beholder to rest; but Power was blind to its charms. He was reviewing, in an aimless way, the associations which that very apartment held for him. Changed though it was out of all semblance to the poverty-stricken living-room of the ranch, Nancy's spirit had never been wholly exercised. He pictured her slim and lissome figure as she had stood with him at the window many an evening, and watched the purple shadows stealing over the hills. In that room she had married Marten. From a bamboo stand near one of the windows she had taken the spray of white heather, which formed her wedding bouquet. Why had she never mentioned it to him? Or were the last five weeks nothing but some disordered vision of the imagination, a delusion akin to those grimpses of palm-laden oases and dashing waters which come to thirst-maddened wanderers in deserts?

But another shadow interrened. His mother, in turn, had loved the gorgeous sunsets of Colorado; she, too, was wont to gaze at the far-flung panorama which once delighted Nancy's eyes. And she, alas! had become a dream which would never again wake into reality. At that moment the relief of tears was imminent—and tears are intolerable to a strong man. He sprang upright in a spasm of pain, and bitter words escaped him brokenly.

The movement, no less than the few disconnected sentences, seemed to arouse Jake, who happened to be lounging against one of the pillars of the veranda—out of sight, perhaps, but certainly not out of hearing.

"Would yer keer ter hev an easy stroll around, Mistah Power?" he said instantly.

"No, thanks—why are you waiting there? Do you want to speak to me?"

This questioning might bear interpretation as the outburst of one who resented the overseer's presence; but Jake was ready with the soft answer which turneth away wrath:

"No, sir. Not exactly, that is. I was jest waitin' fur Mac. He allowed he'd be back about this time. Gosh! Here he is, crossin' the divide, an' totin' along some tony galoot I hain't seen afore."

"Tell MacGonigal, and every other person in the place, that I am not to be disturbed."

Power withdrew from the French window, and Jake nodded to the group of horses.

"You're feelin' pretty bad. I guess," he said to himself. "But thar ain't a gun in the outfit outside my locked grip, an' you can't find enough rope ter hang a cat, an' the only pison in the ranch is on a sideboard, an' a skinful of that would do you good, an' thar yer son of a gun can stand a lot o' blank looks from you, Derry."

He heard Power sink into a chair on the inner side of the room, and sheer curiosity led him to steal along the veranda to the porch, where MacGonigal and a stranger were alighting from a two-wheeled buggy.

"Derry's jest tole me ter quit," he said in a stage whisper, jerking his left hand, as though it still possessed a thumb, in the direction of the library.

The newcomer, a tall, well-built man of middle age, smiled involuntarily at the queer gesture. As it happened, he had never before seen a veritable cowboy outside the bounds of one or other of the American circuses shows which visit Europe occasionally, and Jake had donned his costliest rig for the funeral.

"Shall I find Mr. Power in that room with the open window?" he inquired.

"Yes, sir," said Jake.

"I think he will be glad to see me," said the unknown, and, without further comment, he ran up the steps and entered the veranda. The two men watched him in silence. They saw him halt in front of the window, and heard him say, "Power, may I come in?" They heard the scraping of a chair on the parquet floor as it was thrust aside; then the stranger vanished.

"Who's the dook?" demanded Jake, vastly surprised by the turn of events.

"Friend o' Derry's," said MacGonigal, sotto voce. "He wired me from Newport, an' his messages struck me as comin' from a white man; so I gev' him the \fax, an' the nex' thing I hear is that he's on the rail, but I'm to keep mum, as he thought it 'ud help Derry some if he kem on him suddint. An' here he is."

During a full minute neither man spoke. At last, Jake, who appeared to have something on his mind, brought it out.

"Thar was a piece 'bout Derry and Mrs. Marten in the Rocky Mountain News a week sence," he began.

"Thar was," agreed MacGonigal, who looked vastly uncomfortable in a suit of heavy black cloth.

"Not anything ter make a song of," went on Jake. "An ordinary kind o' yarn, 'bout a point-ter-point steeplechase, whatever that sort o' flam may be, an' Bison won, in course."

"Just so," said the other.

"Guess you spotted it, too?"

"Guess I did."

"Marten's in Baku. Whar's Baku?"

"I don't know, but it's a damn long way from Newport, anyhow, or Derry an' Nancy wouldn't be cavorting round together on plugs from one p'int to any other p'int."

"You an' me sized up that proposition same like."

"We're a slick pair," grunted MacGonigal sarcastically.

"That's as may be—I've heerd folk say wuss ner that 'bout you," said Jake. "But what I want ter know is this: S'pose some other low-down cuss gits busy, and stirs his grey matter thinkin' hard on things he saw in the newspaper, what's ter be done?"

MacGonigal brought his big red face very near Jake's olive-skinned one. "If he's on the ranch, bounce him; if he's in Bison, let me know," he growled.

Meanwhile, the man whose interests they were planning to safeguard had looked up in anger when a shadow darkened the open window; but he started to his feet in sheer amazement when he saw Dacre and heard his voice.

"You?" he cried. "How in God's name did you get here?"

"You were in trouble, Power, and I count it a poor friendship that shirks a few days' journey when a chum is in distress."

Their hands met, and Power's white face showed a wave of colour. He was deeply stirred. For the moment he was an ordinary man, and subject to ordinary emotions.

"I had better be outspoken," continued Dacre. "I got in touch with Mr. MacGonigal, and he informed me of your mother's death; so I have hurried across America to be with you. Being rather afraid you might stop me en route, I requested MacGonigal not to tell you I was coming."

"But I regard your action as a most kindly one."

"Yes, now that I am here. For all that, old man, you might have wired very emphatic instructions on the point to Omaha yesterday."

"My dear fellow, you find me in a house of mourning. Won't you sit down? You must be tired. Can I get you anything?"

"My bones are stiff for want of exercise — that is all. Now, if you want to be a perfect host, have my traps sent to my room. Don't say you haven't a spare bedroom! . . Good! I'll just open a bag, and get some tea—of course, you can't possibly produce any decent tea — and your cook will boil a kettle, and after we have refreshed on the beverage that cheers while it does not inebriate, you will take me for a walk around this delightful ranch of yours. You see, I don't mean to let you mope here by yourself. That is the last thing the dear lady who has been taken from you would wish. You will regard me as a beastly nuisance, but that cannot be helped."

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the deranged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Charles Teel, Horncastle, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.

Price, 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Wise Mexican Mules.

"The mule in Mexico is a wise animal," says a man who has studied the animal in that country. "A Mexican mule will do just so much work and not a bit more. The riding mule, for instance, is fully aware of the distance, down to a rod, he is supposed and required to traverse in the progress of one traveling day, and all the sharp sticks or goads or dynamite on earth won't get him to do a bit more than what he knows to be the correct distance. The Mexicans have got a peculiar saying in connection with this characteristic of the Mexican mule. You ask a Mexican how far it is by muleback to such and such a point.

"'Two days' journey if you are rushed, but three days if you are in a hurry,' the Mexican will reply.

"His meaning is that if you don't ask more of your mule than you should ask of him the mule will be able to make the trip in two days. But if you attempt to drive the brute he'll soldier on you, and in consequence the journey will take you three days."

Cairo's Corkscrew Tower.

Writing of the ancient mosque of Ibn-Tulun, Cairo, John A. Todd in "The Banks of the Nile" shows how accidental was the design of its odd looking tower. Ahmed Ibn-Tulun was one day holding a council of state when he allowed his attention to wander and sat idly twiddling a piece of paper between his fingers, shaping it into a whorl. Suddenly he realized that the councilors were waiting for his decision to a question. But what question?

At his wits' end to avoid confession of such discourtesy, he continued in silence to twiddle the whorl of paper. Suddenly he spoke: "Call my architect," for the plans of his new mosque were under consideration. The Court appeared in fear and trembling no doubt. "You see this paper. Make me a tower for my mosque like that." The situation was saved, and the shape of the tower, with its corkscrew outside stair, is there to this day to confirm the story.

The Deceased Wife's Sister.

The law against marrying a deceased wife's sister, which caused so much discussion in England at one time, grew out of an ancient tribal law forbidding a father to sell more than one daughter to the same man when the Briton was emerging from polygamy and when for just 21 shillings of the present money a man might dismiss his wife or kill her if she would not go. As civil law it was to protect the living wife and knit tribes closer together by intermarriage. When ecclesiastical law became supreme a misrending of some scripture text was used to put the sister of a man's wife among the prohibited degrees of relationship. This was the act of 1541 (32 Henry VIII.): "A man may not marry his deceased wife's sister or her daughter, but he may marry his first cousin."—London Standard.

FIRST ELECTRIC LIGHT

MODERN WONDER WAS THE INVENTION OF SIR JOS. SWAN.

Aged Scientist, Who Is Still Living in England at the Age of 86 Years, Has Given the World Many Remarkable Devices Which Have Revolutionized Life—Was Knighted by King Edward.

So accustomed are we to electric lighting, and to photography as a household assessment, that it is almost with a shock that we learn that the inventor of both is still alive and vigorous.

Sir Joseph Swan, one of the world's greatest scientists, never possessed the art of getting his name prominently before the public.

Not that he has not had his share of the world's honors. In a synopsis of his life's doings, which appeared in the London Graphic, the scientific acknowledgments of his ability are set down as follows:

In 1881 he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. The Royal Society elected him a Fellow in 1894; he was president of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, 1898-99, and of the Society of Chemical Industry for 1900 and 1901. Knighted in 1904, on the occasion of the birthday of King Edward VII., in the same year Sir Joseph was awarded the Royal Society's "Hughes" gold medal for his invention of the electric incandescent lamp, and other contributions to the practical applications of electricity. He received the "Albert" medal of the Royal Society of Arts in 1906.

Born at Sunderland on October 31, 1828, Sir Joseph Swan is now in his 86th year. He had early shown a liking for mechanics and chemistry, while a portion of his time was devoted to electrical experiments, in particular the means of producing electric light by the principle of incandescence. He derived special impetus from the trials of William E. Stralte, who, from 1845-53, was working assiduously at electric lighting problems. The invention of the mercurial air-pump, by Hermann Sprengel, in 1865, for the production of a vacuum of high tenuity was the immediate ladder to success. In the hands of Bunsen, Graham, and Crookes, the apparatus opened up departments of physical research of supreme interest; in those of Swan (and of Edison) an era in regard to the incandescent light. By 1878, Swan, and a co-helper, Mr. C. H. Stearn, after numberless experiments established the result that when a well-formed carbon filament is firmly connected with conducting wires, and placed in a hermetically sealed glass ball, perfectly exhausted, the filament suffers no apparent change, even when heated to an extreme degree of whiteness. A lamp embodying this new mode was exhibited by Mr. Swan at a lecture in Newcastle in 1879.

In November, 1880, Swan, says The Graphic, read a paper before the Society of Telegraph Engineers, Mr. (afterwards Sir William) Preece in the chair, on the "Sub-Division of the Electric Light." "Supposing, said the author, "the practical difficulties can be overcome, my method assumes a position of importance in view of the (present) extremely limited range of application of lighting by electricity." He described an experiment, tried 20 years earlier, involving the use of spirals of carbon specially prepared, obtained from pieces of paper and card. A little arch of the material was placed in a vacuum, and a current was sent through. The arch became red-hot! The augaries were good for a brilliant light. When the face of matters was altered, through the advent of the Sprengel air-pump, mentioned above, renewed attempts solved the problem of electric lighting by the incandescence of thin filaments of carbon. At the meeting there were shown to a delighted audience, among whom was Prof. John Tyndall, vacuum lamps bearing a fine carbon wire in a state of brilliant incandescence. Mr. Preece said: "We have passed through the various stages of electric lighting, from the first flickering, whizzing, noisy, erratic and troublesome lamp till we have this beautiful, steady light, which is now before us—one of Mr. Swan's latest achievements."

Sir Joseph Swan was manufacturing collodion for photography as far back as 1861.

In 1864 he perfected his "Carbon Process," or "Autotype," the "first commercially, practicable process for making a permanent print." In the '70's, he patented "a highly sensitive or rapid photographic plate, the outcome of an original observation of the effect of heat on emulsions of gelatino-bromide of silver. This revolution brought photography into thousands of homes as a recreation, whilst it enormously increased the means of scientific investigation in the laboratory."

GIN PILLS SAVED HIM

513 James St., Hamilton, Ont.

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of The Bladder—intense pains in back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me." John Herman. 178

GIN PILLS are sold at 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price if your dealer does not handle them. Sample box free if you write us, mentioning this paper. Money back, if GIN PILLS do not give satisfaction. National Drug & Chem. Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

Why Naval Uniforms Are Blue.

Naval uniforms all the world over pretty well are navy blue. The British fashion in this matter has been the rule with maritime people in general. That blue was ever selected for the king's naval service was a fortuitous happening. When in 1747 the question of uniform was being considered the color selected had very like to have been French gray laced with silver. While the king was still not quite decided he saw the Duchess of Bedford in a riding habit of blue faced with white and enlivened with gold lace. It was a revelation. Here, the king declared, was the uniform for his sea service officers, and no more was heard of French gray. The navy took to blue, and every other navy has taken to it since.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Old Tavern Going.

London is to lose its only Dog and Partridge Tavern, which, at Bow, preserved a reminder of more rural days. But London has still, at Rotherhithe, a link with an old-time sport in the Dog and Duck. That was, humanitarians will agree, a cruel sport that set the swimming spaniel against the diving duck. But it was, 100 years ago, a fashionable pastime, along with cock-fighting and prize-fighting. There was a Dog and Duck in Mayfair once; there was another in St. George's Fields, which, in consequence of the natu reof the company who frequented it, was at length put an end to by magisterial enactment. The ducks were not sorry!—London Chronicle.

Lord Mayor's Privilege.

Exercising an ancient privilege, the Lord Mayor and Corporation of Dublin appeared at the Bar of the House of Commons the other day to present a petition against the abandonment of Queenstown as a port of call by the Cunard mail steamers. The Lord Mayor, wearing his robes, and attended by his officers, entered the precincts of the House, and, being observed by the Speaker, was challenged by him thus: "My Lord Mayor of Dublin, what have you there?" The Lord Mayor answered by reciting the prayer of the petition.

Tearing Cards.

At the Halterophile club in Paris not long ago a man achieved a record by tearing a pack of playing cards in one pull—time, 2 minutes 32 seconds. The events in this card tearing contest were:

Tearing the greatest possible number of cards tied together top and bottom—time allowance, three minutes; tearing a pack of eighty cards in the quickest possible time; tearing the greatest possible number of cards in four.

This is a form of "sport" wherein many Frenchmen specialize. The men who enter the contests are not necessarily powerful, but they possess enormous strength in their fingers, a strength that is further developed by careful training.

A Nice Point.

None of the maids of honor to the queen of England is allowed to keep a diary. A young lady who did not know of this rule was congratulating a newly made maid of honor.

"And what interesting things you'll be able to write in your diary!" she said.

"But it is an understood thing that a maid of honor does not keep a diary," the other pointed out.

"But I think I should keep one all the same," said her friend.

"Then you wouldn't be a maid of honor!" was the retort.—London Answers.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

A Madhouse Doctor's Experience With His Crazy Cooks.

A celebrated Scotch physician tells a story of a madhouse doctor whose presence of mind alone saved his life:

"A great friend of mine was for a considerable time the medical superintendent of a lunatic asylum near Glasgow.

"One night in making his customary rounds he had occasion to visit the patients in the kitchen, who were preparing the dinner. There were seven of them, all big, sturdy fellows, who were believed to be harmless. The keeper only looked in upon them now and again, feeling that his constant presence was unnecessary.

"The doctor unlocked the iron barred door of the kitchen and went in among the lunatics.

"There were five large boilers containing scalding water ready for making the day's dinner for the patients.

"One of the lunatics pointed at the boilers full of hot water and, laying his hand upon the doctor's shoulder, said, 'Doctor, you'll make a fine pot of broth.' And the words had no sooner been uttered than the other six madmen shouted in a voice of delight, 'Just the thing,' and, seizing the doctor, were in the very act of putting him into one of the large boilers of scalding water when the doctor had the presence of mind to say:

"'Capital broth! But it would taste better if I took my clothes off.'

"The madmen, with a yell of delight, said 'Yes,' and the doctor asked them to wait a moment while he went and took his clothes off. But as soon as he got out of the kitchen he turned the key in the door and ordered the keeper to me to the lunatics being put under restraint.

"The doctor's presence of mind saved him. It is true, from a terrible death, but he died shortly after raving mad. The experience had destroyed his reason."

Had Nervous Dyspepsia

With Frequent Sick Headaches and Much Pain After Eating — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

This letter is from a lady who gained 14 pounds by using the great food cure. It did wonders for her in improving her general health. She is enthusiastic in its praise, and refers to her neighbours as witnesses of the splendid results obtained.

Mrs. Susan oDbson, Spring Hill Mines, N. S., writes:—"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and could not eat without suffering much pain; also had sick headaches frequently, and my nerves were in bad condition. About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 26 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. I gained 14 pounds in weight, and feel sure I owe everything to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You may use this letter, and my neighbours can tell you of my condition before using this treatment."

The Rosetta Stone.

The Rosetta Stone, now in the British Museum, is a stone discovered in 1799 by M. Boussard, a French officer of engineers during the French occupation of Egypt under Napoleon, in an excavation at Fort St. Julien, near the city of Rosetta. It is a piece of black basalt, 3 feet 7 inches in length and 2 feet 6 inches in width, and contains part of three distinct inscriptions; the first or highest in hieroglyphics, the second in enchorial or demotic characters, and the third in Greek. The Greek text, when translated, showed that the inscription was an ordinance of the priests decreeing certain honors to Ptolemy Epiphanes on the occasion of his coronation, 196 B.C. It contained a command that the decree should be inscribed in the sacred letters (hieroglyphics), the letters of the country (demotic), and Greek letters—this for the convenience of the mixed population of Egypt under its Greek rulers.

CLOVE APPLES.

Spicy Odored Ornaments That Were Once Quite Common.

The manufacture of clove apples, common in the days of our grandmothers, is very simple. You can take an apple, the rounder and sounder and bigger the better, and into it stick cloves as thickly as possible, with only the heads showing and forming a close continuous surface all over. Put it in a drawer or on a mantelpiece or whatnot, and time will do the rest.

The clove apple becomes dry and curiously hard, maintains its form perfectly and acquires an approximation of immortality—if carefully protected, of course, from accidents and children. The latter, if memory serves, were wont to annoy the grandmothers of clove apple days by decapitating the cloves or, if especially mischievous, by working at one of them till it came out whole. Either achievement, when discovered, as it always was soon, caused indignant oratory always and "wrong stories" not infrequently.

The exact purpose of the clove apple, whether it was valued as a curio or as the source of a pleasant, spicy odor, the present commentator does not remember, if he ever knew. In value, however, it ranked well up with the shells brought from foreign strands by seafaring husbands and sons, and both were about equally durable.—New York Times.

A Busy Man.

A customer of a large downtown tailoring establishment was getting service out of a suit of clothes he had not paid for. Statement after statement was sent to the customer and finally a letter informing the man that unless he paid his bill the matter would be put in the hands of the company's attorney. That awakened the customer. He hastened to the store and demanded to see the head of the company. He asserted the only reason for not paying the bill was that he had been so busy with other affairs that he had overlooked his debt to the tailoring company.

"Why, see here," he emphatically told the president of the company, "just to show you how busy I have been I brought this telegram along. I got that telegram day before yesterday, but I haven't had time to open it yet."—Minneapolis News.

TALKING AT DINNER.

A Chinese Suggestion That One Person Should Do It All.

As a rule, a dinner conversation is seldom worth remembering, which is a pity. Man, the most sensible of all animals, more readily leans to nonsense than to rational discourse. Perhaps the flow of words may be as steady as the eastward flow of the Yangtzekiang in my own country, but the memory remains only a recollection of a rogue, undefined—what? The conversation, like the flavors provided by the cooks, has been evanescent.

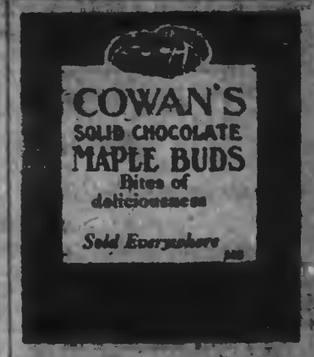
Why should not hostesses make as much effort to stimulate the minds of their guests as they do to gratify their palates? What a boon it would be to many a bashful man sitting next to a woman with whom he has nothing in common if some public entertainer during the dinner relieved him from the necessity of always thinking as to what he should say next! How much more he could enjoy the fine dinners his hostess has provided—and as for the woman, what a number of suppressed yawns she might avoid!

To take great pains and spend large sums to provide tasty food for people who cannot enjoy it because they have to talk to one another seems a pity. Let one man talk to the crowd and leave them leisure to eat is my suggestion.—Wu Ting Fang, Late Chinese Minister to United States, in Harper's Monthly.

Domitian Swatted Flies.

The original "swat the fly" man was Domitian, Roman emperor from 81 to 96 A. D. History records little good of Domitian, but it does say that he anticipated the anti-fly movement by more than 1,800 years. Maltreating the buzzing pests was his favorite amusement, it is recorded, but he was not animated by a desire to save babies' lives or avert epidemics.

One biographer says of the old Roman that "one of his favorite pastimes was hunting and killing flies," and Suetonius, the famous historian, wrote thus of Domitian: "In the beginning of his reign he used to spend daily an hour by himself in private, during which time he did nothing else but catch flies and stick them through the body with a sharp pin."—New York Tribune.



Conscience.

Ever present and operant is that which never becomes a party in one's guilt, conceives never an evil thought, consents never to an unrighteous deed, never sins, but holds itself impeccable, immutable, personally holy—the conscience—counselor, comforter, judge and executor of the spirit's decrees. None can flee from the spirit's presence nor hide from himself. The reserved powers are the mighty ones. Side by side sleep the whispering sisters and the Eumenides. Nor is conscience appeased till the sentence is pronounced. There is an oracle in the breast, an unsleeping police, and ever the court sits, dealing doom or deliverance. Our sole inheritance is our deeds. While remorse stirs the sinner there remains hope of his redemption.—Alcott.

HAZING IN GERMAN ARMY ❋ PARNELL'S LOVE AFFAIRS ❋ HEROINE

LOVE STORY OF PARNELL, FAMOUS IRISH LEADER

Book Written by His Widow, Katherine O'Shea, Gives Interesting Romance and Personal Disclosures Which Have All London Talking

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

Of the several great political romances of the latter part of the nineteenth century there was none that gripped the British people like the love story of Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish leader. For nearly a quarter of a century this romance, intrigue, or tragedy—for it is any or all of these according to the individual view of the observer or reader of history—has been more or less of an enigma. But the enigma is now solved by the publication of "Charles Stewart Parnell, His Love Story and Political Life," written by his widow, Katherine O'Shea.

The story which aroused such violent passions in the '80's stands forth in this book, nakedly revealed to the uttermost detail. After having read it most people will find it difficult to decide into which category the story falls—whether it is the romance of a great man who sacrificed everything for the love of a woman, an extraordinary intrigue in which politics and love were strangely mingled, or a tragedy of thwarted political ambitions. In any case, it is the history of a very remarkable couple, whose lives were closely interwoven with the stormy events of the beginning of the fight for home rule.

Of the political side of the book the greater part is well known history, illuminated by a flood of sidelight upon the negotiations between Parnell and Gladstone, which were carried on clandestinely by Mrs. O'Shea, who acted as go-between, and upon the intriguing for place and power which went on behind the political scenes. Of Parnell's leadership of the Irish party, his organization of the Land League, his imprisonment in Kilmainham Goal for six months, the Pigott letters, the Parnell commission, the libel action, and the suicide of Pigott—all these incidents are dealt with in the book, but its chief interest lies in the love story of Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea, as told, and most graphically told, by the latter.

How did it come about that a woman of more than thirty, married for thirteen years to a man of good family, with three charming children, well connected herself and possessing influencial friends, should fall under the influence of the ambitious, brilliant and apparently austere politician, and that the two should become so much to each other that the one deceived her husband and children for eleven years, while the other risked his reputation, his future and the fate of the country for which he had fought so long rather than dishonor (the italics)?

It was unquestionably a case of love at first sight. Mrs. O'Shea met Parnell for the first time at the House of Commons, whither she went to invite him to dinner:—

"In leaning forward in the cab to say goodby a rose I was wearing in my bodice fell out on to my skirt. He picked it up, and, touching it lightly with his lips, placed it in his buttonhole. This rose I found long years afterward done up in an envelope, with my name and the date, among his most private papers, and when he died I laid it upon his heart."

Parnell was then thirty-four, so that this was not a piece of boyish love dreaming. Three months later he was writing to her, "My own love." Even two months afterward, although addressing her as "My dear Mrs. O'Shea," he was telling her that he could not keep away from her any longer.

They met frequently, one of their favorite means of enjoying each other's society being to take long rides in hansom cabs. Almost from the very first Parnell made Mrs. O'Shea's house at Eltham his home, staying there whenever Captain O'Shea was away. On one occasion in the first year of their friendship Mrs. O'Shea hid him for a fortnight in a little boudoir leading out of her own room:—

"None of the servants knew he was there and I took all his food up at night, cooking little dainty dishes for him at the open fire, much to his pleasure and amusement."

Mrs. O'Shea took charge of all his papers. There were two which, fearing arrest, he could not carry on him. For these he had a hollow gold bracelet made, and after inserting the papers he screwed it on her arm, where it remained for three years. The ruses and subterfuges to which they resorted to keep their intimacy secret would provide material for half a dozen romantic novels. Either alone or with her, Parnell drove down to Eltham in a cab from the House of Commons nearly every night. She would often meet him at railway stations, waiting sometimes for hours on bleak platforms or in dismal waiting rooms. Before starting for Eltham they often had "coffee" at one of the night stalls. Scores of letters were exchanged between them, many intended to be shown to others and couched in formal language. Every night when he was not staying at her house he telegraphed her "good night."

In July, 1881, Captain O'Shea had suspicions about their relations and threatened to shoot Parnell. But a peace was patched up, and from this date, says Mrs. O'Shea, "Parnell and I were one, without further scruple, without fear, and without remorse." But in the same chapter she says:—

"I had fought against our love; but Parnell would not fight, and I was alone. I had urged my children and his work, but he answered me:—'For good or ill, I am your husband, your lover, your children, your all. And I will give my life to Ireland, but to you I give my love, whether it be your heaven or your hell. It is destiny. When I first looked into your eyes I knew.'

"Never once in all these years," she adds, did he fail me or leave the place of appointment before I came, even though it might mean the loss of the mail train to Ireland, and leaving some thousands of people waiting in vain for the speech he was too far away to make."

Great Newspaper War Is On in London

LORD NORTHCLIFFE — LORD BURNHAM

LORD NORTHCLIFFE SITTING IN ADORATION BEFORE LORD BURNHAM

LONDON newspaperdom is hypnotized by the great war now on between the dual alliance of the Times and the Daily Mail on one side and the Daily Telegraph on the other.

The Times began it. That fact is incontrovertible. Still, it was rather a surprise to find the Times turning its guns on the Daily Telegraph and scouting the Telegraph's circulation statements.

Only a few months ago Lord Northcliffe was the central figure in a great complimentary movement to honor Lord Burnham, the proprietor of the Daily Telegraph. Lord Northcliffe made speeches laudatory of Lord Burnham's beneficent influence on British journalism, and it was impossible to open an illustrated newspaper without finding a photograph of Lord Northcliffe sitting in adoration before Lord Burnham, the Nestor of the British press, while Lord Northcliffe's publications, among them the Times and the Daily Mail, vied with each other in placing the Daily Telegraph on a pedestal.

Now the same publications are vying with each other to knock the pedestal from under the Daily Telegraph and are scolding the Telegraph for what they call "its erroneous and grotesque statements and its evasive tactics regarding its circulation" and generally showing a violent hostility.

The change in Lord Northcliffe's attitude toward the Daily Telegraph is so complete that London is watching the great fight with breathless interest.

EMPEROR TAKES A HAND TO STOP HAZING OF RECRUITS

Severe Punishment Meted Out to Men Who Practise Cruelties on Young Soldiers, and Situation Is Regarded as Grave.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, June 6.

THE question of cruelty to recruits in the German army is once more engaging public attention. Both the recent speech in the Reichstag of the Minister of War, General Falkenhayn, and a trial on appeal of a couple of cuirassier guards at Potsdam have brought the matter potently to notice again. General Falkenhayn adopted the usual attitude of the Prussian Minister of War in speaking out that cases of cruelty were less grave and less frequent than generally alleged, but later in the speech he surprised his hearers by announcing that the Emperor had once more intervened in person in hopes of abating these disagreeable affairs.

In his annual (confidential) address to commanding generals, too, he made a very pressing appeal for sterner measures of suppression. It was a strange coincidence that a few days before there had been a serious incident, involving a protest to the Imperial Government from the French Ambassador, arising from the German campaign against the French Foreign Legion, and that, a few days later, there should be an appeal by the prosecuting counsel against two otherwise rather sharp sentences against a couple of cuirassier guards. This case had been by no means particularly severe. The two men had come back to the barracks late at night under the influence of liquor. They had then routed the younger recruits out of their beds, and had made them stand, sleepy and shivering, on the tops of their cupboards and there sing comic songs. Some had been rather roughly knocked about with the flat of the sabres. One, indeed, was wounded on the shoulder and cut in the face. Though intoxicated, the two accused were well able to distinguish between the rooms occupied by the seniors and those occupied by the new recruits.

The prosecutor, indeed, made a point of this, and at the first trial the chief culprit was sentenced to two months and his assistant to four weeks' imprisonment. But the prosecution did not consider this exemplary enough. At the trial on appeal sentences of as much as six months and eleven weeks were asked for by the prosecuting counsel. Surprise would have been universal had such sentences been passed, even though the general opinion is that the prosecutor was quite right in saying that unless examples are made it is like tilting at the windmills to attempt to put an end to exaggerated "ragging" of young recruits. The court actually did increase the sentences.

Public opinion is curious to know whether this case is to establish a precedent. For the matter of cruelty to soldiers is a grave one in many ways. In the recent debate in the Reichstag on the military estimates a socialist member stated that the number of suicides in the army between 1890 and 1899 was 10,403, and that in the same period there had been 2,338 unsuccessful attempts to commit suicide. General Falkenhayn did not refute these figures, but argued that since they amounted to only .46 per thousand among the military element, and the figure for civilians between 20 and 25 and 30 per thousand, they did not bear the very grave interpretation that was placed upon them.

But be this as it may, it is admitted by all who look into the matter that the severity and cruelty of non-commissioned officers, and, as in this case, of older recruits, are the most important factor in providing about a couple of thousand suicides for service under the tri-color in the Foreign Legion. And if General Falkenhayn, by taking up a strong position against cruel treatment and by mildly disowning some of the more discreditable methods employed for provoking German national feeling against the Foreign Legion, has these couple of thousand men in view he can count on making some real progress. He may help, at least, in producing a more objective attitude toward the question. And this alone would be an appreciable gain for the peaceful councils of Europe.

A very tempestuous and unscrupulous campaign has recently been carried on in Germany, which logically amounts to interference in the internal affairs of another country. Indeed, the campaign has gone so far that few can believe that the Foreign Legion is not the only organization of its kind in the world, and that it is not almost exclusively constituted of Germans, whereas reliable information shows that Holland has also such a foreign contingent (and even proposes to enlarge it), that Italy and Spain are considering the formation of similar bodies, and that, all in all, the German element in the Foreign Legion is scarcely more than 15 per cent of the whole.

AMERICAN DANCERS BRING MANY NOVELTIES TO PARIS

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, June 6.

THE invasion of Paris by American dancers is becoming evident, and soon the American hesitation waltz and the one-step will be danced as they were never danced in Paris before.

In addition to the dances of the "Fin-de-Semaine" Club, which are taking place at the Hotel Majestic, another American dancing scheme is being set forth in Paris, already more than in its embryo at present, it is promising to fulfill the demand for more American dancing.

Mrs. R. W. Hawkesworth, of New York, arrived a few weeks ago with her daughter Margaret and Mr. Basil Durant. Miss Hawkesworth and Mr. Durant have been the fashionable exponents of dancing in New York, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond, Newport and other eastern cities for the last year.

Mrs. Hawkesworth is a well known figure in New York and Newport society and in the dancing world in general. While it is her daughter who does the dancing, it is under Mrs. Hawkesworth's management that so many balls have been arranged with such success that they have become talked of the world over. It is Mrs. Hawkesworth who furnishes the novelties for the balls given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish in Newport every years and for Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James' entertainments.

Among the entertainments Mrs. Hawkesworth has arranged are:—The Blue Garden fete of last summer, the Mother Goose ball and the Italian dinner given by Mrs. A. T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia. She was also responsible for the "thés dansants" at the Plaza Hotel and the McAlpin Hotel, in New York.

Mrs. Hawkesworth told your correspondent she had learned that Paris had taken up the hesitation waltz only this season and was "mad" about it. As she wanted to come to Europe to search for novelties for her Newport entertainments for this season, especially for Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish's Flower ball, for which she had already engaged, she decided to join the forces of those endeavoring to answer the call for American dances in Paris.

Mrs. Hawkesworth said:—"I have been in Paris scarcely a fortnight, and can already see that there is a tremendous field for our dancing. I have cabled for my band of negroes, and they are now on the ocean, and we expect to give Paris some ragtime rag time as it has never had before. Of course, there are negroes and negroes, but there is only one 'Europe,' and 'Europe' and his ragtime orchestra will arrive in Paris next week. 'Europe' is the negro who is described in New York as 'the man who put time into ragtime.'"

COUNTESS AS GARDEN EXPERT.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

THE Countess of Warwick, who is an enthusiastic amateur gardener, has decided to practise garden planning professionally. Some French friends asked her recently to plan certain Mediterranean gardens, and, delighted with the results, urged her to take up the work in earnest.

She has selected a staff of women assistants from Studley Castle, in Warwickshire, the college for women gardeners that she established some years ago. Women will be employed exclusively on the work, and everything, from the earliest plan to the last piece of planting, will be done under the direction of Lady Warwick.

The Countess' gardens at Easton Lodge, near Dunmow, are among the most beautiful in the world.

A MODERN ST. FRANCIS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

"I AM meeting personal poverty and the simplest kind of life, and also an unorganized and irregular form of preaching—a kind of wayside sowing of the seed."

This is an extract from a letter written to his congregation by the Rev. E. W. Lewis, pastor of the King's Weigh House Church, in announcing his resignation of the pastorate, which is worth $5,000 a year.

The letter was written from Assisi, associated with St. Francis, who also was a preacher who sought poverty. In his letter, which is printed in the "Christian Commonwealth," Mr. Lewis said also:—

"I have often asked myself at the close of a Sunday whether I myself were prepared to do what in my sermon I had been urging you to do. • • •

"I have felt for some time the incongruity between the position of being a man of God and the position of being a comparatively highly salaried, comfortably conditioned official in organized religion."

MORGANATIC MARRIAGE OF PRINCE OSCAR MAY BE OF BENEFIT TO DUCHESS OF CROY

Berlin Believes That Now That the Kaiser and Kaiserin Have Smiled Upon the Love Match of Their Son the House of Croy May Do Likewise in the Case of Their Son, Who Wedded the American Miss Nancy Leishman.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, June 6.

OF the current subjects of conversation for the week the first was rain. It has poured for about four days, overcoats are the order of the day, the weather being unseasonably cold and chilly. The second topic that ever [illegible] in society talks of is the coming morganatic marriage of the fifth son of the Kaiser, Prince Oscar, to the beautiful and highly intelligent Countess Ina von Lassewitz. She is tall and slight, with auburn hair and soft brown eyes. She is a fine horsewoman and a highly skilled musician. Far from opposing the marriage, the Kaiser and Kaiserin, especially the latter, are much favor it, as both believe in their children marrying for love; and as Prince Oscar's choice is essentially of that order his way is easy, naturally.

Now that there is to be a morganatic marriage in [illegible] it is thought those interested that it will have the effect upon the Croy marriage, and that the example of the Kaiser and Kaiserin will be followed by those of the Croy family who are so opposed to a recognition of the once Miss Leishman as the Duchess of Croy.

In the theatrical world a great fuss has been made over the anniversary of Rosa Poppe's twenty-fifth year as the Royal Prussian court actress.

I hear that she has made up her mind to make a tour of America, beginning next January. This has long been her wish, but Count Hulsen Haeseler, the intendent of the Royal Theatre, would not agree. However, at last she has been granted a six months' holiday, and Frau Poppe will give to the new world her rendering of "Mary Stuart," by Schiller; Goethe's "Iphigenia," Medea's "Sappho," by Grill Parzer, and "Brunehilde and the Nibelungen," by Hebbel. She is conversant with English and will play in that language.

The tide of Americans is well on its way to Berlin, and already the steamships have brought goodly loads, filling the hotels. This incoming of Americans is a perfect godsend to Berlin, for it occurs just at the moment when the German element leaves the hotels empty during June.

Last season—to give an idea of this movement—more than six thousand Americans registered at the hotels here, and each year their number largely increases.

Major Langhorne and Captain Gherardi have been appointed delegates from the United States to the International Congress for the Olympic Games, to be held in Paris this month.

Before going to Paris Major Langhorne expects to attend the military contests in Berlin by imperial command at the Grunewald Stadium.

WOMEN AS DENTISTS.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

THE prospect of a new profession for women is afforded by the appointment by the Huddersfield Education Committee of a woman dentist at a salary of $1,250 per annum.

"Such an appointment is not at all surprising," remarked Mr. L. A. Harwood, medical superintendent of the National Dental Hospital and College, Great Portland street West, to your representative. "Women who take up the profession show considerable aptitude for the work; but so far not many have been attracted to it. This may be partly due to the fact that, so far as this country is concerned, it is only during the last few years that women have been admitted to the examinations of the Royal College of Surgeons in England; and at present there are only two who have got the L. D. S. of that institution.

"At present we have five girl students in training here—ours being the only dental institution in London which admits female students. So far the professional practice of female dentists appears to be chiefly of a private character, with the exception of appointments in schools and one or two small hospital clinics. Generally speaking, their patients, a believe, are women and children."

NOVEL SUGGESTION OF A FRENCH DEPUTY

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, June 6.

AN amusing proposal, half in jest, half in earnest, has been made by one of the newly elected representatives of France in her Parliament. He states that if properly dealt with the popular habit of duelling might be made a very profitable one to the State and might indeed add another $5,000,000 or so to her annual revenue. He intends to call the attention of the Chamber to this novel point.

He argues that the modern French duel is little more than a form of advertisement and that it should be taxed like all other forms of publicity. Funerals, he points out, are a State monopoly, and the cost of an interment ranges from $10 to $2,400, according to the class selected, and he suggests that duels should also be divided into classes and taxed on a gradually ascending scale. The fee for a duel in the highest class would be $400.

Critics of the proposal, appreciating the humor of the suggestion, point out that it could be rendered more profitable still to the State were steps taken to make it that a duel follow every challenge, or that if the arbitrators consider a duel is unnecessary, the challenger shall pay a fine, while if the challenged party declines to fight he shall pay a greater proportion of the tax than the challenger.

HUMANITY CARD INDEX

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

A PAPER was read before the Royal Statistical Society the other day by Mr. Walter Hazell on a proposed system of officially registering the details of the lives of every individual in the kingdom, compared with which the inquisitorial methods of the Insurance Act pales into insignificance and the glare of publicity in the divorce court is merely twilight.

Briefly, Mr. Hazell's scheme is to card index at Somerset House the life history and family connections of every boy and girl born in this country, and later perhaps in any other country.

No one could be married, have children, be divorced, remarried, leave the country, change his name, go blind or mad or do many other things without producing his index number and having the event duly recorded on his card, which would be kept for ever and ever, for the inspection of his friends and enemies and all generations to come.

The scheme was considerably criticised. It was pointed out that the chief difficulty would be in persuading people to remember their numbers. It would almost be safest to have them printed on their visiting cards.

FRANCE'S HEROINE OF THE RAILROAD SIGNAL BOX

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, June 6.

A STORY of dramatic heroism, reading like a tragic melodrama, is told in the newspapers here in describing the murder of a pointsman named Poulain while he was on duty on the line from St. Denis to Epernay, on the main Paris-Chantilly line.

Poulain, who was aged fifty-one, lived with his wife and another family in a small cottage close to his signal box, at Pierrefitte, about fifteen miles from Paris, and both of the Poulains were certificated servants of the company. These boxes are only entrusted to tried employes, as the express services by day and night is almost perpetual, requiring unceasing vigilance. The work was shared between Poulain and his wife, and soon after three in the morning, the woman hearing a cry, ran down and found her husband lying on the threshold just able to say:—"Help! I am being murdered."

Shouting aloud, she began to attend Poulain, when she heard the semaphore bell giving warning of the approaching 5:09 train, and, leaving her dying husband, she rushed to save the lives of the passengers by working the points, which she alone now understood. The whole time she continued crying at the top of her voice, and she saw first their gas and then the neighbors come out and pick up the wounded man, but though half heartbroken and shaken with sobs, she remained at her post for the passage of the Calais boat train, due at 5:20.

This she stopped, and Poulain, unconscious but still breathing, was placed on board and conveyed to Paris, while his heroic wife refused to quit the levers till six in the morning, when finally she was relieved by another signalman. It was only then that the poor creature broke down in a long fainting fit, and as soon as she recovered she took train to join her husband, whom she found dead.

The magistrates and police hurried to the spot, and they have already arrested several suspicious characters, but without much evidence. The signal box where the crime was committed is an ordinary small brick and wooden structure, and the assassin evidently prowled about outside waiting till, as the book showed, Poulain had worked the points at five minutes past three and returned inside. Probably he then rested a revolver on the window sill, from which the distance is not much more than a yard, and the bullet went in under the man's left eyebrow and out behind the right ear, ricochetting twice on the wall behind. Both the box and the cottage are in a very lonely position, surrounded by a spinney of acacia trees, and with no houses near. As soon as he shot Poulain the criminal must have taken flight, and never entered the box. Neither the wife nor the neighbors offer any reasonable conjecture as to the motive of this murder, unless it be a case of a mistaken victim, Poulain paying for somebody else.

The extraordinary courage and almost sublime devotion of the wife in taking her dying husband's place and leaving others to tend his last moments will stand high among the records of heroism claimed for the humble servants of the public.

ROMANCE AND FORTUNE IN A WRECKED STEAMER

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, June 6.

THREE months ago a tramp steamer named the Jane Rowe piled herself up on Bolt Tail, between Plymouth and Dartmouth, so successfully as to defy every effort to refloat her. She was loaded with 2,000 tons of iron ore, which did not add to her buoyancy.

After a thorough survey of the damaged vessel, the frowning rocks, and the restless Atlantic, the insurance agents recommended that the ship and cargo be sold as they lay. At the sales Mr. George Turner, a marine storedealer, of Plymouth, with a fine assumption of indifference, offered $1,250 for the lot—and secured it.

Then, with a quiet chuckle, he went to see what he had bought. The weather being fine, he lost no time in removing everything moorable. Anchors, chains, riding lights and such like trifles he computes will recoup his speculation.

Engines and boilers will be worth a considerable sum, and no one knows better than Mr. Turner how to obtain full value for the scrap iron to which he proposes to reduce the hull.

The cargo claimed his particular attention. The words iron ore have a peculiar fascination for a marine store dealer, and 2,000 tons, estimated to be worth $5 a ton, appeared a fine prize.

The hatches were lifted, and Mr. Turner dropped down upon the cold, wet contents of the hold. He looked long and earnestly at the yellowish rubble, but said nothing, except to order half a ton of it to be put ashore.

This half ton was secretly and mysteriously sent to be assayed. It proved to be heavily veined with copper, and was estimated to be worth $20 a ton.

This week forty men in lighters will attack the stranded steamer. They will be able to work only at certain states of the tide, but Mr. Turner recognizes the value of incentive. All the powers of persuasion which he within ten shillings per day and the best of victuals are being attended to each of these forty men.

Forest Notes.

Nearly 4,000 acres were reforested in Montana and northern Idaho during 1913 at an average cost of $7.50 an acre.

The best forested area of China is in Manchuria. The principal tree varieties are pine, cedar, larch, fir, yew, oak, ash, elm, walnut and birch.

Gannett peak, Wyoming, nearly 14,000 feet in elevation and the highest mountain in the state, is on the divide between the Bonneville and Bridger national forests.

Two forest officers in Washington and Oregon are writing popular descriptions of the trees in the Crater and Mount Rainier national parks for the use of visitors to the parks.

Dr. Chase is No Stranger

In This Home — Receipts Book and Medicines Kept at Hand All the Time.

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I have been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

No. 6,604, Girl's Dress.

Much can be done with this model. It is of sacque cut, with a medium sized box pleat down the centre of front and back; the closing beneath this pleat in front. There is a deep yoke facing in front, and this may be omitted. The neck may have the large sailor collar to trim it or it may be of plain outline. The plain sleeves, also, may be long or short.

The dress pattern, No. 6,604, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

U. S. ENVOYS OFFER PLAN.

They Propose a New Provisional Government For Mexico.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 8.—The United States Government, through Justice Lamar and Fred W. Lehmann, yesterday presented to the three South American mediators a complete plan for the pacification of Mexico.

It is the same in principle as that presented by the mediators and already agreed to by the Huerta Government. It contemplates the establishment at the earliest date practicable of a new provisional Government in Mexico City, which would conduct general elections for a permanent Government.

The plan written by the American delegates, after consultation with the Washington Government, is brief, and includes several counter propositions of which the Huerta delegates will be advised to-day. From the mediators themselves it became known that the differences in the two plans are slight. A full conference of all delegates and mediators is planned for to-day or to-morrow. This is for the formal consideration and final drafting of the protocol.

The announcement that General Huerta had decided not to blockade Tampico again, arms for the Constitutionalists relieved all fear of a breakdown in the negotiations.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

George Ilik, a Russian, arrested for stabbing a fellow countryman in a family brawl at Brockville, was sent to jail for one month.

Sixty persons were injured, several of them probably mortally, by the explosion of a balloon at the annual fair at Cesanne, France, yesterday.

George Fred Williams, the U. S. Minister to Greece, has offered his services as a disinterested mediator to the conflicting claims in Albania.

Application was filed yesterday in the U. S. Supreme Court by counsel for Harry Thaw for his release on bail, pending consideration by the court of the extradition case.

Lloyd Vinten, aged 14, who was bathing in a pond near the G.T.R. tracks at Copetown stepped into a hole and was drowned. The body was recovered two hours later.

Harry J. Matthews, charged with receiving money stolen from the New Westminster branch of the Bank of Montreal, was remanded yesterday when he appeared in the Toronto police court.

The first passage through the Gatun locks of the Panama Canal by an ocean liner was successfully carried out yesterday by the Panama Railway steamship Alliance, a vessel of 4,000 tons.

King George yesterday received Gen. Bramwell Booth, who had been requested to go to Buckingham Palace to give his Majesty the details of the forthcoming international congress of Salvationists.

All Had a Lucky Escape.

MONTREAL, June 9—After a wild dash down Frontenac street hill, an automobile owned by Gabriel Jarry, in which were three men and three women, struck an express wagon loaded with furniture, that was being driven up the hill by Henry Watson and his son. Both vehicles were wrecked and the horse killed, but nobody was seriously hurt.

Brought Crew To Port.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 9.—The fishing schooner Monitor arrived yesterday with the crew of the schooner Annie B. Lewis, of Boston, which foundered off Cape Sable last Thursday.

The Lewis was bound from Bridgewater, N.S., for New Haven, Conn., with laths, sprang a leak and filled so rapidly that the crew took to the boats. They were picked up in an exhausted condition by the Monitor.

Anarchists Killed In Riot.

ANCONA, Italy June 9.—Two anarchists were killed and a number wounded and seventeen carabineers were severely hurt in rioting which broke out here Sunday as the result of an attempt by anarchists to break up the celebration of a national fete. During the rioting the carabineers fired several volleys into the anarchist hordes, who were throwing stones and missiles and firing revolvers.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from the diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine wherever necessary, but, personally, am of the opinion that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

Convict Makes $5,000 a Year.

Pere la Capinette murdered a man in a jealous passion a quarter of a century ago in Paris and was sent to New Caledonia. A commission was recently sent out to inspect the convict prison and inquire into the Government lands that are allotted to convicts who are released for good conduct. They found Pere la Capinette, white-haired, benevolent, and venerable with his seventy years, surrounded by his sons, whom he had brought from France. He showed the commissioners over the coffee plantation on which he had settled after his release. "I am making $5,000 a year now," he explained, and then he added, with a sigh, "If only I had committed my murder twenty years earlier I should have been a millionaire by now."

Without Horns.

A clergyman was an important witness in a horse dealing case. He gave a somewhat confused account of the transaction in dispute, and the cross-examining counsel, after making several blustering but ineffective attempts to obtain a more satisfactory statement, said:

"Pray, sir, do you know the difference between a horse and a cow?"

"I acknowledge my ignorance," replied the reverend gentleman. "I hardly know the difference between a horse and a cow or between a bull and a bully—only a bull, I am told, has horns, and a bully"—here he made a respectful bow to the advocate—"luckily for me, has none."

Gastronomic Clock.

An ingenious Frenchman once devised a clock that would tell him the time in the dark, not through his eyes but through his mouth. Beside his bed he placed a large flat clock dial on which every hour was marked by a small cavity. In each of these he placed a different spice; the figure 12, for instance, held quigbe and the figure 6 cloves. To find the time he felt for the short hand with his fingers. This gave him the hour. To get the minutes he felt for the long hand and tasted the spice to which it pointed. If he tasted pepper and then nutmeg, for instance, he knew it was half-past three.

Some Ancient Dishes.

It is doubtful whether many of the ancient dishes, the recipes of which have been handed down to us, would be so popular as the sucking pig with barley and chestnuts that the "Ligue des Gourmands" partook of on Saturday. In Henry V.'s reign a favorite dish was fresh sturgeon with whelks. Roast porpoise also was thought fit to be set before the King, and a dish which the old chroniclers linger lovingly over—sheeps' heads soused in ale with the accompaniment of onions, garlic and leeks.—London Daily Chronicle.

THERE ARE IMITATIONS NOW

But Newbro's Herpicide Was the "First Dandruff Germ Destroyer."

A discovery can be made but once. After that all similar acts become emulation, imitation or an attempt at substitution.

Newbro's Herpicide is a discovery. It was the first remedy ever given to science to kill the dandruff germ. Other preparations have since been offered to the public, some similar in appearance, some in odour, but all bringing the daring promise of doing the same things that Herpicide has been doing for years.

Every article of this kind is merely one more instance of various emulation, vile imitation or a base attempt at substitution.

The "something just as good" story is old, why give it a thought? Herpicide is the Original Remedy. It destroys the dandruff and prevents the hair from falling. Itching of the scalp stops almost with the first application.

Don't be deceived by "Something just as good." If your own druggist does not keep the genuine dandruff germ destroyer, Newbro's Herpicide, go to one who does.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Send 10c in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the beating sun, all serve to mar any skin. Their disgusting effects are best overcome by the application of pure unscalped wax. This keeps skin and pores in a cleanly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Discoloured, freckled and roughened cuticle are actually absorbed by it. One ounce of unscalped wax, obtainable at any druggists, is sufficient to completely renovate a soiled complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning.

As the child tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles to form, a good astringent lotion should be used. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this during the heat of the day or before going out for theatre or social affair. It is a remarkable skin tightener and wrinkle eraser.

FEEDING THE IMMIGRANTS.

Ellis Island Has the Largest Restaurant in the World.

The contractors who feed the immigrants on Ellis Island in New York harbor run the largest restaurant in the world. Eight cents a meal is the regular price there—6 cents for breakfast, 8 cents for luncheon and 8 cents for dinner, American plan. The detained immigrants are entitled to three meals a day, and forty nationalities pass through the portals of the land.

One week last summer brought 30,000 immigrants to the island—Dutch, Slav, Croatian, Pole, Magyar, Greek, Russian and Italian—all with a liking for different cooking. Each one is taken into account in the enormous kitchens where more meals are prepared in a day than anywhere else in the country. No hotel in New York has so large and sure a lot of patrons. A thousand at one meal is not unusual. Five thousand meals a day are only an incident of the rush season.

The contract calls for 1,040,000 meals a year, and the price for supplying them is $80,000. At 8 cents apiece the profit for the contractors is less than 1 cent each—a matter of mills. Just how many depends somewhat on the prices asked by farmers—on the general supply and demand.—Leslie's Weekly.

Punishment by Pillory.

In the year 1837 the British parliament passed an act that put an end to punishment by pillory. Previous to the enactment this particular instrument of correction was in use in England and went by the name of the "stretch neck." It consisted of a wooden frame erected on a stool in which were three holes for the head and arms. For days together offenders against the common law were thus exposed to public view. In 1685 Titus Oates was sentenced to be pilloried for five days in every year during the rest of his life. Another famous sufferer was Daniel Defoe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe," who stood for three days in the pillory in Cheapside. It happened on occasions that the offender died while undergoing his sentence. During the time of exposure the condemned man was not allowed to receive food of any sort or description. The last occasion on which a pillory sentence was passed was in 1814.—London Globe.

TEMPERANCE FORCES ENDORSE GILLESPIE

Signed Letter Setting Forth the Report of Special Committee Which Interviewed Mr. Soden and Mr. Gillespie—Had No Alternative in Selection.

A TEMPERANCE CALL

TEMPERANCE MANIFESTO.

The County and City Temperance Associations make an announcement for the guidance of temperance electors:

Peterborough, June 9, 1914.

To the Temperance Electors of West Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with instructions given by the members of the County of Peterborough Temperance Association and the Peterborough Citizens' Temperance League, officers of both organizations on Saturday, June 6th, waited on Mr. R. J. Soden, the Conservative candidate, and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the Liberal candidate, for the Ontario Legislature, and obtained from each signed statements setting forth their attitude towards the present temperance situation. With the declarations of the two candidates before them the Executive of both organizations, after full and careful consideration, unanimously decided to endorse Mr. G. A. Gillespie as the candidate who has given the most satisfactory assurance of his support of the temperance platform. We would, therefore, urge temperance electors to render him all possible assistance and support. In reaching this decision the organizations have been guided by the following considerations:

On May 19 the County of Peterborough Temperance Association held a largely attended convention in the City of Peterborough. This convention was held before the political parties had placed their candidates in the field. It was then unanimously decided that the Association would support the candidate who would undertake, if elected to vote for the abolition of the bar and shop, and the cancellation of club licenses, and who would also undertake to support all advanced temperance legislation, by which even party it was introduced. A resolution was also passed instructing the officers of the Association to wait upon both candidates, after their nomination, and obtain from them signed statements, setting forth their stand on the temperance issue. The officers of the Association were authorized to make a pronouncement in favour of the candidate whose assurances were most satisfactory to the temperance interests.

On a subsequent date, and before either candidate was in the field, the members of the Citizens' Temperance League, at a meeting called for the purpose, unanimously endorsed and adopted as their own, the stand of the County Temperance Association.

Later, in accordance with these resolutions, the following questions were prepared for submission to the candidates:

Peterborough, Ont., June 6, 1914

Are you in favour of the abolition of the three-fifths' handicap?

Will you vote with either political party for its abolition, and favour a straight majority vote on every possible occasion in the Legislature?

Will you vote with either political party on every possible occasion for

(a) The abolition of the open bar?
(b) Club Licenses?
(c) Shop Licenses?
(d) And all other legislation looking for the restriction and abolition of the liquor traffic?

When interviewed by officers of both Associations, on Saturday, June 6, Mr. Gillespie signed all six questions in the affirmative and promised his unqualified support of all temperance legislation no matter by which party introduced.

Mr. Soden declined to pledge himself. Instead he submitted the following statement:

"Peterborough, June 6th, 1914

"Gentlemen, — There has entered into the politics of the Province of Ontario a question which is not a political question at all, but which has been used as a football between political parties too long. It concerns the men and his conscience.

While I admit that the Conservative party has given to the Province of Ontario during their term of office more permanent temperance legislation than has been given by any previous Government, yet I personally believe in the abolition of the bar and the shop and the club licenses, and will allow no person to dictate to me as to how I shall vote on these matters."

(Signed) R. J. Soden.

Your executives met to consider these two statements. While appreciating the declaration in favour of advanced temperance legislation that was made by Mr. Soden in his own convention, and which is set forth in his signed statement, keen regret was felt that Mr. Soden declined to so pledge himself.

Unless temperance candidates in the present campaign are willing to pledge their votes in support of temperance measures, temperance electors will have no satisfactory guarantee that they will succeed in obtaining the enactment of such legislation as they desire. Bitter past experience has proved this to be the case.

It was the hope of both organizations that both candidates would give their unqualified support to the temperance platform. One candidate having failed to do so it has become necessary to make this pronouncement.

The present election presents an unparalleled opportunity to secure the enactment of measures for what the temperance interests have been working for years. ELECTORS! Let us rise above party feeling and strike such a blow for temperance as will ensure victory for our cause on June 29th.

Signed on behalf of the joint executives:

H. B. Cowan,
President.

A. B. Cunningham,
Acting Secretary.

REV. MR. WILSON APPOINTED TO CHARLOTTE ST.

And Rev. Chas. E. Cragg of the Mark Street Church Has Been Transferred to Napanee

CONFERENCE CLOSED

It was one o'clock this morning when the stationing committee brought in their report to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the Methodist Church, which has been in session for the past few days in Napanee. After the report was approved of other business occupied the attention of the conference so that it was two o'clock before they closed until next year.

The report of the stationing committee included the recommendation that the Rev. J. P. Wilson, of Napanee, be appointed to the pastorship of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church. This was approved of with the rest of the report, and as a result Mr. Wilson will be the pastor of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, filling the vacancy caused by the sudden death of the late Mr. T. J. Mansell.

The Rev. Mr. Cragg, of the Mark Street Methodist Church, has been transferred to the Grace Church, Napanee, and the Rev. L. Phelps has been appointed to take charge of the Mark Street Church. As a result of the changes two local pulpits will be filled with new men.

The Rev. J. P. Wilson, who comes to the Charlotte Street Church, is already well known in this city. For four years he was the exceedingly popular pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, leaving this city about ten years ago. When he returns to Peterborough he will find a large number of old friends ready to welcome him, and he is certain to prove a valuable leader to the congregation of the Charlotte Street Church. The congregation of that church have been fortunate in securing so able and experienced a man, as they are entering upon a large undertaking in the erection of their new church.

The congregation of the Mark Street Church will be sorry to learn that their pastor has been transferred. During Mr. Cragg's pastorate of the East City Church, he has accomplished much good work and every department of the church has made splendid progress.

The Rev. Mr. Frost, who has been supplying at the Charlotte Street Church, has been appointed to the Methodist Church in Pontypool.

No Jurisdiction In The Auld-Aull Case

Such Is the Plea of the Crown in Seeking to Dismiss Nullity Action

TORONTO, June 8.—On the ground that there was no jurisdiction in the Ontario courts to grant the order asked, Edward Bayly, K.C., and Eric Armour, for the Attorney-General, moved before Mr. Justice Middleton, that the action brought on behalf of Doris Reid of Toronto, to annul her marriage to Robert Aull, jr., of St. Louis, be dismissed.

George H. Watson, K.C., opposed the motion.

Miss Reid and Aull were married in Cobourg last summer, but the young woman alleges that Aull exercised wrongful influences, misrepresentation, deceit, fraud, etc., and wants it declared that the marriage was invalid.

FUNERAL OF CANADA'S GREATEST SALVATIONISTS.—Ten thousand people attended the service in the Arena, Toronto, and one hundred thousand citizens lined the streets, when the funeral cortege of Mrs. Commissioner Rose, Col. and Mrs. Sydney Maidment, and fourteen other Salvationists, whose bodies were recovered from the wreck of the Empress, were carried through the streets of Toronto on six four-horse drays to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. It was probably the greatest funeral ever seen in Toronto, which is the headquarters of the Salvation Army, and lost nearly two hundred citizens in the wreck of the Empress.

DIDN'T KNOW HE WAS THE DUKE

Mr. T. H. Aikens Had an Unusual Surprise on Monday Last—Thought the Duke Was an Ordinary Citizen.

THEIR CONVERSATION

MILLBROOK, June 9.—Mr. T. H. Aiken, of the Fullis line, had one of those surprises on Monday morning last that come only once in a lifetime, and then only to few men. A man in ordinary togs called at his house and asked to be shown to the C.P.R. tracks at the junction near Mr. Aiken's place. Mr. Aiken volunteered to go with him, but the stranger said, "Oh, no, don't bother, I got off the train and all I want is to be directed back."

Mr. Aiken, always a courteous gentleman, started on however, and said: "I hear the Duke's train is to be along to-day, and I'd like to see what he looks like. "You wouldn't see very much anyway," said the stranger, but Tom kept on talkin— as they walked, and said, "Did you ever see the Duke, and what sort of a chap is he anyway?"

"Oh, yes, I have seen him, and he isn't much to look at."

"Do you think I can get a sight of him," said Tom, "if I do go down?"

"Well, you surely can without going, for the Duke came to see you."

Tom's hat went off at once, and a courtesy was made, he knew not how, or how he got to the train, he can not very well explain. But the Duke of Connaught laughed good naturedly at Tom's discomfiture.

A Lady Protests Against Sunday River Rowdies

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Kindly publish this article. From time to time I have often heard of the ungentlemanly conduct of fellows who frequent the Otonabee River on Sunday, but not until yesterday did I believe that it was as bad as reported. A "bunch" of men (pardon me, Mr. Editor, I mean toughs) were down the river just above the T.A.S. Park, and when the writer passed about ten of them were roaming along the river front, perfectly nude, and otherwise acting like a crowd of cannibals, and offensively displaying their nudity to the pleasure-seekers on the river. This gang of hoodlums may think this a very profitable way to spend Sunday (pardon me again, Mr. Editor they were not capable of thinking as they were under the influence of liquor), but if they have no respect for themselves they should have for their mothers or sisters who may have been down enjoying a sail on the river.

I may further state that the writer knows who this bunch was, and if I ever see them acting this way again I will make all kinds of trouble for them, as it is an indictable offence. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space.—I am, yours truly,

A Pleasure-Seeker.

Peterborough, June 8th.

SUFFRAGETTES NOT DISMAYED

Although Their Headquarters Were Raided By the Police and Important Plans Were Seized.

LEADERS ARRESTED

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 9.—The authorities to-day raided the headquarters of the militant suffragettes and arrested a number of leaders and seized plans for a future aggressive campaign, which included more assaults on Buckingham palace and the destruction of pictures at the National Gallery and other public places. The women arrested declared that their incarceration wouldn't stop these operations. The British authorities might expect the most aggressive year in the history of the militant suffragettes.

ROME UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Cavalry Guard Street-Corners as Result of Socialist Strike in Italian Cities

A NUMBER KILLED

Examiner Special:

ROME, June 9.—This city is practically under martial law as a result of the Socialists' strike called as a protest for the killing of several of their fellows in the riots at Ancona. The situation is similar in a number of the principal Italian cities. Troops are patrolling the towns, and all public services streets cars are suppressed. The cavalry is on guard at all corners here and no person is allowed to stop. In Naples there are riots this morning in which eighteen Socialists and four police and soldiers are killed.

FUNERAL OF LATE MALCOLM KIDD

The remains of the late Malcolm Kidd, formerly of this City, who passed away in Saskatchewan, will arrive in Peterborough at half-past 7 on Thursday evening. The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon from the Murray Street Church to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Mr Kidd is a brother of Mr. R. J. Kidd and Mr. Archibald Kidd, and for forty years resided in Peterborough.

JUMPED THROUGH A WINDOW OF THE TRAIN

Finlander Took a Mad Leap From G. T. R. Port Hope Train Going Thirty Miles an Hour.

PRACTICALLY UNHURT

To jump head first out-of the window of a passenger coach, when the train is travelling about thirty miles an hour, and escape practically unjuited, would be an unusual feat even for a circus performer who is accustomed to court death. This was the experience of a Finlander who was on his way from Peterborough to Port Hope last night, and who leaped from the window while the train was steaming past Quay's crossing, a couple of miles the other side of Garden Hill.

According to the story the Finn gave the local police he worked up till a few days ago as deck hand on one of the boats that runs between Kingston and the Thousand Islands. But in some manner he had a row with the rest of the crew, and left the boat intending to go to his home in New York State. He caught the wrong train, however, and landed in Peterborough on Sunday. Yesterday he hung around the local police station, saying that he was afraid the members of the crew were following him. Finally he was locked up in the cells and kept there until nine o'clock yesterday evening. He was taken to the G. T. R. Station then and put on board the 9 o'clock train to Port Hope by two constables. The idea was for the man to work his way from Port Hope across the lake to his native state, where according to his story he has relatives and friends.

Although the prospects for never seeing him again seemed good last night, word was received this morning by The Examiner that the Finn had leaped from the window of the coach, as the train was passing Quay's crossing which is just a little this side of Port Hope. The train was stopped and passengers and crew hunted for the man whose disappearance had been so dramatic, but the only trace of him that could be discovered was a hat, which was recognized as the one he had been wearing. It is reported this morning, however, that he took refuge at a farmhouse during the night, and is comparatively little the worse for his leap from the train. He will be turned over to the police and will be brought back to this city.

The man appears to be about thirty years of age, and gave his name to the local police as Wm. Garland. He is thought to be mentally unbalanced, particularly on account of the fear he displayed that the other members of the crew had followed him to Peterborough and were laying in wait to do him serious injury.

$10,000 TO INVESTIGATE THE DISASTER

Supplementary Estimates Brought Down in the House To-day Inclusive of Cost of Coming Inquiry

$50,000 RELIEF FUND

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 9.— Further supplementary estimates, totalling $60,000, were brought down in the House this morning. They comprise $10,000 appropriated under the ocean and river service for "investigation into wrecks," the amount being intended for pursuit of a big inquiry now pending concerning the wreck of the Empress. The other amount is of $50,000 "to provide relief for the sufferers by the recent Empress of Ireland disaster."

Regular Meeting of the Health Board

The Board of Health met in regular session this morning in the Committee rooms of the City Council. There were present Dr. Amys (chairman), Dr. McPherson, Medical Officer of Health, Mr. J. Murty, Mayor Buller, and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Business this morning was not very plentiful, and the Board were somewhat tardy in their negotiations.

Mayor Buller brought up the matter of the reported smells from the incinerator, and said he had heard the remark passed that Dr. McPherson had told someone that the smell was so strong that he had to close up his house, and go outside the city limits. This, the doctor contended, was not the case. He (the Mayor) said that the city was not paying for such things as this.

Dr. Amys said that the taxes were crawling up, to which statement, the Mayor said that was due to the actions of the Board of Health.

Millionaires, he said, can't build houses without paying taxes.

The topic of conversation then drifted to the bread wrapping clause.

Dr. Amys—The bakers say it is expensive having to wrap the bread. I think they should be made to wrap all the uniform loaves, those for the workingman's sustinence. We would not require them to wrap the fancy loaves, twists, and these peculiar shaped loaves.

Some one mentioned that this had been going on for a thousand years, whereupon Dr. Amys submitted that baking had not been introduced more than that time.

Mayor Buller, however, placed a different view on the matter, and said that they baked loaves, in ancient times, in fact, it was recorded in the Bible.

Dr. Amys—Well, Mr. Mayor, if we ever want any ancient history, we will come to you.

The Mayor then said he had to leave, to attend another meeting, but before he went, he had another shot at the incinerator.

We have got to see that this thing is looked after properly. If complaints still continue to come in about these smells, we will have to stop burning these carcases. We are not going to have the people in the south end persecuted, and let the people in the north, east and west go free. The Mayor, however, had to confess that he had never smelt the offensive odour.

A number of accounts, which had been duly certified, were then passed.

Dr. McPherson reported that the appointment had been made of Mr. and Mrs. Cowan, as caretakers of the Queen Mary Hospital, at a salary of $480 per annum.

Miss Rae, a former nurse at the above institution, had been married lately, and Miss Grace Burrow has been appointed in her stead.

Sanitary Inspector Spence reported that the city was in a cleaner condition at present than it had ever been before. There had been less serving of notices, and the people were falling in line with the ideas presented.

The only two pestilential spots were Lafayette and Jackson streets, and these were in a bad condition, owing to no sewers being in existence on these thoroughfares. On one there was a sewer, but no water. The Board finally decided to recommend to the City Council that sewers be constructed, and to the Utilities Commission, that water service be granted.

According to Mr. Spence's report, all the Chinese laundries in the city, with the exception of two, had taken out licenses, and the necessary changes, required by the act, had been complied with.

He, (the Sanitary Inspector) had made about 100 inspections since the beginning of the year, and these included, smells, noises, meat, poultry, milk, buttermilk, maple syrup, plumbing, etc., etc.

The Board then adjourned.

Farmers' Institute

The annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute will be held on the farm of J. H. Garbutt, Esq., Lot 8, concession 4, Township of Smith, on Wednesday, June 17th, at 2 o'clock p.m. sharp, for the election of officers, when the following programme will be followed.

2. Discussion thereon.
3. Report of Executive committee and financial statement by Secretary-Treasurer.
4. Auditor's report.
5 ad 6. Suggestions of points at which to hold regular and supplementary meetings.
7. Election of directors and auditors.
8. Suggestions as to how the Institute can be improved or made more useful, after which, addresses will be given by representative gentlemen, F. C. McRae, B.S.A., District Representative; H. B. Cowan, of "Farm and Dairy"; G. A. Gillespie ex-Pres. E. O. Dairymen's Association, Messrs. J. H. Burnham, M.P., E. A. Peck, M.L.A., Warden Shaw, T. M. Elliott, and others are being invited. After the addresses a genuine Farmers' Picnic will be held. A cordial invitation is given to all. Be sure to keep this date open.

The usual Farmers' Institute excursion will be held this year to Guelph on June 11th.

ADMISSION 25 CENTS

In last night's Examiner, through an error, it was announced that the price of a ticket for the George Street League moonlight, to-night, was 50c. As a matter of fact the price is only 25 cents, and a splendid sail is anticipated. There will be a good Orchestra as well as a refreshment booth, on board, and all are welcome. Don't forget that although there will be 50 cents' worth of fun, the tickets are only 25 cents.

FIRST TRIP.

The Y. war canoe made its first trip on Saturday afternoon when about 25 boys under Mr. Galley took a trip down the Otonabee, where the boys went in for a swim, returning to the City in the evening.

JUDGMENT IN ELEVATOR CASE GIVEN

Deane vs. G. Walter Green Company Action to Settled

Two Division Court cases were tried before His Honour Judge Huycke, yesterday, the Court sitting until eleven o'clock at night.

The first, Roland Deane vs. G. Walter Greene Company, store account, $53.45. Judgment for plaintiff for full amount and costs.

Second, G. Walter Greene Company vs. Roland Deane, tried before a Jury, action was for $43, repairs done to a hand hoist manufactured by G. Walter Greene Company and placed in position by the plaintiffs. The machine went to places the first time a load was placed on it, doing damage to the premises and to the stock. The machine was repaired by the plaintiffs and still found unsatisfactory, repairs were again made, leaving it in its present condition, this the defendant claims, is not according to agreement. The agreement being that it should be of the same kind as the one at present in the McLaughlin Garage, now Duffus' garage, on Simcoe Street.

The defendant claimed that he had no right to pay for the repairs to the machine, as it was not according to agreement and therefore counterclaimed for loss of time and damage to building and stock.

The Jury gave the plaintiff full amount of their account and to defendant the sum of $35 for loss of time and damage to building and stock and estimating costs of making machine in proper running order. The verdict in all for the defendant for $30 and the costs of the Court.

EXTREME PARTYISM.

This seems to be a time for the slackening of party lines. In this riding many Conservatives and some Liberals are not prepared to line up on a strictly party basis, to support the party nominee. Their convictions of duty as they see it lead them to adopt a more independent attitude. And in the matter of the Ferguson Trent Canal investigation party lines are broken. Among the most caustic critics of Mr. Ferguson's partisan mode of investigation and partisan findings are Conservative members of the Dominion Parliament, including a minister of the crown, Col., the Hon. Sam Hughes. The declaration of Mr. Guthrie ,Liberal, in regard to Mr. Ferguson—"The whole attitude of the man appears to have been gravely reprehensible and imbued with distorted partizanship" —receives force from the fact of the condemnation of Mr. Ferguson, partizan conduct by members of his own party. Loyalty to a party is in the abstract a good thing, but a man like Mr. Ferguson carries it too far.

In his case it works to the injury rather than to the strengthening of his party. Before the recent airing of the Trent Canal matter in Parliament, Mr. Hanna of the Whitney government, saw that Mr. Ferguson could be relied upon to go any length to further partisan, if not, party interests. Mr. Ferguson had broken the law in accepting emolument from the Dominion government, and was liable to a heavy pecuniary penalty for every day he sat in the Legislature. Mr. Hanan saw that if he could be made use of in the Legislature, he must be whitewashed; and a bill was rushed through at an all night sitting clearing Mr. Fergusons skirts and condoning a breach of the law by another law. Mr. Ferguson's peculiar talents were needed as chairman of the Public Accounts committee. He could be counted upon to stifle investigation into facts that were embarrassing to the Minister. By his help a serious charge against Hon. Mr. Hanna in connection with the acceptance of money—$500 —for the party funds, was glossed over and investigation denied by Mr. Ferguson, with the consequence that the Minister lies under very grave suspicion of wrong doing, when such desperate attempts were made—even passing an act of parliament—to prevent the truth coming out. If Mr. Hanna were innocent the facts brought out would show it; if not—

In this matter partizanship has not helped, but injured, the party. Mr. Hanna is the real leader of the party in this election—for Sir James Whitney is merely lending his name—and it is not an element of party strength, that the leader lies under grave suspicion of wrong doing, of which he refused investigation; and, if he were innocent, exculpation. Mr. Ferguson has gone a little too far in serving, as he thought, party interests; he has injured rather than helped. In these days, hide-bound partizanship is not the way in either party.

BETWEEN TWO STOOLS.

Does the so-called Conservative candidate in this riding think he can play a double game with success? He poses as the candidate of the Conservative party, though the better element of that party resents and repudiates the means by which he cuckooed the regular Conservative candidate out of his place. Mr. Soden, as a candidate of the Whitney Government, appeals for support on the policy of the Whitney Government, and at the same time, declares himself in favour of the main plank of the policy of his opponent—abolition of the bar.

Mr. Soden may satisfy himself in this attitude, but he cannot satisfy anybody else. He is simply deceiving the unthinking. We may favour abolition of the bar, but to be of use an advocate for that policy must vote for it. Whether he is elected or not he never will have a chance to vote for it and he is perfectly safe in promising his support to it. If he is elected as a supporter of the Whitney Government, he knows, and everybody else knows, that Government will never introduce a proposal to abolish the bar. There is no use trying to deceive the electors by playing fast and loose with principle and common sense. Mr. Soden, as it is reported, was in Toronto, and it is stated "that his platform is entirely satisfactory to the Government." How can that be? His policy in West Peterborough includes in profession) the main plank in Mr. Rowell's platform and the Whitney Government is dead against that. Mr. Soden quotes Sir James Whitney as saying: "If you want advanced temperance legislation and send men here to support me, I will give it to you." But Sir James says he does not want such men. He makes no appeal on a platform that will bring such men to parliament. He scoffs at abolition of the bar and favours abolition of treating, but refuses to make such a policy effective. Any candidate elected to support the Whitney Government will never, if that government is sustained, have a chance to vote for a measure of bar abolition introduced by the Whitney Government. It has taken the side of the traffic and refuses to consider any measure leading to the abolishing of the bar.

That is the chief issue in this election; the Liberal leader takes his stand upon it and the Governi. ent antagonizes it. The Government candidate in this contest cannot serve two masters; he cannot blow hot and cold in one breath; he cannot deceive the electors. He is, however, consistent; he got his nomination by questionable means, and his trying to serve two masters is quite consistent with his manner of gaining the candidature. Personally, he is a reputable citizen, but as a candidate he must accept the position his contradictory actions and attitude place him in. He is playing a double game, and between two stools he is in danger of coming to the ground.

Principles And Politics

On Saturday the Conservatives of Toronto decorated the monument of Sir John A. Macdonald. The occasion was the anniversary of the death of Sir John Macdonald. Taking the year 1914, and not the exact day, it was the ninety-ninth anniversary of his birth. It was the seventieth anniversary of his election to the Legislature of Old Canada. It was, according to Sir John Macdonald's biographer, the sixtieth anniversary of the formation of the Liberal-Conservative party, with Sir John Macdonald as its real if not its titular leader. It was the fiftieth anniversary of the negotiations which ended in the confederation of Canada.

Sir John Macdonald, with other statesmen, was asked to deal with the question of prohibition. He said—so it is reported—that there would be prohibition as soon as a majority of the elected representatives of the people were determined to have it. This is the typical attitude of the public man who does not pretend to be a champion of temperance, or, at least, to put the cause of temperance first. Such a man says—and his position is not to be attacked, but simply to be counted with—that he is friendly to temperance legislation, but that it is not the end and aim of his political career. If the people show by their votes that they want such legislation, he will carry it out—but he will not identify himself with it, or make sacrifices for it.

Once in a while—very rarely indeed—there appears a political leader like Mr. Rowell, who does identify himself with temperance reform and is ready to make sacrifices for it. Such a man may be fairly opposed by those who believe that his temperance policy is wrong. As to that, every man is entitled to his own opinion, and to the free exercise of his own judgment. But if that be granted, it seems equally true that Mr. Rowell should receive the enthusiastic support of all who agree with him as to the necessity for temperance legislation.

One does not often meet, in public life, a man who is inclined to go as far in this direction as he can—not as far as forced to go. Mr. Rowell is one of the exceptions. If he is not encouraged and supported, it would be a rash man who would predict the entrance of another Rowell into the political field for many years. There will be men of all parties, men whose motives may be good and honest. But they will not put temperance legislation in the forefront of their policy. They will make a test of Mr. Rowell's experience.

If Mr. Rowell is defeated, that defeat will be remembered for many years, and by it the course of many politicians of both parties will be directed. Whenever, in future, politicians are asked to support temperance, they will say, "Remember Rowell." They will say that temperance men vote for their principles only in plebiscites, and on other occasions when there is no danger of principles being carried out. And if the electors will not vote for their principles, how can it be expected that politicians will work for those principles?—Toronto Star.

Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision was held on Wednesday night of last week. All members of the Court were present, except Councillor Scott.

Thos. Bennett was struck off the income list, his name having been put on in error.

The C. P. R. Co's. assessment on land was reduced, but improvments increased about $3,000.

Jas. Colquhoun's assessment was confirmed, as being equal to his neighbour's.

C. Holcombe's business tax on his barber shop was cancelled, and M. Riley assessed $150 for the balance of the year, while Holcombe was assessed $50 for his portion of the barber business and $75 for livery.

C. Knox's application for exemption on income tax lay on account of being married since assessment was made, brought on a deadlock. Messrs. Boylan and Curtis thought Knox should be exempted in full and Messrs. Kindred and Howe thought he should be assessed for $100. The Reeve declared the motion lost on equality of votes.

Thos. Hartney's and Thos. Lloyd's income assessment of $680 and $1045 were sustained.

Wm. Matheson's appeal of too high an assessment received slight consideration. A lot he had sold to J. Seabrook was transferred to that gentleman at a valuation of $100 and he received a reduction of $84 vluation on two other lots, making his total valuation $5,306.

Mrs. Hester Mathison argued that her assessment on Dr. Holdcroft's residence was higher than it should be in proportion to the Methodist parsonage, but although Reeve Kindred thought that the parsonage valuation should be raised. Mr. Howe thought the difference was too much. Mrs. Mathison's valuation was confirmed, and the parsonage property was unchanged, excepting to add a valuation of $100 to the Church lot, which of course is exempt from taxation. Mrs. Mattison, however, received a reduction in some other lots complained of, one of which she has sold to Wm. Griffith. The Court then adjourned until Monday night.

At the Court of Revision, on Monday night, A. Wallace's income assessment was reduced from $720 to $320, but Mrs. Wallar's assessment was confirmed.

Arthur Mattison's valuation of $2,300 was sustained.

S. M. Stapley, S. B. Stapley and S. J. Seabrooks were put on householders' list, and all thereof are not liable for income.

Messrs. Plunkett, A. O'Hara, Hartney Lloyd, Taylor, Weese and Terryberry's income tax were sustained.

Messrs. Panton, H. Huble, R. Post Fred. Post, D. Carnegie, H. Warren, C. O'Hara, E. Fitzpatrick, A. Clark, P. White, H. Masters, R. Wrightly, J. Daire, H. Reeves and K. Cairns' income taxes were cancelled on account of having left town. W. J. McCutcheon's and R. H. Brittnell's income tax was cancelled. T. Pizer's income was reduced to $600. G. Backus was assessed $480; J. Haggarty, $345, and G. Overend, $300 for income.

B. Smith was assessed $100 for business tax and a number of changes made in the roll in respect to transfers of property.

The intermediate lacrosse club journeyed to Campbellford on Friday afternoon last and were defeated by a score of 6—4.

Mr. Cavarly of Bowmanville spent Saturday and Sunday last in Town.

WHERE "TRY, TRY AGAIN" CAME FROM.

Of all the people who quote the lines:

"If at first you don't succeed
Try, try again,"

few seem to know that they are not the beginning of the verse from which they are taken, or that there is a companion verse. Homely as the verses are they preach a little gospel of hope and courage, and have been of practical service to a countless number of tried people. Just as they were written by T. H. Palmer they ran as follows:

"'Tis a lesson you should heed
Try, try again;
If at first you don't succeed
Try, try again;
Then your courage should appear
For, if you will persevere,
You will conquer, never fear;
Try, try again.

"Once or twice though you should fail,
Try, try again;
If you would at last prevail,
Try, try again;
If we strive 'tis no disgrace
Though we do not win the race.
What should you do in the case?
Try, try again."

Foresters At Knox Church

Rev. H. J. Keith Delivers Eloquent Sermon

The Canadian Order of Foresters, Courts Peterborough, Langton and Littlejohn, attended divine service at Knox Church on Sunday evening, when the pastor preached a very helpful sermon on social service and especially its relation to fraternal societies. There was a large attendance of Foresters, and upon their return to their hall a vote of thanks was passed in appreciation of the service and sermon.

Rev. Mr. Keith spoke from St. Luke xi., 5 and 6: "And He said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend lend me three loaves; For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him."

The disciples had come across Jesus in prayer and asked that they be taught to pr— realising that prayer meant much to Him. Our own needs should teach us to pray, but the needs of others, forced on us, compel us to pray. The words of the scriptural passage indicate our need of God to enable us to meet our social obligations.

The Gospel of Christ is a social gospel. The Christian religion is first of all a redeeming religion by which men are saved and converted. Its purpose is to send men out to live in right relation to other people. Jesus Himself set the example by His acts, precepts and teachings. In the early church provision was made for widows, orphans and strangers, and social obligations were carefully fulfilled.

The emphasis to-day is on the practical side of Christianity. There is a strong urging that Christians bear social responsibility, that they do their share towards removing vice and making burdens of every kind as easy as possible.

THE SEED OF FRATERNITY.

Fraternities are an outgrowth of the Gospel idea of brotherhood and provide a means of carrying out the law of Christ as found in the words, "Bear we one anothers' burdens." Fraternal organizations, and the Canadian Order of Foresters in particular, are an outgrowth of the Gospel in its standards of liberty, benevolence and concord which are the fundamental principles of the Order.

Fraternal orders have altered considerably in late years. Insurance has been strongly emphasized. Wealthy insurance corporations have developed, but the big broad idea of brotherhood and friendship requires as much fostering care as ever. Ideas of comparative selfishness sometimes moved men in uniting. Sometimes obligations were not fulfilled as they should be. Sorrow is no less to-day than in the past; hard times are not less hard; sympathy is as great a good and great a need as ever. In the past days societies would turn out almost to a man at the funeral of a brother, no matter how humble he might have been. To-day one frequently witnesses only a corporal's guard.

COMPELLED TO GOD.

In view of the needs of human life and of the needs of lives unprovided for when those who should provide have spent all for living in the face of the cry of selfishness, there arises the cry of widows and children. And that cry forces us to seek to serve others. This compulsion is not native born but from God. It is the compassion of our Heavenly Father for us that compels us to give to others. I am not satisfied with the indefinite talk about a Supreme Being and His kindness. There is a real friendship of God for man that has sacrifice in it. It drives us to help others, and doing so makes us seek His help. In helping others, our own lives are enriched and blessed much more than if we had sought God for ourselves in a selfish way. Let Christ dwell in your lives, said Rev. Mr. Keith in conclusion, and by your very personality your fraternal organization will grow and develop. You will be honoured of men, especially so by widows and children.

STONY LAKE NOTES

STONY LAKE, Jne 8.—The large, two-storey boathouse on the Loch-McClelland Island belonging to Mr. McClelland was reduced to a mass of smouldering ruins, last Sunday, by fire, caused by a bolt of lightning. A very heavy thunder storm was raging at the time—just about noon. In fact the fashionable time for electrical demonstrations in Stony Lake this season is high noon. Several boats and furniture were stored in the structure. All will be a complete loss as the building was devoured so quickly there was no time for saving any of it.

Mrs. (Dr.) Goldsmith and family of Toronto are occupying their cottage for a few days.

Mr. J. S. Knapman spent the week end at his cottage, "Forest Home."

Pulled Bread.

Stale bread may be used for this purpose. First freshen the loaf by placing in a stiff paper bag and tying up the end, as it creates its own moisture and thus gives you a "fresh" loaf. Place in a hot oven for about twenty or twenty-five minutes, then take out, and quickly peel off the brown crust and pull the crumbs apart in longer finger-length strips. Place these in a baking pan and toast a delicate brown in the oven.

Rhubarb Dumplings.

Cut up and stew one and a half pounds of rhubarb with a heaping cupful of sugar and half a cupful of hot water. Cook seven minutes. Make a good baking powder biscuit dough, roll out and cut in rounds about four inches in size, sprinkle with sugar and a little flour, and lay on each two tablespoonfuls of the stewed rhubarb—it must not be too juicy—gather up the edges of the dough, form into balls, pinch edges together, brush with milk and sprinkled with sugar. Bake in a hot oven and serve with remaining sauce, to which has been added a good large tablespoonful of butter. Thicken with a teaspoonful of cornstarch, wet to a paste, and grate in a little nutmeg. Boil up and serve hot.

Baked Macaroni with Cheese.

Put the macaroni in double boiler after washing it, with some salt. Cook till soft, having water enough in it. Take from stove and drain. Butter a dish, put in a layer of the macaroni, with pieces of butter, a dash of pepper, salt if needed, then a layer of cheese cut in small pieces with the butter, etc., and so on till all is used. Let the macaroni be the last layer. Then fill the dish with milk and bake in a moderate oven, so it won't cook too fast.

Cocoa Custard.

Beat the white of one egg stiff and drop it by spoonfuls in two cupfuls of boiling milk. When they have puffed up, remove to a plate. Beat the yolk, add three-quarter cupful sugar, two tablespoonfuls cocoa, four tablespoonfuls cornstarch (dissolved) and small piece of butter. Add to the boiling milk and cook until thick. When cold, serve in glasses with the whites on top.

Sweet Potato Custard Pie.

One and one-half cupfuls sweet potato, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls butter, three-fourths cupful sweet milk, one-half cupful sugar, nutmeg to taste. Boil potato and put through sieve while hot. Add the beaten eggs and creamed butter; to this add milk and sugar; beat until very light. Have crust, pour in a rich crust, and bake in a hot oven.

CATERPILLARS PLAY HAVOC AT STONY LAKE

Islands Are Infested With the Pest and Many Trees Will Be Destroyed

Mr. J. S. Knapman returned from Stony Lake yesterday, and on talking to the Examiner this morning, stated in all his experience he had never seen the destruction by caterpillars as bad anywhere as what has been occasioned by this pest during the past week on the islands at Stony Lake. On most of the islands that he visited every leaf had been destroyed, and only the pine trees were green. After destroying millions of the caterpillars on his own island the destruction still goes on.

Piper's Island seemed to be a camping ground for them, and they were to be found in bunches by the square yard on the verandahs and walls of the Cottage. Grassy Island was no better, and the lake was literally covered with them.

It is doubtful if much can be done by the cottagers now to save the leaves of the poplars and maples, but it might be advisable for any who could to make the trip to their cottage to do what little is possible to prevent any further destruction.

MINISTER FELL FROM THE PULPIT

During his address to the congregation of the Queen Street Methodist Church Sunday morning Dr. Thompson of Omemee, who occupied the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, stepped too near the edge of the elevated platform and lost his balance. He fell to the lower platform, but fortunately was in no way injured, and continued his discourse, which was interesting as well as helpful.—Lindsay Warder.

SAYS SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE NOT TO BLAME

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In the editorial columns of last Saturday's Examiner reference is made to the pupils, the teachers, and the principal of the Queen Mary School. On behalf of the pupils I wish to say that they have responded cheerfully to the staff of teachers in their steady efforts to secure respect for the rights of property owners and becoming deportment on our City streets. The resident at the corner of Babb's Lane informs me that it is not so much the children, but others, who were in the habit of crossing the corner. No difficulty has been experienced in keeping the beautiful grounds in front of Queen Mary School in good condition. The four hundred children in attendance are beginning to feel a conscious pride in the beauty of their surroundings. The mention of the "birch" by your editorial writer savours of the long ago when, perhaps, he was a boy at school.

F. J. Veaden,
Principal.

HOME-MADE ICE CREAM

A Dainty and Delicious Summer Dessert

Ice Cream made the right way with a "White Mountain" Freezer is easier to make than a pudding or a pie—a fact that you can prove for yourself if you will get a White Mountain Freezer and learn the right way to use it.

When you make Ice Cream at home you can be sure that it is pure, sweet and wholesome, and if you make it the right way, with a White Mountain Freezer, your task will be an easy one and you will get an Ice Cream unexcelled by any you have ever tasted.

It is the triple motion that does it. Every particle of the Ice Cream is stirred and mixed and beaten, producing a smooth, fine grained Cream of uniform quality.

NEW STEAMER FOR THE STONY LAKE SERVICE

During the winter the steamer "Manita" was overhauled and improved in various ways, which has increased her efficiency for summer service between Peterborough and Stony Lake. She will commence her summer sailings on Thursday, leaving the new George street wharf at 8 a.m. sharp. She will call at all points on Stony Lake, returning to Peterborough at 7:30 p.m. Regular time cards will be issued in a few days.

SOME ADVANTAGES THAT BOYS WILL DERIVE FROM THE ANNUAL "Y" CAMP THIS YEAR

A large number of boys are looking forward with pleasure to the 29th of June, on which date the local Y.M.C.A. contingent will embark for their annual outing on the shores of Clear Lake. Already twenty of the boys have made application to attend and it is expected that more than twice that number will be on deck when the steamer lands its human cargo at the well-known camping grounds about three-quarters of a mile this side of Kawartha Park.

The summer time is a period of moral deterioration with most boys. Free from the restraint of school and many ties of home, boys wander during the vacation time into paths of wrong-doing largely because of the lack of directed play life and a natural outlet for the expenditure of their surplus energy. The vacation problem therefore becomes a serious one for the boy and his parents. Camping offers a solution. In this regard Prof. C. W. Votaw has said:

"A boy in the process of growing needs the outdoors. He needs room and range. He needs the tonic of the woods and streams. He needs to walk under the great sky and commune with the stars. He needs to place himself where nature can reach him. He ought to get close to the soil. He ought to be toughened by the sun and wind, rain and cold. Nothing can take the place for the boy of stout physique, robust health, good blood, firm muscles, sound nerves, for these are the conditions of character and efficiency. The early teens are the most important years for a boy physically. Through the ages of thirteen and fifteen the more that can be done in the open, free from social engagements and from continuous labour and study the better. He should fish, swim, row and sail, roam the woods and the waters, get plenty of vigorous action, have interesting healthful things to think about."

Unfortunately the great majority of parents are so busy that they can not take time to give the boys, even for a short time in the summer, a taste of outdoor or camp life. To do so without proper supervision would be detrimental rather than beneficial to the boy's interests. But there is an easy and profitable solution to the problem, which offers itself in more alluring terms than ever this year,—that is the Annual Boys' Camp of the Y.M.C.A.

The camp this year will begin on the 29th of June and end on the 11th of July. It will be in charge of Mr. G. Galley, secretary of the boys' department of the Y.M.C.A., and will be run on lines that will ensure the boys not only barrels of fun but a healthful, invigorating vacation, and an experience to which he will always look back with pleasure. The camp is a feature that local parents will do well not to overlook, as the advantages to their sons offered in this splendidly supervised outing, are apparent.

Would Not Let The Survivors Talk To Press

Special to The Examiner:

LIVERPOOL, June 9.—The Canadian Pacific guarded strongly against the possibility of members of the survivors among the crew of the Empress of Ireland, who arrived here today on the Corsican talking too much. The Press boat, with fifty reporters aboard, met the Corsican, but were not permitted to see any of the survivors. Afterwards, when the men landed, they were escorted to their homes by Canadian Pacific police.

DR. MORRISON HOME FROM WEST

Dr. and Mrs. Morrison returned from Winnipeg on Saturday last.

Dr. Morrison has been attending a dental convention in that city, at which the most prominent dental practitioners of the United States and Canada were present, and took an active part. The gathering was a most representative body.

Dr. Morrison says that the crops are looking well, and if nothing comes to hinder the growth, there should be an Abundant harvest.

THE REEFS THAT SHIPWRECK MANY HAPPY HOMES

When the Brooklyn Domestic Relations Court began its sessions for last year the magistrates sitting in it decided to find out as nearly as might be the underlying causes of disunion in the families that came under their notice. The probation officers were instructed to examine each case entrusted to them and record the reasons disclosed to them for marital disaster. The result of their inquiries is given in the subjoined table, which is included in the annual report of the court to the Board of Aldermen

Cause	No.	Pct.
Drink	390	45.8
Other women	117	13.7
Laziness	79	9.2
Jealousy	76	8.9
Incompatibility	75	8.8
Gambling	33	3.8
Out of work	30	3.5
Lazy and untidy wives	20	2.3
Mother-in-law interference	12	1.4
Other men (accusations of husbands	10	1.2
Cruel treatment	8	.9

Such a tabulation, says the New York Sun, must, of necessity, be only roughly accurate from the nature of the cases examined; as, for example, in the classification under 'drink,' in which undoubtedly are recorded many instances of domestic infelicity due originally to less easily stated incitements, which finally led the partners at fault to dissipation landing them in the court. It will be observed that lack of employment is charged with a small share of the responsibility for family trouble; it may be conjectured that adversity, as the poets love to teach, binds human beings more closely rather than separating them; or it may be, that the futility of pursuing a penniless, workless mate may affect these figures. Let all humorists take note of the official demolition of the mother-in-law jest.

During the year 392 persons were convicted in the court. It would be supposed that a large proportion of these would have been youngsters; unable to submit to the readjustments necessary to successful matrimonial life. From the figures this does not appear to be the case:

Ages.	No.	Pct.
16 and 20 years	7	1.7
20 and 30 years	133	34.0
30 and 40 years	148	37.7
40 and upward	103	26.0

Thus the presumably wild and unsettled chaps under 30 behaved better than their elders from 30 to 40, while the greybeards of 40 and upward failed lamentably to disclose a better disposition than their juniors. Perhaps the tango is responsible for this; its ravages are particularly disastrous among those old enough to know better.

BRITISH MAILS.

Mail for transmission to Europe, is despatched from this city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and matter is received until midnight. Four mails a day are closed out at the Post Office, for transhipment to Great Britain. d-tf.

Two Lads Had Narrow Escape

Lindsay Warder: During the early Sunday morning hours two young men in a canoe, said to be students attending the Collegiate Institute, had a thrilling experience in the waters of Drummond's Bay.

One of the lads, Alex. Scott, together with his companion, were well out from shore when a sudden wind capsised their canoe and the two boys had to swim for their lives. As the distance was considerable it was a lucky thing that Mr. H. Keddo, Government Light-House keeper, was near by. He succeeded in rescuing the two, who after the sudden miniature squall had abated set out for town for a change of raiment.

ORILLIA RESIDENT'S ACCIDENTAL DEATH

ORILLIA, Ont., June 8.—The whole town was shocked Saturday evening to learn of the accidental death of Mr. R. H. Jupp through falling off a bridge at Alliston, of which he was superintending the construction in his capacity as county engineer. Mr Jupp has been a familiar and popular figure in Orillia and throughout the county and district for many years past. He has taken a prominent part in public affairs, having been twice Mayor of Orillia, warden of Simcoe and contested the riding of East Simcoe in the Conservative interest in 1902. For some years he had been county engineer, and had superintended the expenditure of large sums on the roads of this county. Friends all over Ontario will learn of his untimely death with much regret. He is survived by a widow, four sons and one daughter.

ENGINEER IS OVERCOME BY HEAT

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 9.— Overcome at the throttle of his engine while bringing his train into Toronto, Wm. Hoph, a G.T.R. engineer, collapsed a short distance past Mimico, his home. Hoph had complained of the heat to his fireman and when he collapsed the fireman brought the train to Toronto. The engineer was removed in an unconscious condition to Grace Hospital.

BISHOP O'BRIEN PRESENTED WITH ADDRESS

Sunday marked an epoch in the lives of about 180 children at St. Mary's Church, when they received the Sacrament of Confirmation at the hands of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. of Peterborough.

Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was come from the Knights of Columcomef rom the Knights of Columbus, C.M.B.A., and St. Mary's Catholic Club. A large number of the members assembled in the parish hall to greet His Lordship, who was accompanied by Monsignor Casey and Rev. Father Ferguson. Mr. R. Williams, President of the C.M.B.A., occupied the chair, and the address of welcome was read on behalf of the societies by Mr. Peter Kennedy, Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus.

His Lordship in reply thanked those present for the welcome extended and the sentiments of loyalty and devotion conveyed in the address. He urged upon them to be worthy members of the organizations with which they are identified, and by their action set an example which would serve as an evidence of the faith that was in them and that would be a source of edification to their neighbours.

At the conclusion of His Lordship's remarks a short reception was held.—Lindsay Post.

COUNTY COURT SESSIONS OPENED THIS AFTERNOON

The Case of Thos. Harrison, Who is Charged With Threatening to Shoot Chas. Beatty, the Only Criminal Action.

THE CIVIL CASES

The County Court Sessions opened this afternoon with His Honour Judge Huycke presiding.

There is only one criminal case on the docket, namely, that of Thomas Harrison, who is charged with threatening to shoot Charles Beatty, who was acting as a deputy sheriff. The alleged threat was uttered, when Beatty went to execute a writ of possession. Harrison was committed for trial by His Worship Police Magistrate Dumble.

After the Grand Jury, hereinafter named, had been sworn, His Honour

You will be pleased. I am sure. this hot weather, to know, that your duties will likely be light, this court. You are summoned here for purposes of duty, a duty which is at the same time, responsible, and important.

I understand that there is no one in jail, awaiting trial, but there is a man, who is out on bond, and that is the only case you will have to undertake, as far as criminal cases are concerned.

You are here, representing the City and County of Peterborough, and you are selected from the various townships, and municipalities that comprise the county.

You are also here representing the Crown in the administration of justice.

It is a pleasant fact, that only a few days ago, we were honoured with a visit from one of the noblest of the Royal family, in the person of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. You, as well as myself, honour him for himself, honour him for his ability, honour him for his character, and also honour him for his relationship to one of the greatest traditions of the British Empire.

These visits, and associations are good, because we all respect the country from which we sprang, and the Empire of which we form a part.

Now, I said you were representing the City and County, and your duty is an honourable one. You are here to exercise your judgment, and to look at the expenditures of the institutions, charitable institutions. We have had horrible disasters at sea, and we have had terrible conflagrations, on the land, and one particular aspect of your duties, is, I think, to examine the fire protection of the institutions,—which it is your privilege to visit. When you have made your inspections, whatever you have to report, will be put in the form of a presentment, or report, and submitted to me, and I will do all I can to see that your recommendations are carried out.

As I intimated to you, there is only one person on trial for an alleged criminal offence. It is not for you to try him. It is only your duty to see that a reasonable case has been laid out against him, sumcient to justify him being put on trial before another jury, and before the court. If you find that a case is made out against him, you will say so, by bringing in a true bill, and if not, your foreman will mark the document, "No bill."

The Crown officer will present the indictment to you, and you have to make your finding.

The Jury then retired to their room, to find a true, or no bill against Harrison, and returned with a true bill.

The Grand Jury consists of the following:

Wallace Anderson, Arthur Franks, Alex. Fitzgerald, Fred Gardner, James Garside, Alex. Gibson, Albert Hunter, James Lynch, M. Pethick, Robt. Tanner, Chas. Tanner, Harry Buck, James G. Brown.

The Petit Jury, composed of the following, was then selected and sworn: Albert Darling, Douro; W. J. Sanderson; Thos. Davidson, Ashwell; Bert Hamilton, Peterborough; Chris. Graham, Peterborough; Art Jury, Douro; S. Hawthorn, Dummer; Wm. Godfrey, Peterborough; Emory Jeffries, Peterborough; Wm. Robinson, Monaghan; J. W. Kindred, Otonabee; L. F. Fumber, Peterborough.

The first case called was that of Samuel Curry versus G. MacGregor. Mr. G. N. Gordon was representing the plaintiff, Curry, and Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., appeared for the defendant, who was not present in court. On account of this fact, Mr. Ruddy applied for an adjournment till next court. His Honour, however, contended that in view of the circumstances, the case must proceed.

It will be remembered as being before published, that Curry, in his statement, claimed that he was wrongfully accused of being a thief by MacGregor, and that he was assumed to be arrested by this individual, and taken to the police station, where he was put through the third degree by the Chief Constable, and Detectives Newhall and Meagher. Curry was attending the funeral of the wife of a friend named Davenport and after the body had been lowered to the grave, and he was looking at the flowers, MacGregor, Stairs and Huffman came up to him, took him violently by the shoulders and pinioned his arms behind his back, MacGregor shouting at the same time, "I arrest you in the name of the King." He was then forced into an open express waggon and taken to the police station, where he was kept for a period of three hours.

William Morgan, a friend of Curry's, substantiated his statement. He also attended the funeral in question and saw the other men named there. Morgan stated that he went to the station with Curry and was also put through the third degree and also refused his liberty. The two witnesses made the case for the prosecution.

No defence was offered.

Mr. Gordon, in addressing the jury, stated that he would take as little time as possible. The evidence, he said, clearly indicated the facts that are before you. MacGregor has not even the decency to come before the court, and does not seek to explain the wrong that he has done to this man, and not only that, but desecrating the funeral service. The defence claims that the man was intoxicated. Perhaps he was to a certain extent, but it is no indication, justification or excuse, rather it aggravates the circumstances, that he could go to the place where this man was paying his last respects to the dead, and case of the defence is, that the man came up under a lying pretence and said, "I arrest you in the name of the King." Stairs and Huffman may also be liable, but as Curry said, there is time enough for them yet.

Curry, however, has the right of action against MacGregor, for injury of his good name, as he did. The excuse of the deefnce is, that the man was intoxicated, and for that reason that he should be excused. I venture to say that there is not one member of this jury who would submit to the treatment and injury, and for that reason I would ask for a substantial finding.

Mr. R. Ruddy was addressing the jury on behalf of defendant as the paper goes to press.

The Jury brought in a verdict of $150 and costs for the plaintiff.

FOR FORTY YEARS WAS A RESIDENT OF PETERBOROUGH

Death of the Late Malcolm Kidd, Formerly of this City, in McLean, Saskatchewan

A large number of the citizens of Peterborough will be sorry to learn that Mr. Malcolm Kidd, for forty years a resident of this city, where he was well known, is dead in McLean, Saskatchewan.

The late Mr. McLean had been ill for some time, and intended coming east on a visit in the near future, but his brother, Mr. R. J. Kidd, received a telegram from his nephew, Mr. Howard Kidd, informing him of the demise of his brother. Deceased was clerk and treasurer of the county in which he resided.

The late Mr. Kidd had a very large number of friends in this city. For years he resided at the corner of London and Harvey Streets, and for a long period he taught in the South Ward School. He was highly respected by all who knew him, and his death will be sincerely regretted.

Two brothers, Messrs. R. J. Kidd and Archibald Kidd of Peterborough, one sister, Mrs. S. S. Ritchie of Brantford, as well as a sorrowing wife and one son, Howard, of McLean, survive him.

The deceased was 57 years of age.

It is not known when the funeral will be held, but interment will take place in Peterborough to the Little Lake Cemetery.

SETTLEMENT MAY YET BE ARRIVED AT

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., June 9.—It is understood that the Government will consent to the House of Lords postponing the second reading of the Home Rule bill till the amending bill has been prepased and submitted for the approval of both Houses. In independent quarters this is taken to indicate that there is considerable prospect of a settlement by compromise yet.

PETERBOROUGH CHORAL SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held to-night at 8:30 p.m., in Coleman's Parlours. Important business will be brought before the meeting, including the selection of the musical work to be taken up for next season. B. Read, Secretary.

SPLENDID RECITAL AT CONSERVATORY

Pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome Delighted a Large Audience Last Night

At the Conservatory of Music last night a very successful recital was held by the pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome. The hall was filled with an appreciative audience, and the offerings of the pupils were greatly enjoyed. Miss Elcome is to be congratulated on the success with which she has trained her pupils in the art of interpreting on the pianoforte, the compositions of the best musicians. A number of her pupils show great promise, and all gave evidence in their renditions of the careful teaching they had received. The pupils too deserve much praise for the manner they handled their part of the entertainment.

Before the recital those taking part in the programme were entertained to delicious refreshments.

Hot Weather Has Driven the Boys of the City Into the Water and the Usual Resorts Have Been Crowded

The small boy has returned to his summer element, part of which stretches from the vicinity of the boat houses at the east end of Dalhousie Street to the C.P.R. bridge There is more of it out on the lake and at various other places where swimming is free, general and unsupervised. A note of warning should be sounded to boys that when swimming together they should have a certain amount of thoughtfulness for their companions. Since the City has been unable to secure places where supervisers would be on duty the older boys should pay attention to beginners, and be ready in the rare event of anyone taking a cramp or meeting with an accident. The youngsters have added to the nondescript contents of their pockets swimming trunks, which they carry around in all stages of dampness. From some reports there are those who have yet to abide by the law, or else they prefer not to use trunks.

A few years ago swimming facilities were innumerable. There was an excellent beach at Burnham's point, and the isolation of the bank and field encouraged Crusoe and Friday expeditions even as far as the C.P.R. with hasty returns to where the clothes were left in tawdry piles.

Below the locks, a short distance above the location of Rye's boathouse there was another swimming place that possessed the desirable assets of seclusion and a fine beach. The police remained far up town in those days, the nearest resident was one-quarter of a mile away, and youth's gambols were unrestrained.

But all the central swimming places are so conspicuous nowadays, and the city has extended to such an extent, that there are no places where the boys may feel free to undress. Swimming is done more or less furtively, and by stealth. It is not the fault of the police if they have to close up public places to the boys. The city just grew while the city father's pooled whatever brain supply they had for other things, and while squandering money on mud roads, refused to regard the spending of public money for playgrounds and swimming places as necessary. This to them would have been a real squander of coin, and the citizens were of the same opinion.

The younger generation are reminded of the fine qualities of their forbears, but those who are mere infants in thought realize that there was little ambition, hope, vision, foresight, or whatever term is most applicable, in the prehistoric mind around these parts. And prehistoric is no exaggeration either. Present day citizens are trying to make conditions more advantageous for the small boy. In some cases the attempt is local, in others it is provincial in scope.

STATEMENT OF THE QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL

In connection with the expenses of the Queen Mary Hospital, Dr. Amys remarked that the items kept on coming before them for approval, while the accounts incurred by patients were rendered, and there the matter ended. He suggested that the City Solicitor be instructed to look after these things, and the matter was finally put in the form of a motion.

The expense sheet in connection with the Isolation Hospital rendered, was as follows:

	To 30th April	During May	Total
Drugs and medicines	$ 35.95	$ 17.55	$ 53.50

KEEPING TRACK OF THE WEST

Five years have done wonders for Canada's West. Every Canadian knows it in a general way. But occasionally there is brought to one's attention some remarkable fact that epitomizes western growth in startling fashion. In the May issue of "Canada Life Echoes" appears a group photographs of this nature illustrating one of Regina's business blocks as it now appears and as it was five or six years ago. The difference is almost unbelievable. This particular number of "Canada Life Echoes" is devoted to the Northwest. It deals in a concise and comprehensive manner with western conditions as they now are and it presents a tabulation of interesting statistics showing the grain production, etc., of each of the four western provinces. The little book is illustrated throughout and is designed to present the most interesting information about the West in a way that will make it worth while keeping where it can at any time be easily reached.

The illustrations of western life and scenery, of which there are a great number, are unusually fine and possess great interest for all Canadians. The book also includes an interesting article on irrigation in Alberta. It is published by The Canada Life Assurance Company, and while they last, a copy will be sent on request to W. R. Scadding, District Agent, Canada Life Assurance Co., Peterborough.

Runaway Caused Some Excitement

A runaway on Simcoe Street caused a great deal of excitement this afternoon about half-past two o'clock. Crossing George Street, it narrowly missed colliding with two or three outfits that were intending to cross the street, and pursued its zig-zag course as far as Water Street, where it was caught. The horses which were drawing Knox's delivery rig with a cargo of soft drinks, took fright at something and dashed toward the Knox establishment on Queen Street. No damage was done to the outfit.

95th Birthday Of Former Little Scotch Girl

Mrs. Thos. Telford Celebrates Her Anniversary

Mrs. Thomas Telford, 486 Patterson Street, to-day turned into her ninety-fifth year. Ninety-four years has she completed since the day of her birth at Berwick-on-Tweed. With her life only five years short of the century mark, Mrs. Telford still possesses a remarkable vitality. Her memory gropes at times, but is for the most part faithful. She is fairly strong visioned, hears well and eats the customary three meals a day regularly. In the days of her decline she has kind hands to assist her, and sympathetic neighbours who in their frequent calls, add a pleasure to the daily round of her life.

And they all speak particularly of her unfailing good humour. The humidity of the past three days has strained the smoothest temperaments. There has been not one word of complaint from the old lady of Patterson Street, whose disposition apparently naturally seeks the brighter and more pleasant side of every situation. It is this fact, doubtless, that makes the old lady quite a favourite with the neighbors, especially those who possess neighbourly attributes. When a reporter called last evening one visitor casually stated that it was remarkable the even temper displayed by Mrs. Telford. She dearly delights a little joke, and as her memory retraces the past she recalls for the most part incidents marked by elements of humour.

A LONG RESIDENT.

A vast quantity of water has flowed past old Berwick, on the Scottish border, since the ships departing and coming, and riding at anchor, were painted upon her recollection. And yet she frequently reverts to the days when as a girl she looked out upon the old Tweed, where it meets the sea. And while her vision is faithful to youthful scenes, her tongue retains the accent of the Scot. Her "a's" are broad, and her speech is still stamped with an accent which many years spent in Ennismore and Peterborough could not remove. When she was 23 years old, Mrs. Telford married, and when she had one child she moved to Canada with her husband.

HUSBAND A SCHOLAR.

Thomas Telford was quiet, industrious and scholarly. He taught school in Peterborough and the northern township during the winter months, and while the husky young men and women were helping work the farms in summer Mr. Telford worked with stone masons and at times on farm work. Mrs. Telford often speaks of her "maun," of his scholarly attainments and his fine qualities as a husband. For years he was the local "weather man," and kept the records for the Government.

STRENUOUS TIMES.

Mrs. Telford speaks of pioneer times when she assisted in the farm work. It was nothing unusual for her to sow oats and wheat with the far flung arm motion. She would fill with the grain a vessel sowers carried under their left arm and went forth to the fields with the confidence of a man. Mrs. Telford smiles when she tells of the compliment that was paid to her farm work by a man who saw it, and believed his favourable comment expressed to a neighbour applied to the work of a man. But Mr. Telford was busy elsewhere at the time, and it will his good wife "was looking after the home duties."

FOUR GENERATIONS.

It is understood that Mrs. Telford forms a link in two chains of four generations. One daughter is Mrs. R. Foster, who has recently been ill for five or six weeks. There is her son John and his family. Another four generations are Mrs. Telford, Mrs. W. Ford, of Toronto, W. Ford, jr., and his family.

The Telford family was one of the Ann old Scotch families of the City. They were excellent citizens, and the best of neighbours. One of the fruits of a life well spent, as Macbeth reminds us, are "troops of friends." Mrs. Telford's may not be that numerous, but there are many and kindly. Possibly, too, her vigour is the result of strength acquired in her youth.

MANUFACTURERS ON THE TARIFF

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, P.Q., June 9—"That it would be suicidal to lower our tariffs, generally, at this juncture, and that the present system of tariff is not practical enough," were some of the salient points brought out by President Gordon in his address to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association to-day. Mr. Gordon said Canada's credit was good in the Old Country still, and that what ever depression exists here is common to the whole world at the present time.

OPERA SINGER GETS DIVORCE

Special to A. H. Stratton & Co.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 9. — Nine persons are dead and five suffered from serious injuries as result of intense heat that prevailed to-day over Louisana and Mississippi.

FOUR VACANCIES IN THE SENATE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 9. —The death of Senator Coffey leaves four vacancies in the upper chamber to be filled by Premier Borden. The other three were caused by the deaths of Sir George Ross, Senator Cox and Senator Gibson. With these four vacancies filled by Conservatives, the Liberal majority will be reduced to 13. This includes Sir Lyman Jones, with the Conservatives. When the additional nine senators from the west are appointed, the Liberal majority will be reduced to four.

CHURCH UNION AGAIN DISCUSSED

Examiner Special:

WOODSTOCK, June 9.—The Presbyterian General Assembly spent another morning in the discussion of the Church Union question. It is doubtful if any specific course of action will be decided upon by the present Assembly. The probability is it will be referred to a committee to report to the next General Assembly. Rev. Wilbur Chapman, the eminent United States reformer, addressed the gathering this afternoon.

WEDDING BELLS

JACKSON—DICKSON.

Miss Margaret Gordon Dickson and Mr. George Frederick Jackson were united in the bonds of holy matrimony at St. Paul's Manse this afternoon by the Rev. Mr. Pogue. Miss Dickson was formerly of Hull, England. They were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will reside in Peterborough.

PRIMEAU—DORAN.

At the 7 o'clock mass in St. Peter's Church, this morning, a pretty wedding took place, when Mr. Leo. Francis Primeau, son of Mr. John Primeau, East City, was married to Miss Mary A. Doran, daughter of Mr. Michael Doran of Ennismore. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Phelan.

Mr. Arthur Primeau, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman, and the bride was attended by Miss Laura Duffus. Mr. and Mrs. Primeau will reside in Peterborough.

HISCOX—SOLLITT.

On Wednesday, June 3, 1914, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the Free Methodist parsonage by Rev. R. Burnham, in Uxbridge, when Clara Isabella Sollitt, second daughter of Mrs. Wm. Sollitt, of Scott, was united in marirage to Mr. Matthew Hiscox, formerly of Peterborough. They entered the room amid the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Allie Ball, of Quaker Hill. The bride looked very becoming in a dainty gown of cream serge trimmed with cream satin. Miss May Burnham, of Uxbridge, acted as bridesmaid dressed in a gown of raw silk. Mr. Ernest Sollitt, brother of the bride acted as best man. After partaking of a piece of cake they took the 3 o'clock train for a short trip, the bride travelling in a navy blue corded cloth suit and white hat amid a shower of confetti. They returned on Friday to her mother's home at John Dalton's, of the 5th Concession of Scott, where a reception supper was held, and a number of guests were present, and a very enjoyable time was spent.

The bride received many beautiful and useful presents, which shows the high esteem in which they are held.

Their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy life.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiscox will reside at West Toronto.

PITCHFORD—AUSTIN.

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon last, June 6th, at the Anglican Church of St. John in this city at which the Rev. Canon J. C. Davidson officiated. The contracting parties were Mr. Thomas Pitchford, son of Mr. James Pitchford, of 346 London street, and Miss Ethel Ivy Austin, daughter of Mr. John Austin, of 217 Stewart street.

The bride was dressed in white and wore a veil; she also carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by two bridesmaids, viz., Miss Nelly Austin, sister of the bride, and Miss Ethel Cooper, a niece of the bridegroom. Mr. Albert Pitchford, a brother of the bridegroom, officiated as best man. The bridesmaids bore baskets of flowers which had been presented by the bridegroom.

Among the company present at the ceremony were the father and mother of the bridegroom, the mother of the bride, Messrs. Bernard, Arthur and Albert, brothers of the bridegroom, Mrs. Cooper and Miss Ethel Pitchford, sisters of the bridegroom.

Shortly after the ceremony the happy couple left for the lakes where the honeymoon will be spent. On their return to the city the newly married young people will reside at 183 Benson avenue.

PETES WIN A VERY EXCITING TEN INNINGS GAME FROM THE BEAVERS

Kelly's Single in the Tenth Chased King Over the Plate With the Winning Run.

THE SCORE WAS 4-3

After ten days on the road the Petes returned to Riverside Park yesterday and opened their home stand very auspiciously by beating Knotty Lee's Toronto Beavers by 4 runs to 3 after a battle that went ten innings. There is nothing the fans enjoy more than an extra innings affray especially when the home talent cop the decision, and the Petes came through with the needful yesterday in commendable fashion.

It was a tidy little game of ball that was staged as the opener, although the heat had a bearish effect on the pepper market, even the intelligent audience failying to show the usual brand. The Petes opened up early on Mr. Roberts, who was K. Lee's pitching selection, and at the end of the fourth were leading by 3 to 0. Just at this stage our Mr. Tracey tried to score from second on a single to left. He didn't score, and what was worse, the sprint did not seem to be the kind of exercise best suited to a member of the hurling department. At all events the enemy rallied and assisted by Mr. Wilcox, who heaved one wide to first when there was no need of throwing, and didn't peg to the plate at all where there was some need, K. Lee's hired help sewed up the old ball game in the sixth.

Bob Sterling was then injected into the proceedings, and for the balance of the struggle only twelve men faced him, three in each innings. His fast ones seemed to have the Beavers stopped. Trout was the only visitor to get on and he was thrown out trying to steal after singling in the ninth.

One Galm, who was sent to Toronto by the Buffalo Internationals, succeeded Mr. Roberts in the fifth, and he held the Petes in check until the tenth.

Then he grew generous, and when he passed King the first man up, he put the skids under his own chance of victory. Wilcox promptly sacrificed him to second and he moved on to third when Ort booted Gorman's grass cutter. It was up to Kelly, and the catcher came through with a bullet drive that caromed off Isaacs shins into left field, King galloping home with the winning run. It was a nice finish and sent the fans home happy.

Both teams had chances to score in the first. Trout, first up for the Beavers, was safe on Wilcox's fumble and went to second on Kelly's high throw to first. Burrill hit to Gorman, who got Trout going into third. Ort singled to centre. Killilea flied to Blount. Isaac hit to Byrne and Burrill was out at the plate.

With two gone in the Petes' half, Welsh scratched a hit and stole second, and Stewart drew a pass, but King grounded out.

The Petes broke the ice in the second. After Wilcox had flied to centre Gorman was passed and Kelly singled through short, Killilea making a pretty stop. Tracey hit to Isaacs forcing Kelly at second. In trying to complete the double Ort threw low to first and Gorman scored. Blount forced Tracey at second to end the innings.

The homesters put a pair over in the fourth. King was hit to start with, and Wilcox sacrificed him along. Gorman slashed a double along the third base line, scoring King. Gorman went to third on Kelly's infield out. Tracey drew a pass. Blount singled through short, scoring Gorman. Byrne followed with another in the same spot and Tracey was out at the plate trying to score from second on the play.

The Beavers came back with a pair in the fifth. With one gone Roberts singled to second and went to the middle station on Wilcox's wide and needless peg to first. Trout cracked a hot one through the box and off King's shins for a single, scoring Roberts. Burrill singled to centre, sending Trout to third, from where Ort's sacrifice fly to centre scored him. Killilea died on a roller in front of the plate.

In the sixth the visitors tied the score. Isaac singled over second and moved up on Loud's sacrifice. Meyer grounded to King, Isaac being held, but Harkins sent the base-runner home on a clean single to left.

With Galm succeeding Roberts and Sterling taking Tracey's place the teams battled along without scoring until the Petes put the game away in their half of the tenth.

Time 2 hours. Umpire, Miller.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

It was a good finish.

Kelly had three hits yesterday, the third one driving in three runs.

King did not have a hit, but he got on the bases three times and scored twice.

Wilcox looks shaky around the keystone station. At that he had a pretty running catch of a fly to short right.

Dad Stewart drew a pass and also poled a single.

Swartling went in to bat for Tracey in the sixth and came through with a single to right.

Geo. Ort took the count when a low throw by Harkins to catch Welsh stealing bounded in front of the bag and struck the second-baseman in the neck.

The sprint from second base in the fourth innings seemed to take the ginp out of Tracey, although it was a wild heave by Wilcox that started the trouble.

K. Lee has a pretty fair looking ball club with a particularly good infield. He is after Tyson, who played with Hamilton last year to take Schneider's place at first, and with Isaacs, Ort and Killilea he has a good inner guard. The outfield is the weak looking part of the outfit, especially from the offensive side.

Belmont, who played ball on the Pacific Coast and who is now living in Lindsay, asked Manager Blount for a tryout. He was out in uniform yesterday.

The acquisition of Fried should speed up the Petes' infield. King will be shifted back to second.

When it comes to steady, accurate fielding, there isn't a first-baseman in the League that has anything on Jimmy Gorman.

Fried For The Petes

Ottawa Shortstop Will Be Lent to Manager Blount

Ottawa Journal—The Senators will have Frank Smykal back on either Thursday or Friday and "Ginner" Fried, at present holding down short for the Champs, will be lent to the Peterborough Club.

The Fort Wayne Club wired last night that their infield was still badly crippled and that Nespo, their second baseman, would not be back before Wednesday. As soon as he returns Smykal will be sent back to the Senators. There is little chance that he will join the squad at Hamilton, but may be here on Thursday for the opening game in the Brantford series.

As soon as he arrives Fried will be turned over to the Petes. Last year the Champions loaned Lill to Brantford, recalling him this season. Fried will, of course, remain the property of the Ottawa Club and will be subject to recall at any time. The Senators leave in a somewhat crippled condition, Lefty Rogers not being with the squad, while Poe Lill's pitching arm is not in shape.

BANDIT PREFERS PRISON TO DROWNING---MAKES CONFESSION

CALGARY, June 8.—Barefooted and hatless and clutching a fierce looking 30 calibre Luger gun in his hand, Afanasy Sokoloff, believed to be the third and most desperate bandit of the trio who shot and killed John Wilson, the paymaster of the Canada Cement Co., at Exshaw, about two weeks ago, was finally captured by the city police the other evening, after firemen flooded him out of a dugout under an empty shack on First street east, Tuxedo Park.

MAKES AN ADMISSION.

Heavy of jaw, with a dark complexion and an ugly, scowl on his face, he was brought in the patrol from Crescent Heights in the custody of Police Chief Cuddy and a squad of men, securely handcuffed. He was immediately locked in the cells, and about an hour later, barefooted, he was walked over to the Progress Photo studio, where he was photographed. A large crowd of citizens gathered around the photo gallery, speculating as to the identity of the bare-footed and manacled prisoner.

He has made no statement to the police outside of admitting that he is the third of the trio which was implicated in the shooting of Exshaw, and that he is the man the police have been searching for during the past week.

He smiled vacantly when asked by Dtskman Woodhouse as to his occupation, and replied, "Anything at all." He is a Russian and can speak English fairly well.

POLICE SURROUND SHACK.

The city police became suspicious that the wanted man was hiding in the vicinity of the shack where he as caught, from information that was given Detective Schoeppe by Joe Smith, the other bandit who was arrested and had the stolen money in his possession. Schoeppe was informed that if the hunted bandit came this way he would probably hide in the vicinity of Tuxedo park. At one time, it is said, Sokoloff resided in that district, as did the two other desperadoes.

Accordingly, shortly after five o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Chief Cuddy, Inspector Nutt, Inspector Richardson, Chief Inspector Carpenter, of the C.P.R., and Detectives Schoeppe, McDonald, Burroughs, William Turner, Ritchie, Milne and Symons surrounded the house.

CHIEF TAKES RISK.

Chief Cuddy, who believes in not asking his men to go where he will not lead, started in alone. He cautiously approached the shack, and with a well directed kick, forced the door. Expecting the bandit might have been upstairs, the chief made a personal inspection of the rooms on the first floor. There was no sign of anyone above, and the chief called for any one below to come up. There was no response, and the firemen were finally summoned.

The chief recognized the needless danger of sending men down the stairs to ascertain if the hunted man was there, so decided to call the fire department. Two streams were soon pouring into the cellar.

All the police, with the exception of one or two, were armed. Detectives Milne, Ritchie, McDonald, Symonds and Burroughs remained outside, while the chief and his men stationed themselves inside.

BASEMENT IS FLOODED.

A hose was laid to the basement and the water was poured in. Higher and higher came the water in the dugout, and higher and higher crawled Sokoloff up the small banks of the cellar. As the water continued to rise the prisoner showed signs of surrender. Soon the desperate man tapped lightly on the floor of the shack on which the chief and his men were standing, to show that he was ready to give up. A hole was made about the centre of the floor, and the prisoner was ordered to put his gun through it. This he did, and after it was taken his hands were grabbed by the waiting officers. Then a larger hole was made, just enough to allow his body to pass through, and gradually he was drawn up till he stood handcuffed on the roof of the den that had sheltered him.

The police were altogether about 15 minutes in taking the fugitive from the basement, the water being poured in about 10 minutes before he agreed to surrender.

EGCITING SCENE.

At six o'clock he was safely admittd to the cells at central headquarters, and a little over an hour later he was taken in the patrol to the mounted police barracks.

Great excitement prevailed in the district surrounding Tuxedo park as the armed police stood guard around the shack, and the firemen filled the dugout with water. A large crowd watched the proceedings, but the crowd did not trouble the police, as everyone kept a safe distance away. The scene presented, as the police worked in and out of the shack and the populace stood around, was a peculiar one for Calgary, and looked more like a moving picture detective drama than a reality.

Sokoloff gave his age as 27 1-2 years, and his birthplace as Russia. He has dark hair, brown eyes, and is about five feet 10 inches in height. He has a dark complexion, has heavy jaws, is thick set, and the third finger of his right hand is missing.

WAS WALKING ARSENAL.

His Luger gun was fully loaded, and he had 65 rounds of ammunition in his belt.

In the little dugout was found a loaf of bread and some sausage. An old pair of boots, presumably his, were also discovered in his hiding-place. There was no money there, and the meagre sum of $1 was found in his possession when he was arrested.

It is believed that the prisoner has been staying in the cellar on the hill since Saturday or Sunday, and some person is likely to get into trouble through feeding a fugitive from justice. There is little doubt but that the accused has been supplied with food, and it is said that one or two people saw him around the place Saturday and Sunday.

CHARGE OF MURDER.

How Sukloff got to Calgary is not known. He is a sturdy fellow, however, and he is likely to be in condition to stand much hardship and privation. He did not seem to be very much fatigued. It is something like 50 miles from Exshaw to Calgary.

Not at any time, either before or after he was apprehended did Sokoloff offer any resistance, other than to lie low in the dugout and refuse to come out, or give up his gun till the water practically filled up the place. Before he was taken to the barracks his description was entered in the charge book, and under the word "charge" and opposite his name was written "murder."

Ald. Hunt was right on the spot, too. He drove the police officers from the city to the old grocery store in his automobile.

BROWNIE CARSLAKE

The Australian motorcycle star rigged out in his leather suit, steel chain mask, and leather helmet, which he used in long 50—100 mile events.

TENNIS

The Charlotte Street Church tennis club had its formal opening last night with a tea on the church lawn Mrs. R. Neil and Miss Neil provided an excellent tea for the 35 members present, after which some games of tennis were played. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Neil and Miss Morrow. Altogether a very enjoyable time was spent, and the evening was closed by singing "She's a jolly good fellow." The young people are looking forward to one of these teas at least once a week.

GOLF

The men's golf competition is nearing to an end. The draw for the last round of the Stratton trophy is as follows:

N. H. Campbell vs. A. H. Stratton.
R. M. Hamilton, bye.

The game to be played by the end of the week.

The following is the 3rd draw for the Stratton Trophy, which must be played by Friday, 12th:

Mr. Aylmer vs. Mrs. R. S. Davidson.
Mrs. Trebilcock vs. Miss Dela Fosse.
Miss Kingan vs. Mrs. Tomlin.
Miss Dumble vs. Mrs. Goodwill.
Mrs. Coulthard—"bye."

Mrs. Gardiner and Miss M. Anderson, entertained the junior members of the Golf Club on Monday afternoon, assisted by Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. W. H. Hill. A medal round was played, which was won by Miss N. Hatton. Prize presented by Mrs. Gardiner.

Saturday, June 13th there will be mixed foursomes, ladies and gentlemen are requested to be at the club house not later than 2.45 p.m. The winners of the last competition cannot compete in this match.

REAL ESTATE ON THE MOVE

While factories may not be busy in Peterborough, and numbers of men are not at their regular occupations, real estate in Peterborough continues to turn over in large volumes. It may be that the shrewd investor is taking advantage of opportunities that are presenting themselves daily for bargains in both vacant and built on property.

A. Brown & Co., real estate dealers, report business for last week to the amount of $14,900, all city property. They also state the past two months' business is the largest ever recorded by the firm for a similar period.

Ford

If your pocket-book could talk --it would recommend the Ford. The man who practices economy and wants utility invests his dollars in the Universal car. He knows it serves his every purpose best and at lowest cost. And don't forget Ford service and guarantee.

$600 for the runabout; $650 for the touring car and $900 for the town car—f. o. b. Ford, Ontario, complete with equipment.

Will Not Ask For Indemnity

Examiner Special:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 9. — It was unofficially stated at the mediation conference to-day that the United States would not press for war indemnity from Mexico providing a peace agreement was made shortly. It is understood that President Wilson has personally wired that the United States will be satisfied with a signed and definite understanding which will provide for the ending of Huerta's regime and provision for general elections, conducted in independent tribunal, within two months. It is expected that the United States' proposals for settlement will be formulated into a proposition by the mediators which will be presented to both parties within this week.

LAST MEETING OF GEO. ST. LEAGUE

The last regular meeting of the Epworth League of the George Street Methodist Church until the rally on September 14 was held on Monday, June 8. The meeting was in charge of the missionary department, and was especially interesting. A duet by Miss Garbutt and Miss Armstrong was very much appreciated, after which Mr. Holn, of the Collegiate Institute, gave a lecture upon the life and work of the late Dr. Crosby, a Methodist missionary to our British Columbian Indians. It was illustrated by a large number of lantern views, which gave a very clear idea of the life of the Indians and what he has accomplished for them. Miss Fisher and Miss Beatty were elected as delegates to the Epworth League Convention at Buffalo. The League will hold a moonlight excursion on the steamer "Stony Lake," which will leave the new Peterborough wharf at 8 o'clock. There will be a refreshment booth and a good orchestra in attendance. The tickets are 25c each.

HOW WHITNEY GOVERNMENT SQUANDERS PEOPLE'S MONEY

In Nine Years It Has Increased Provincial Expenditure Four-fold—In 1904 Provincial Expenditure Was 5 1-2 Millions; in 1914 It Is 22 Millions.

In these days of progressive government an increased public expenditure necessarily follows all movements that seek to benefit the social condition of the people. Government cannot be maintained without expense, and efficient government costs money. But there is a time with all Governments when the line of demarcation between efficiency and extravagance is plain, even when efficiency costs too much, and there is expenditure without efficiency.

When the Whitney Government came into office in 1905 one of the chief planks in the platform was the "enormous extravagance of the old Government." The total expenditure for the year ended December 31, 1904, six weeks preceding the date of the election, was $5,267,455. Compare this with the total expenditure as shown by public documents for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1913, which amounted to $16,091,942, and, deducting from this the capital expenditure on the T. & N. O., the net amount is $15,141,942.

Up to Twenty-two Millions Now.

These figures alone are startling, but when the estimates for the fiscal year of 1914-15 are considered they pale into significance.

The main and supplementary estimates for 1914-15 were	$11,263,711
Further supplementary estimates	6,174,027
	$17,437,738
Add to these the statutory expenditure for the year, which, on the basis of 1913, amounts to	4,694,677
The total estimated expenditure for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1914, is	22,132,416

It is almost certain that the statutory expenditure for the current year will exceed that of 1913. The estimated capital expenditure on the Hydro-electric is $4,866,000, and adding to this $1,000,000 for extensions, to the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, it leaves a total net estimated expenditure for the ordinary services of the Province of $16,297,416 against a similar expenditure in 1904 of $5,267,453.

Liberals Were Economical.

Look farther back for a minute. When the Liberals came into power in 1872 the expenditure of the Province was $2,252,000, or about $1.50 per head of the then population. In 1904 it was $5,267,453—an increase in 32 years of about $1 per head of population. But upon the basis of 1914—even leaving out capital expenditure required for the Hydro-electric and T. & N. O. Railway—the expenditure of the Province has increased in ten years $11,039,963, or an average of $1,103,996 per year.

A statement of the figures for the Liberal and Conservative regimes best shows in comparison what each party can be held responsible for.

Take the ten years of Liberal administration preceding 1905:

Liberal Expenditure.

Year ending:
Dec. 31, 1895	$3,758,595
" 1896	3,703,389
" 1897	3,797,696
" 1898	3,803,982
" 1899	3,710,423
" 1900	4,099,739
" 1901	4,039,894
" 1902	4,345,094
" 1903	4,899,965
" 1904	5,267,455
Tota for 10 years	$41,227,196
Average for 10 years	$ 4,122,719

Follow this statement with the showing of the Conservative expenditure for the years from 1905 to 1914 (the latter year being estimated):

Conservative Expenditure.

Year ending:
Dec. 31, 1905	$ 6,930,181
" 1906	8,508,485
" 1907	10,143,578
" 1908	11,039,963
Oct. 31, 1909*	7,545,541
" 1910	12,594,980
" 1911	13,903,206
" 1912	13,887,601
" 1913	16,091,942
" 1914	22,132,416
Total for 10 years	$122,830,528
Average for 10 years	$12,283,053

*Ten months.

Extravagant and Unwarranted.

One does not have to analyze figures to prove that this expenditure is extravagant and unwarranted. A few statements will suffice. In 1904 the public debt of Ontario was $11,760,-053. In 1914 it was $62,267,295. In 1904 legislation cost $200,000, in 1914, the estimate is $332,000. Similarly the administration of justice has increased in cost from $388,000 to $853,-000; expenditure on Crown lands from $260,000 to $750,000.

The position of the Liberal party is simply this:

(1) Is the expenditure necessary for the proper development of the Province?

(2) Is the Government getting a dollar's worth for every dollar expended?

No one would object to needful public expenditure for useful public services if these tests were properly applied. The protest of the Liberals is not against necessary public expenditures for useful public services, but against extravagant and wasteful expenditures, not needed for the public service of the Province, and for which the Province is not receiving value in return.

Check these Colds in the Head with FOSSAL BALM

As you know, "catching a cold" simply means allowing the germs in a cold to catch you.

Usually these germs, which abound wherever people congregate, gain their first foothold in the mucous membrane lining the nasal passages. Here they multiply if unchecked, and quickly set up an inflammation. Then follows that smarting, burning, stuffed up, "headachy" feeling—that cold in the head that is so depressing and so likely to develop into something more serious.

Fossal Balm goes right to the spot, kills the germs and checks the cold. Fossal Balm is an antiseptic, healing ointment, put up in a collapsible tube with a long, nozzle-shaped opening. This little nozzle, inserted in the nostril, carries the Fossal Balm well up into the passage, where it quickly spreads over the inflamed membrane, destroys the germs that are causing the trouble, soothes the irritation, clears the passages, and gives grateful and lasting relief.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist or write for it direct to us. National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 4

ECHO OF NAVAL DEBATE.

Sir Wilfrid Takes Exception To Volunteer Sea Force.

OTTAWA, June 10.—An echo of the naval debate of a year ago was heard in the Commons yesterday when the House, dealing with the naval estimates, came to the consideration of Hon. Mr. Hazen's proposed naval volunteer force.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he doubted the wisdom of having two training stations on the great lakes. Canada was simply to be a training station for the royal navy. The Niobe and the no less despised Rainbow were to become training ships. He thought this surely was revenge on the Postmaster-General, the Minister of Inland Revenue and the Secretary of State.

In reply to questions, Mr. Hazen said 60 students were taking the three years' course at the Halifax naval college, and that they would serve in the Canadian navy. "When we have a navy."

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux said it was a policy "surreptitiously smuggled in." In the dying days of the session, the Government was reverting to the Laurier naval policy, and "perverting its sense in order to do mysteriously what they have not the courage to do openly." It was "trying to sneak a few Canadians into the Imperial navy, to please the frothing and seething Tingoes of Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal, who supported them against the farmers of the country in 1911."

Dr. Michael Clark rose to congratulate the Government on its new policy as far as he understood it. Mr. Lemieux had said that the Government was receding from its position. Well, there had been considerable receding all around. He did not notice any particular enthusiasm now for two fleet units.

"I hope," proceeded Dr. Clark, "that this is a step towards a policy which will be creditable to the country, towards a policy which will be worthy of a self-reliant people." He protested against a partizan view of the question.

Passed By Senate

C.N.R. Aid Bill Has a Majority of Fifteen Votes

FARCE SAYS CHOQUETTE

OTTAWA, June 10.—The bill to give effect to the agreement which was entered into between the Government and the C. N. R., whereby the Government will guarantee the bond issue of that railway, which is necessary to raise funds to complete the system, and in return for which the Government receives a forty-million dollar interest in the Mackenzie and Mann hundred million dollar enterprise, passed the Senate yesterday. The bill was given its third reading by a vote of 35 to 20.

The majority was not so great as that by which gave it a second reading, it being then 41 to 7, and probably this is accounted for by the fact that Senator Choquette made a violent speech in condemnation of those Liberals who had voted with the Government.

Thirteen Liberals voted in favor of the bill on third reading. They were Senators Bostock (Liberal leader), Mitchell, David, Ross (Moosejaw), McHugh, Frost, Thibodeau, Edwards, Derbyshire, Domville, Young, Watson and Talbot. All the Conservative senators voted in favor on the measure except Senator Montplaisir. He is the oldest member of the Upper House, having been appointed to the Senate in 1867 by Sir John Macdonald.

Four Liberals who voted for the bill on the second reading, but voted against it on the third reading, were Senators Pinet, Beith, Desmarais and Ross.

The analysis of the vote, therefore, is that 13 Liberals and 22 Conservatives voted for the bill on the third reading, with 19 Liberals and one Conservative against.

In the above estimate, Sir Lyman Melvin-Jones is counted as a Conservative. He has voted with the Government since his announcement that he had left the Liberal party.

In opening the debate Hon. Mr. Lougheed declared that Senator Bostock's objections were not well founded. The security the Government is getting is ample, he declared, and he did not believe it was reasonable that Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann should be required to pledge their personal fortunes for the successful completion and operation of a 10,000 mile railway system such as the C. N. R. The statement that they had built up colossal fortunes for themselves out of the construction of the road were not borne out by evidence.

On motion for third reading, Senator Choquette (Quebec) offered an amendment providing that the bill should be sent to the railway committee of the Senate, and that the committee should have the power to summon witnesses and require evidence to be given. Senator Choquette said it appeared that Mackenzie and Mann were stronger than all their opponents combined. Never had he seen such a farce as was being enacted in the Senate. He referred to the fact that Senators had voted to prevent farmers who had lost money in a business venture (the Farmers Bank), being recouped, and now when Mackenzie and Mann came along these same Senators voted to repay them for money lost in their financial ventures.

Senator Choquette's motion was seconded by Senator Jaffray (Toronto). He considered it most dangerous for the Government to enter into a partnership with the Canadian Northern, or what was virtually Mackenzie and Mann.

Senator Choquette's motion was voted down 35 to 20.

CAN FIND MINERALS.

Wireless Will Also Reveal Presence of Subterranean Springs.

GOETTINGEN, Germany, June 10.—The Society for Investigating the Internal Structure of the Earth yesterday declared it has succeeded in discovering by means of wireless telegraphy subterranean springs and ore deposits. It states that it also has ascertained their depth by the use of electrical waves, applied according to the method invented by Prof. Leimbach of this city.

Prof. Leimbach on March 23, 1911, used wireless telegraphy for underground communication between the potash mines in the northern Harz mountains, when he sent messages a distance of nearly 6 miles and a half at a level of 1,000 feet below the surface.

Father of Twenty-Four.

INGERSOLL, June 10.—Death yesterday removed Mr. William Crane, who was the father of twenty-four children, ten of whom were twins. His death followed an extended illness. Of the twins, one, Mr. John Crane of Ingersoll, is living. There are eleven surviving members of the family, seven sons and four daughters. The deceased came to Ingersoll nine years ago from Dereham Township, where he had resided for many years.

U. S. Revenue Cutter To the Rescue.

WASHINGTON, June 10. — The American revenue cutter Bear has been ordered to proceed from St. Michael's, Alaska, to Wrangell Island for the purpose of rescuing fifteen members of the crew of the Canadian steamer Karluk of the Stefansson Arctic expedition, who are marooned on that island. Captain Bartlett of the Karluk is at St. Michael's and will accompany the Bear on the rescue expedition.

Six Tragedies Reported During Day From Ontario Points.

BRANTFORD, June 10.—John Howarth, 14 years of age, son of Fireman Fred. Howarth, stepped into a hole while bathing in the Grand river yesterday afternoon and was drowned. When the body was recovered after 45 minutes search the pulmotor was used, but to no avail. Howarth could not swim.

Electrocuted and Drowned.

PORT COLBORNE, June 10—Two young lads, Fred Brennan and John Archer, each about 14 years of age, while bathing yesterday evening near the Government spur line, touched a live wire and were instantly electrocuted. Another lad, Wilbur Lewis, was badly burned, but will recover.

Head First Drowned.

TWEED, June 10. — Basil Frost, the 16-year-old son of Mrs. Ollie Frost, of Actinolite, was drowned while bathing in the river at that place yesterday afternoon.

Got Beyond His Depth.

GUELPH, June 10. — Getting beyond his depth while bathing above Goldie's dam in the Speed river yesterday evening, Roy Norrish, son of Harry Norrish, a Guelph merchant, was drowned. Young Norrish was with several other boys, but although he came to the surface twice and cried for assistance his young mates were unable to rescue him. He was 15 years of age and was unable to swim.

One at St. Mary's.

ST. MARY'S, June 10. — Oswald Mosley, 13 years old, was drowned in the Thames river yesterday afternoon. The lad had been in bathing with a number of other boys. He got in beyond his depth and was unable to swim.

Week's Delay Necessary.

RIMOUSKI, Que., June 10.—A delay of over a week in raising the bodies now lying in the sunken hull of the Empress of Ireland was decided on yesterday by Wm. W. Weatherspoon, the salvage expert, retained by the Canadian Pacific Railway for this work. Equipment of an elaborate nature must be brought from England before it would be safe to undertake the task, which has been made more difficult by reason of the depth of water above the wreck and its coldness.

SCREAMED WITH PAIN OF SCALDED LEG
And Foot. In Bad State. Inflamed and Festered. Could Not Sleep. Completely Cured by Cuticura Ointment in Short Time.

Middle La Have, N. S.—"My sister scalded her leg and foot very badly with a pan of boiling water. She suffered very much and her leg was in a bad state. The skin was red and inflamed and it festered. She suffered dreadful pain. She scalded it in the evening and could not sleep that night and could not bear to have anything near it.

"We tried ——— and ——— and then some ——— but everything seemed to make it worse and she just screamed for pain. I told my mother about Cuticura Ointment and we got a box immediately and bandaged up her foot and leg. Two applications made quite a difference and we kept on using it and in a short time her leg and foot were completely cured." (Signed) Miss L. Paris, May 17, 1913.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent dry, thin and falling hair, allay itching and irritation, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap, assisted by occasional dressings with Cuticura Ointment, are usually effective when other methods fail. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A single set is often sufficient. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Assembly Enlists

With Skipper Mr. Bowser's Abolish-the-Bar-Policy

A NATION-WIDE PROHIBITION

WOODSTOCK, June 10.—Temperance recommendations contained in the supplementary report of the committee on social service and evangelism were passed at last night's session of the Presbyterian assembly. They were in brief:

That the assembly instruct the board and its officers to co-operate with others in pressing for the complete suppression at the earliest possible date throughout Canada of the traffic in intoxicating beverages.

That the assembly commend the social service council of Canada for the institution of a campaign of education and total abstinence during the coming winter in which Rev. R. J. Patterson of Belfast is to take a leading part.

That the assembly instruct the board to endeavor to secure new activity on the part of the Dominion council of the Dominion Alliance, and if it should be found necessary to co-operate with sister bodies in forming a new organization which will aggressively lead in efforts for the securing of Dominion-wide prohibition.

That the assembly express their gratification at the rapid advancement in temperance sentiment as shown by the present position of the question and urge all ministers and congregations throughout the Dominion to set principle before party and to unite by vote and influence in the support of this movement for the immediate abolition of the open bar.

The proposal to amalgamate the committees of home missions and that of social service and evangelism was referred back to the committee for further consideration. They will report to the assembly before final adjournment. Dr. A. B. Grant, superintendent of home missions, said the matter had been under serious consideration by two special committees appointed by the larger committee for the purpose.

Dr. Shearer, convenor of the committee on social service and evangelism, drew the attention of the commissioners to its varied activities, pointing out that it conducts campaigns for moral reform, political and personal purity and makes a study of the problems of industrial life.

Dr. John Somerville, who moved to send the recommendation back to the committee to be reported on at the assembly next year, said the Women's Missionary Society was considering plans in which the social service and evangelism committee would be interested in.

The committee which has been conferring with Dr. A. B. Grant, concerning his resignation, has not been able to persuade him to change his mind. It is expected that his resignation will be normally dealt with by the general assembly to-day.

SAILORS IN BOAT.

Twenty-Six In One Craft Says Empress Survivor.

LONDON, June 10.—The Corsician reached Greenock at midnight and proceeded to Plantation Quay, Glasgow. There were 62 first-class passengers and 74 of the crew of the Empress of Ireland on board.

About fifty pressmen were taken to the Corsican by a tug. When they reached the ship they were conducted to the saloon. All enquiries as to further arrangements were met with the information that no definite program could be announced. The pressmen were not permitted to see the survivors of the crew of the Empress.

An Austrian steerage passenger, who was saved from the Empress, declared on his arrival at Greenock yesterday that he at length reached a boat, in which were 26 members of the crew, and in which there was room for eight or ten more people.

The Allan Line at Glasgow distributed fresh kits to all steerage passengers arriving there yesterday.

British survivors landed yesterday declined to make any statement regarding general details of the disaster.

IRISH MUST SETTLE IT.

They Could Take a Leaf Out of Canada's Book Says Professor.

LONDON, June 10.—Rev. Prof. Wrong of Toronto University, writing of the Canadian view of Ireland to The Times, points out that while Ontario Orangemen and Quebec Catholics still fulminate from time to time, they live together in the same state with no injury to each other. French Canada is probably the most clerical country in the world, he says, yet no one suggests any aggressions have been made on the rights of Protestants. Arguing from this Prof. Wrong urges that the only way of ending the present Irish difficulty is for Irishmen themselves to settle it by conferences and agreement among themselves.

Premier Asquith In Electrocut.

LONDON, June 10. — Directly the House of Commons reopened yesterday Premier Asquith was asked by Lord Robert Cecil concerning future proceedings in regard to Home Rule. The Premier, however, would furnish no information, saying it was impossible at present to make any statements.

NEW CABINET FORMED.

Sen. Ribot Has Virtually Completed His Task, He Says.

PARIS, June 10.—Senator Alexandre Felix Ribot announced yesterday that he had virtually succeeded in forming a new French Cabinet to succeed that of Premier Gaston Doumergue, which resigned as a result of the recent general elections.

Five of M. Ribot's colleagues are Senators and seven Deputies. The list as given unofficially by M. Ribot is as follows: Premier and Minister of Justice, Senator Alexandre Felix Ribot; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Senator Leon Bourgeois; Minister of Finance, Deputy Etienne Clementel; Minister of Marine, Deputy Theophile Delcasse; Minister of War, Deputy Joseph Noulens; Minister of Interior, Senator Paul Peytral; Minister of Public Instruction, Deputy Arthur Desseye; Minister of Public Works, Senator Jean Dupuy; Minister of the Colonies, Senator Emile Chautemps; Minister of Commerce, Deputy Marc Reville; Minister of Agriculture, Deputy Adrian Dariac; Minister of Labor, Deputy Maurice Maunoury.

Nationalists Organizing.

DUBLIN, June 10.—John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, issued a statement last night in which he emphatically denies the reports that the Irish volunteer movement is hostile to the objects of the Irish party and adds:

"Up to two months ago I felt that the volunteer movement was somewhat premature, but the effect of Sir Edward Carson's threats upon public opinion in England, the House of Commons and the Government and the occurrences at Curragh Camp, and unsuccessful gun-running in Ulster virtually altered the position and the Irish party took steps about six weeks ago to inform their friends and supporters that in their opinion it was desirable to support the volunteer movement. As a result it has spread within the last six weeks like a prairie fire and all the Nationalists in Ireland shortly will be enrolled."

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

The ghost of a smile twinkled in Power's eyes. He was quite alive to his friend's object in rattling along in this fashion: but it was an undeniable relief that he should be compelled to follow the lead given so cheerfully.

"To show that you are welcome I'll even drink your strong tea," he said. "Nor am I alone here, as you seem to imagine. There are three ladies in the house—Mrs. Moore and her daughters, Minnie and Margaret. Hand over your bohea to Mrs. Moore—she'll dispense it properly, and appreciate it, too, I have little doubt."

In such wise was the black dog care partly lifted off Power's shoulders. He had yet to learn that the human vessel cannot contain more than its due measure of sorrow. When it is filled to the brim no additional grief can find lodgment. Misfortune carried to excess has made cowards brave and given fools wisdom, and Derry Power was neither coward nor fool.

Mrs. Moore was naturally surprised when the visitor was introduced; but she hailed his presence with obvious relief. MacGonigal and Jake were invited to join the tea-party — and, at any other time, the cowboy's struggles with a tiny cup and saucer of delicate china, a microscopic teaspoon, and a roll of thin bread and butter would have caused a good deal of merriment. Mac, thanks to his training in the store, juggled easily with these implements, and there was an air almost of lighthearedness about the company before it broke up at Power's suggestion that he and Dacre might smoke while surveying some part of the ranch.

Dacre showed his knowledge of human nature by leading his friend on to talk of his mother. That way, he was sure, lay the waters of healing. While deploring the unhappy circumstances which attended Mrs. Power's death, which Dr. Stearn put down to failure of the heart's action, he swept aside her son's bitter self-condemnation.

"Death," he said, "is the one element in human affairs which may not be estimated in that general way. If your mother's heart was affected, she was far more likely to die of some sudden excitement than because of a not very poignant anxiety as to your prolonged absence from home. I suppose, in a sense, she knew where you were?"

"Yes. I—I deceived her with sufficient skill," came the morbid retort.

"Then you must school yourself to dwell on those long years of pleasant companionship in the past rather than this final parting, which you attribute to a cause that exists only in your imagination. I think Tennyson's philosophy is at fault in the line:

'Sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.'

I hold that Cowper peered more closely into the fiber and essence of humanity when he wrote:

'The path of sorrow, and that path alone,
Leads to the land where sorrow is unknown;
No traveller ever reached that blest abode
Who found not thorns and briars in his road.'

You were utterly unnerved and wretched when the news of your mother's illness reached you. You magnified your personal responsibility out of all reasonable proportion. I can see no proof of other influence than the fixed course and final outcome of a disease difficult to detect and incapable of cure."

They were nearing the Gulch. Power having chosen that direction because of the uninterrupted view of the surrounding country they would secure from the top of the rising ground.

"I wish I might accept your comforting theory," he said, more compoundly. "Somehow, I feel that I am to blame, or, if that is a crude expression, that I was made the instrument of some devilish act of retribution. However, I do not profess myself able to regard such a problem in a critical light to-day. You won't think me heartless if I inquire into the conditions which led up to the telegram you sent me in New York? I was too dazed that morning to understand clearly what had happened. Did you actually speak to Nancy herself over the telephone?"

"Yes."

"Well?"

"Are you really feeling up to the strain of hearing what took place?"

Power stopped suddenly, caught his friend's arm, and pointed to a small wooden structure erected in a singular position on the western side of the canyon.

"You have not forgotten the story I told you that last night in Newport?" he cried.

"No. I remember every word of it."

"Well, that little shack up there stands on the ledge where I rediscovered the lode after being nearly crushed to death. I crawled to within a few yards of this very spot; so resolved was I that no one should rob me of the price I was paid for Nancy. I am the same man now that I was then, Dacre — and in a very similar mood. Strain! I have been strained to the limit. I have thought of taking my own life; not from lack of capacity to endure further ills, but from sheer disgust at the crassness of things. At least, then, let me inquire into their meaning. What did she say to you?"

Despite his unwillingness to add to the heavy load Power had to bear, Dacre was not altogether sorry to get an unpleasing task over and done with. But he felt his way carefully; since he, too, was groping in the dark to a certain extent.

"Your telegram did not take me wholly by surprise," he said. "I knew that 'Nancy—you don't mind if I use her name in that way, do you?' Well, then, I had heard of her return, Mrs. Van Ralten rang me up to say that Mr. Willard and his daughter had arrived by the steamer in the early morning. I think I took such astounding news calmly enough; but I have a suspicion that the good lady herself was a trifle worried, and was only too glad to have the chance of announcing the fact of her friend's reappearance. She added that Nancy was ill, having been overcome by the terrific heat in New York, and I chimed in with the proper sentiments; though I have seldom been more bewildered than at that moment. Soon afterward your message came, and I began dimly to grasp the position. I seized the pretext of Mrs. Van Ralten's statement to call up Nancy's residence, and, by some sort of fortune, whether good or bad I can't determine, she herself answered. I concocted a suitable excuse; but she solved the difficulty at once by saying that, as your friend, I ought to know the facts. She had resolved to leave you, 'to put an end to a mad dream' was a phrase she used, and asked me to tell you that she adhered resolutely to the decision she had announced in a letter the previous day. She added that she was sailing in a steamer from Boston with her father that night, and hoped I would spread the impression that she had been ill, and needed a sea voyage. I can assure you, old chap, I was completely flabbergasted. Admiring her as I do, I would never have believed that she would act in that extraordinary manner had I not received the story from her own lips, if one may so describe a conversation by telephone. I was so horribly afraid lest some outsider in the hotel might overhear me that I dared not question her. The talk was studiously formal on her part, and I was so thoroughly cut up that I could not attempt to convey my impressions in your telegram. Moreover, as a diligent student of Shakespeare, was I not warned that

'Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news.'

Certainly, I was not quite in the position of Cleopatra's messenger, since I could only confirm a disaster already known to you; but I literally shrank from the obvious inferences. Then came MacGonigal's revelation of events here. I simply couldn't rest. After a miserable twenty-four hours of vacillation, I started for New York, calling at your hotel to make sure you had gone west. One thing more. A Chicago newspaper gave a list of passengers sailing from Boston in a Red Star liner. In it were the names of Nancy and her father."

For an appreciable time after Dacre had concluded neither man spoke. Then Power said quietly:

"Thus endeth the second lesson."

His companion was not one who indulged in platitudes. Some men, kind hearted and pitying, would have reminded him that he was still young, that life was rich in promise, that time would heal, or, at any rate, scar, the ugliest wounds. But Dacre said none of these things. He merely asked if Power meant to tell him what really happened in the Adirondacks. A good talker, he was also a good listener. Power would recover, he was convinced. He was not the first man, nor would he be the last, to clasp a phantom and find it air. Meanwhile, outspoken confidence should provide an efficient safety-valve for emotions contained at too high a pressure.

Power yielded to this friendly urging, but not instantly. Indeed, he astonished the Englishman by his next utterance.

"Nearly four years ago," he said, looking back at the ranch, "in that room where you found me to-day, I was reading 'The Autocrat' to Nancy one night, and a certain passage caught our attention. It ran somewhat like this: 'I would have a woman as true as death. At the first lie which works from the heart outward, she should be tenderly chloroformed into a better world.' Both of us laughed then, and now I know why we laughed. We were ignorant. Holmes, genial cynic that he was, understood women; he wrote a vital thing when he described the sort of lie that comes from the heart. I put trust in two women, and one of them has betrayed it. If I live another fifty years, I shall never understand why Nancy left me — never, never! I would as soon have thought of suspecting an angel from heaven of disloyalty as Nancy."

"Has she proved disloyal?"

"What else? I tried to find comfort in the belief that her father compelled her to accompany him by threatening to kill her if she refused. But, in these days, that sort of melodrama does not endure beyond its hour. She could have escaped him fifty times during the last six days. She could have appealed to you for help. Mary Van Ralten would at least have shielded her from murder. Yet, what are the facts? In a letter to me she pleaded duty as an excuse. She must have had some similar plea in her mind when she spoke to you. And she has gone to Europe—to rejoin Marten!"

He broke off with a gesture of disdain. He was in revolt. The statue which had glowed into life under the breath of his love was hardening into polished ivory again.

"May I see that letter?" said Dacre.

"Yes. Here it is."

The older man read and reread Nancy's sorrow-laden words.

"She tells you her poor heart is breaking—I believe her—in every syllable," he said.

"Believe her—when she prates of duty—to Marten?"

"I don't profess to understand, yet I believe. I do, on my soul!"

Power's face grew dark with a grim humour that was more tragic than misery. "Am I to follow—by the next steamer?" he demanded.

"No. She will come back—send for you. The present deadlock cannot last."

Again Power showed his disbelief by a mournful grimace. "I am so deeply beholden to your friendship that I claim the privilege of saying that you are talking nonsense," he said. "She vowed the fidelity to me which I gave unreservedly to her; but what sort of inconstant ideal inspired her faith, that it should be shattered to atoms by the first real test? Could it ever trust her again? If it were possible, which it is not, that some new whim drove her back to America, am I a toy dog to be whistled to heel as soon as her woman's caprice dictates? To please her father, she married Marten; to placate her father, she has gone back to Marten; to gratify some feminine impulse, she flung herself in my arms; when impulse, or duty as she calls it, again overcomes reason, she may summon her obedient slave once more. Would I run to her call? I don't know. My God! I don't know."

"I'm sure you don't," was the quiet response; "nor do you know how unjust you are being to her, leaving me out of the question altogether. You are like a dismasted ship in a storm, driven this way and that by every cross sea, yet drifting hopelessly nearer rock-bound coast. Yet men have saved their lives even in such desperate conditions. At the worst, short of breath, they have scrambled ashore, bruised and maimed, but living. Now, I ask you to suspend judgment for a few days, or weeks. Enlightenment may come—is must come—perhaps from a source you little dream of now. Suppose I practice what I preach, and talk of something else. I think I have whipped you out of a lethargy that was harmful, and, in so far, have done you good. But I'm not here to discuss problems of psychology which are insoluble—for the present, at any rate. Tell me something of your property, of the mine, of Bison. What delightful character-types you picked up in MacGonigal and that picturesque looking cowboy. And how did the latter gentleman lose the thumb off his left hand? Was it a mere accident? I hope not. I rather expect to hear a page out of the real history of the wild and woolly West."

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C.—"For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish."—Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B.C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

How a Widow Got a Pension

It was a lucky chance which led to Mrs. Adam Melville, Leslie, who has just passed away at the age of seventy-five, being pensioned by the late Mr. Charles Anderson, papermaker. When refusing to subscribe to a birthday presentation to a wealthy gentleman, Mr. Anderson said he would rather help a poor person. Mrs. Melville was mentioned as being a deserving widow whose husband had been a workman at the Fettykil Mill, and Mr. Anderson at once said he would give her a pension of three half-crowns a week.

The King's Surgeon

The King's surgeon, Sir Alfred Fripp, is appointed to the household of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife.

The story of how Sir Alfred came into touch with the Royal Family is interesting. It is said that King George's brother the late Duke of Clarence, had dislocated his ankle while quartered at York with his regiment. The Duke's soldier servant ran round to six of the town doctors on the morning of the accident, and all were out. But the seventh, the unknown Mr. Fripp, was in, and he went post-haste to the Duke's "digs" to attend him. King Edward, then Prince of Wales, visited his son during his enforced laying up, and found the young surgeon in constant attendance.

"I like that fellow Fripp," the Prince said in an undertone one morning to his equerry.

Aloud he said, "What hospital do you belong to, Fripp?"

"Guy's, your Royal Highness," was the answer.

"I shall see that you get on, Fripp," said the Prince. And he did.

ARE YOU GOING TO MUSKOKA THIS SUMMER?

If so take the 10.30 a.m. fast express from Toronto, daily except Sunday, via Grand Trunk Railway, and arrive Muskoka Wharf 1.45 p. m., where direct connections are made with steamers for points on Muskoka Lakes. This train carries Parlour, Library, Buffet car and first-class coaches, and passengers are assured of a comfortable ride along the most interesting route to Muskoka Wharf, which is the origina gateway to the far-famed Muskoka Lakes.

The curative odour of balsam and pine, and the preponderance of water area to land surface, together with the high altitude (1000 feet above the sea), render hay fever an impossible condition and perfect immunity from this annoying ailment is assured.

Return connection is made with train leaving Muskoka Wharf 10.20 a.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving Toronto 2.55 p.m.

Tourist tickets at low fares are now on sale to Muskoka Lakes' points, good for stop-over and valid to return until November 30th, 1914.

LUCKY AT CHEATING DEATH.

On One Gun Testing Occasion a Sudden Impulse to Run, Which He Obeyed, Was the Means of Saving His Life—A Magazine That Got Its Second Wind.

One of the most thrilling adventures in my experience took place at the government proving grounds at Sandy Hook, N. J., when the United States government was testing maximite before adopting it.

Near a light frame building in which I was filling shells with maximite, a ten inch gun was being tested. A number of shells had been fired from the big gun. Just as I had concluded my work and started for the wharf to take the government tug for New York, the signal was sounded for another shot. I was walking along a stretch of railway track directly behind the gun.

At that instant I remembered that several years before, when one of these guns was being tested, the breechlock had blown out, pitched through the bombproof and killed six officers and men, but I argued with myself that the chance was infinitely remote that the breechlock would be blown out of the present gun on this discharge at the very instant I was in range, but upon a sudden impulse I ran with all my might.

The gun was discharged. I looked round just in time to see the huge breechlock pass through a building near the one in which I had been at work. It came up the track, striking and breaking one of the rails over which I had passed. It ricocheted against the top of the old granite fort and glanced high into the air. A shower of shrubs and debris fell over a wide area and many fragments struck the ground close to me.

I walked back to the scene of the accident and found that the windows in the little building where I had been filling maximite shells were completely riddled with partly burned cylinders of smokeless powder that had been blown from the gun.

I once had another curious experience at Sandy Hook during some trials of the Maxim automatic machine gun.

Among the severe tests to which the gun was subjected was one intended to simulate what might occur in making a landing upon the seashore, where the mechanism of the gun might get filled with sand. The test is known as the "sand test."

The gun being tested at the time was of the kind using black gunpowder cartridges, for it was before the introduction of smokeless powder. There was so much energy in the recoil of the barrel that a great deal of sand could be thrown into the mechanism without interfering with the working of the gun.

The commanding officer did not arrive to see the gun fired until after the board in charge had completed the test. He then appeared and demanded that the firing should be continued for his benefit. The chairman of the experimental board demurred, saying that the gun had passed through the test admirably and that it was too bad to fire it more than was absolutely necessary, with its mechanism filled with sand. But the commander insisted.

A schooner was approaching near the line of fire. The commander said he only wanted to see a few rounds fired and that the firing would be completed before the schooner would come within range. Accordingly a belt of 333 rounds was inserted, and the firing began. After perhaps fifty rounds were fired the command was given "Cease firing," but the gun kept right on. It afterward proved that the trigger was blocked by sand, so that it was impossible to stop the gun. The schooner came into range, and the bullets flew over and around her.

My assistant, who was firing the gun, did his best to work the trigger and stop it. It did not occur to him on the instant to unlimber the gun and swing it round so as to bring the schooner out of range. As the gun fired at the rate of 750 shots a minute the firing was over inside half a minute.

Fortunately no damage was done. When the same gun was undergoing a sand test at Annapolis, Md., I came very near being killed by it.

The gun had passed successfully through a severe sand test, but the officer in charge wanted to see whether he could put enough sand into the gun to stop it. So he had the gun box filled full. The gun fired about 150 rounds and then stopped. My assistant threw down the safe—that is to say, locked the trigger, so that it could not be pulled—and began clearing the gun box.

Thinking that the gun was safe, I was just about to step round in front of it. Suddenly it fired a dozen or more shots as close to me that my clothes were seared by the powder gases.

One of the tests made at Annapolis was to fire a Maxim gun vertically into the air. We had fired a couple of hundred shots in this manner, when something struck very near us. It then occurred to the officer in charge that what goes up must necessarily come down. Firing ceased, and we sought cover for a few minutes to avoid the leaden rain.—Hudson Maxim in Youth's Companion.

ROSS A BIG LANDLORD.

Head of Rifle Company Holds Scottish Baronetcy.

The baronetcy of Balnagown, of which Sir Charles Ross, the head of the Ross Rifle Co., is the present holder, is Nova Scotian in its origin and dates back for a considerable period. Balnagown Castle, the family seat, is situated in the district designated Easter Ross, which is the most fertile portion of the county. In fact, Easter Ross is the north and Midlothian in the south of Scotland are considered the two finest agricultural areas in the British Isles. The castle, though lying close to the Highland Halfway line to the north, is so enclosed with towering trees that it is passed unobserved by the railway traveler. It is a residence that the owner may well be proud of. Beautifully situated in the garden of the county, it is a combination of the modern and the mediaval. As one approaches the front through shrubberies and beautifully-kept lawns, the castle appears a modern enough structure, but towards the west, north, and east it is typical of other times with its stone buttresses, narrow winding stone stairs, and small mullioned windows overlooking a winding stream deep down below.

The bulk of the Balnagown lands do not lie in that quarter of the country; they extend westwards with but slight interruptions through the parishes of Tain, Edderton, and Kincardine for a distance of close upon 50 miles, terminating on the watershed of Scotland, with a mean breadth of from six to eight miles. In addition to all these broad acres in Ross-shire, Sir Charles is also owner of Bonnington estate on the Clyde, near Glasgow, so that he may fairly lay claim to being one of the great landowners of Scotland, over and above being president of the Ross Rifle Company. On the Easter Ross portion of the estate there are numerous large farms, and further inland well on to 300 small tenants and crofters. Towards the west the estate runs into mountainous ground, devoted to sheep, grouse and deer. Some of Sir Charles' deer forests yield from 50 to 100 stags each season, as well as good bags of small game besides. There are about a dozen shootings in all on the estate, with as many shooting lodges. Sir Charles himself, though one of the best shots in Scotland and keen on deer-stalking, does not reserve much shooting ground for himself. His Quebec engagements do not admit of his spending very much of his time in Scotland, yet each autumn at the close of the shooting season he contrives to have nine or ten days at deer-stalking, bringing down in that brief period as many head as the ordinary shooting tenant can in an equal number of weeks.

Sir Charles is proud and fond of his Highland estate and often deplores how the exigencies of modern conditions entail on him the necessity of spending so much of his time so far away from it, for, as he himself frankly admits, a landed proprietor in Scotland is now little better from a pecuniary point of view than a sub-collector of taxes, so heavy have local and imperial burdens become.

Whilst the gross revenue from Balnagown estate runs somewhere between 15 and 18 thousand pounds sterling per annum, management and local and imperial taxation cut deeply into this income, leaving the honor of being a landowner a somewhat barren one now that feudal feelings and feudal obligations have died out. Time was, even in the not very distant past, when the relationships between the Highland laird and his tenants were of a much more intimate and amicable nature than now. This was, however, before the period of royal commissions for fixing fair rents and adjudicating such other disputes as might arise between the laird and his tenants. It was then man to man, with no go-betweens, and an occasional tiff or small dispute once disposed of only left the laird and his tenants better and warmer friends than before.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Are The Original Pill For The Cure Of Backache, Lame Back, a Weak Back Or Any Other Kidney Trouble.

The fact that Doan's Kidney Pills are the original Kidney Pills has not prevented the placing of other preparations in pill form upon the market under the name Kidney Pills. It is necessary, therefore, that all wishing to secure the curative effects which have made Doan's Kidney Pills so popular everywhere, should see that the trade mark, the Maple Leaf, appears on the wrapper. Without this trade mark you are not getting the genuine Kidney Pills as originally placed before the people by Mr. James Doan, as shown by the following declaration.

TUMOR IN THE STOMACH

Completely Removed When She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

SILVERTON, ONT., April 4th, 1913.—"Some years ago, I was sick in bed and thought I was going to die. I had a growth in my stomach, which the doctors said was a Tumor and they said that the only thing to do was to go to the hospital and have the tumor cut out. I dreaded an operation although both doctors said it was the only cure. I said I would die before being operated on.

At this time, my mother in Alvinston sent me some "Fruit-a-tives" and insisted on me to try them as she had heard of another woman who had been cured of a similar growth in the stomach by taking "Fruit-a-tives".

To please my mother, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" with the happy result that they cured me. I have not been to see a doctor since and my health is first class.

I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" every time I get a chance and I will be glad to have you publish this letter as some other woman may now be a sufferer from the same trouble and "Fruit-a-tives" will cure her" MRS. A. McDONALD.

France and the Frenchman.

The French are probably the most patriotic people in the world. The average half educated Frenchman is firmly persuaded that his country is an oasis of civilization surrounded with illimitable stretches of barbarism.

This is what he believes, but his courtesy prevents him from being offensive about it. In his estimation the rest of the world simply does not count. He knows that there are other parts of the world, but they are not worth his while to visit or to inquire about. That is why the Frenchman rarely travels and never emigrates. He will ask you with surprise why he should travel, seeing that he is already in France and that he has no taste for savages or wild beasts. And as for its government, it is notoriously the best in the world, with a future so glorious as to defy the imagination. He will say all this with a disarming charm. He pities you for being a foreigner, but he does not hate you on that account, for, of course, you cannot help it.—Argonaut.

Human Hair Trade.

The trade in human hair is a big industry. Italians easily take the lead in this trade, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland. Several times a year these human hair merchants send their agents around to collect supplies, which are usually immense, for hair growing is cultivated on a very large scale by these women and yields a good remuneration to the producer. Two crops of hair a year and looking none the worse for the loss is not extraordinary among the peasant women. Half the hair at the back of the head is shorn off, the remaining half being drawn over the exposed part and dressed in such a manner as only to be detected on very close scrutiny and by those experienced in the trade.

How the Great Flood Whelmed Johnstown, Pa.

THIS is the anniversary of the Johnstown (Pa.) flood. On Memorial Day, twenty-five years ago, as a result of excessive rains and a cloudburst, the dam of the South Fork Fishing and Gunning Club gave way, carrying an enormous quantity of water down the Conemaugh River.

This river flows in a circuitous route through a contracted valley in the Allegheny Mountains, on which the city of Johnstown stands. The flood poured through the town, practically annihilating it in every few minutes. Almost no warning had been received to the impending disaster, and the loss of life shocked the country as no event had shocked it since the civil war.

The generosity of the nation poured itself out in measures of succor. Millions of dollars were raised and relief expeditions were sent from all sections of the United States, and in the dark days that followed charity and sympathy reached a pinnacle never before attained in this country. More than two thousand bodies were recovered, although the loss of life was probably greatly in excess of that. The property loss was $10,000,000.

CONEMAUGH Lake, which held a larger volume of water than any other reservoir in the United States, burst through its dam at three o'clock in the afternoon of May 31, 1889, making a break three hundred feet wide by the terrific force of its rain swollen waters, and rushed through the valley of the Conemaugh in a vast boiling flood that shot down the ravine like an arrow.

It took an hour to empty the great reservoir. The flood swept toward the village of South Fork, demolished all the houses and with increased strength and velocity rushed on to Johnstown.

The houses at Mineral Point were lifted from their foundations by a side bore of the flood and added to the onrushing mass. Next in its path the deluge devoured the village of Woodvale, opposite to Johnstown. Its five hundred houses were ground to fragments and all that remained of the village were a pier or two of its bridge.

It took less than two minutes to work this havoc. The steel mills of the Cambria Iron Company were full of ponderous machinery, but the flood picked it up like chips. A locomotive weighing twenty tons was carried a mile and deposited on the Johnstown flat.

A catapult of water, half a mile in width, more than thirty feet in height and carrying with it a seething mass of crushed houses, huge trees, logs, machines, rocks, etc., all entangled with masses of barbed wire from the Cambria works and intermingled with human bodies, buried itself upon Johnstown. The torrent must have travelled the distance through the valley from the reservoir, about eighteen miles, in not more than seven minutes.

At Johnstown the flood made its attack in two wings. One wing scoured the Johnstown flat, rushing headlong across the southeast portion of the city to Stony Creek, already greatly swollen by recent rains. The other wing cut several paths through the heart of the city, sweeping all before it and carrying a great mass of débris straight forward to the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge on the western border of Johnstown.

The viaduct withstood the shock of the flood and the wreckage piled up about the bridge, while the water was hurled back on the centre of the town. Its collision with the left wing, which had encircled the other side of the town and returned after destroying two more suburbs, was so terrific that it completed the destruction of Johnstown. The two torrents came together with indescribable ferocity. A terrific whirlpool was formed and the wreckage was ground to atoms.

But Johnstown has risen from its flood an infinitely greater city than in the days before the disaster. Her present population of 55,574 is twice as large as was the population of the city before the flood. The value of her products has increased from $21,304,745 in that fatal year to $48,105,775 in the year 1914. According to the last commercial census Johnstown has now 10,578 workmen, whereas in 1889 there were only 5,600 workmen in her factories. Before the waters of the Conemaugh and the waters of Stony Creek combined to lay her low, a broken, ruined city, Johnstown and the tributary towns and villages which lay about her in the Conemaugh valley constituted a prosperous and happy stretch of country, a shining point of prosperity in any business map of the country.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Story of a Woman With a Mona Lisa Smile

By F. A. MITCHEL

Royal Twining and I were bosom friends. Roy was accustomed to confide in me in almost everything, and as soon as he became engaged he took me to see his fiancee, Marjorie Gooding, or Marjy, as she was usually called, struck a vein of curiosity in me the moment I saw her. It is difficult—indeed, impossible—for me to explain why. I can only say that she seemed strange to me. She had heard a great deal of me from her lover, and when she turned those singular eyes of her upon me it was evident that I was an object of interest to her.

When Roy and I left Miss Gooding he spoke not a word to me as we walked along together, and yet I knew he was saying mentally, "Well, what do you think of her?" I did not reply to the unexpressed question for some moments, for the simple reason that I did not know what I thought of her.

"It is impossible, Roy," I said presently, "for me to pass judgment on the lady of your choice without knowing more of her, and I am sure you don't wish me to say pleasant things got up for the occasion. Have you observed anything—well, mystical about her?"

"Mystical? How mystical? What's mystical?"

I saw at once that the something in his fiancee that affected me strangely was a vacuum in him. I immediately switched off.

"Oh, I don't doubt that she will make you an excellent wife. Judging simply from appearances, she will supply certain deficiencies there are in you and you will pull together nicely."

What I meant by Roy's deficiencies was that he was usually under the influence of his passions. One of them—games of hazard—was a very important matter with him, and I expected that when married his wife would have trouble with him on account of it. Naturally he tried to induce me to name the deficiencies. I did not hesitate to mention the one I have referred to—the gambling passion.

Roy and Miss Gooding were married. Roy was well fixed in the matter of income; the wife had nothing. They went abroad on a wedding trip and remained there a long while. They had been there about a year when Mrs. Twining wrote me about Roy. She said he had joined a club in Paris where gambling was much in vogue and had lost considerable money. She said further that she wished she could get her husband back to America, where I would help her in the matter, for she was aware that I had considerable influence on Roy.

The letter was evidently an appeal for me to come over to Paris and save what remained of Roy's fortune. There were reasons besides my interests in the Twinings to induce me to go over. I was a man of business and had been working too hard, with the result that I was threatened with nervous prostration. The winter was a cold one, and my doctor had advised me to quit work and go to a warm climate, recommending a trip to the Mediterranean and Nice as a stopping point. This would help me to draw Roy away from his club in Paris. I wrote him to meet me in Nice.

The Twinings had been in Nice a fortnight when I arrived. I found Mrs. Twining there, but not her husband. He had gone to Monte Carlo. I had evidently got Roy out of the frying pan and put him in the fire. His wife told me that he had lost nearly everything he had in Paris, and she was prepared to hear that he had lost the rest at Monte Carlo. He had asked her on arriving at Nice to go there with her, hoping to recoup. She had refused, and he had gone alone. She did not break down under the ordeal, but talked about it in a very businesslike way. I proposed that we should go together to Monte Carlo and attempt by a united effort to get Roy away in time to save the remnant of his fortune. When I said this the lady looked at me with a very singular expression. I had seen a copy of the celebrated picture, the "Mona Lisa," whose disappearance from the Louvre had attracted so much attention, just which has been restored to its place there, and the look on Mrs. Twining's face when I made this proposition reminded me of that portrait.

"No," she said. "I will remain here. My influence with him has not been sufficient to prevent this misfortune, and my presence with him would do more harm than good. If there is anything left when you get there you may save it."

There was the same sad look in the eyes, the same peculiar smile on the lips, as those of the "Mona Lisa," and they were as unintelligible to me on the living face as in the portrait. What prompted me to ask the question I cannot explain, but I said:

"Do you think you could influence me to do your bidding?"

"I am quite sure I could."

The smile with which she said this reminded me more than ever of the smile on the lips of the "Mona Lisa."

I accepted her suggestion and went over to Monte Carlo. Mrs. Twining had informed me that, the day before my arrival at Nice, Roy had changed his hotel. She did not say why, but I saw by her look she inferred that he had been called upon to pay his bill and had not the means to do so. She had not yet been informed of his new address. I arrived at Monte Carlo about 9 o'clock in the evening and, after registering, went immediately to the gambling pavilion, expecting to find Roy there. I was surprised not to see him and was about to leave when an attendant stepped up to me, asked me my name and, upon my telling him, said that I was wanted at the telephone. On taking up the receiver and asking who was waiting for me Roy said:

"I'm not feeling well enough to go to the pavilion tonight, and I wish you to lay a stake for me. Put $10 on the red and leave it there till I send word for you to take it off."

"Roy," I said, "I must see you at once. At what hotel are you staying?"

I waited for a reply, but no reply came.

"Roy," I called—"Roy, are you there?"

All was as silent as the grave. I did not know where he was stopping, but resolved to go at once and search the hotels for him. As I was about to leave the pavilion the face of Mrs. Twining came up before me, and somehow I fancied it as saying: "Do as Roy has bid you. If you don't you may have cause to regret it. If you do it may result in a run of luck." I hesitated and turned toward the room where a crowd about the roulette table listened to the monotonous call of the croupier, "Make your bets!"

I went in, stood over the table for a few moments, looking on, then took a United States gold eagle from my pocket and placed it on the red. I felt that I would rather lose that amount than refuse Roy's request. After it was gone that would end the matter, and it was sure to go at last, because I would obey his instructions not to take it off till he sent word to do so.

The ball spun and the red won, many times the amount of the stake—I have forgotten how many, for I have never bet a cent since. And I kept on winning; I have forgotten how many times the red won before the same attendant who had summoned me to the telephone tapped me on the arm and told me that Mr. Twining had telephoned I was to take the stake off the red and place it somewhere else. I remember moving a heap of money several times after that, but where I placed it I don't know, though I do know that every time I moved it there was a greater abundance. I have lost remembrance, too, of the instructions I received or whether I received any instructions after the first or second, nor can I positively assert that I was not playing on my own responsibility. There came at last a sudden awakening, and I seemed to realize what I had been doing. I saw a heap of money on the table and, gathering it up, bore it away.

On reaching my hotel I went immediately to my room, locked my winnings in a bureau drawer and went to bed. But I did not go to sleep till morning. Through the long hours I was haunted by that singular face, at times the "Mona Lisa," at times Mrs. Twining, and finally dozed off with the two confused.

When I awoke in the morning and went downstairs the landlord asked me if I knew the American who had killed himself the day before. I asked the name and was told that it was Twining.

This is all the statement I have to make except that Twining was dead when I heard his voice. His wife when I saw her again had that same "Mona Lisa" look on her face—and I fancied I could see traces of the smile. But that should naturally be referred to the imagination.

The money I had won was about half what Twining had lost after his marriage. I was obliged, literally, to force Mrs. Twining to take it.

There are three hypothetical explanations:

First.—Was I not in an abnormal physical condition? Did I not create most of the experience and win a lot of money at gambling?

Second.—Did Twining in the spirit play through me in order to provide for his wife?

Third.—Did Mrs. Twining cause my experience?

If asked to which of these three suppositions I lean I should reply, "To the third." But whether or not she did it unconsciously or what was the secret of her power over me I have no idea.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

WHEN THE GEESE GO NORTH.

A Study In the Wild Life of Canada's Marsh Lands.

"Honkey-honk, honkey-honk, honkey-honk." At the sound the marsh grasses stir, the sullen ice groans and moves slowly out on the current that has mastered it, the drab marsh-scape assumes a look of waking life.

The cries of the frantic voyagers grow up closer, more distinct through the lifting dawn, until that speeding wedge stands out against a background of rosy massive; closer, closer, until the whining whistle of strong wings comes to the watcher, and between the long-drawn notes of the wild birds he hears the little muttered calls of assurance from the leader and the low answers of his followers.

That watchful old gander has piloted his flock many long leagues in search of the big, northern marsh field, and the flock has followed him trustingly as all day long, day by day, he has formed the apex of that swift-moving triangle as it ape the track of the sky at the rate of sixty miles or more an hour. He has breasted and split the air-currents for them, kept vigilant watch for them, guided them, assured them by low-voiced calls when, weary with the long flight, they have faltered a little in the line, and finally, at close of day, has led them down to safe feeding fields.

He has watched while they fed, standing a little apart from them with grey body erect and long neck stretched high as his sharp eyes probed the reedy grounds in search of danger signs. He has not fed until after they had fed and settled down with throaty murmurs to preen their wind-buffeted feathers and rest.

Now the long flock are speeding north again. As the mauve in the sky deepens to crimson, the grey leader gives a call that rings far out across the drab world of bog and water. He has sighted the far-stretching shallows that means their long journey done.

Now, wild and clamorous, ring out the cries of the birds as they voice their gladness; the long, double line of wings which move in perfect unison fan the air a little quicker as the old leader twists and drops closer to the black field beneath.

Far down, just outside a clump of rushes, the big gander has sighted some of his own kind and has heard their answering calls when he sent forth the welcome tidings to his flock. Now he twists closer in towards the rush-clump and honks again and the decoy geese below stretch their long necks upward and greet him and his an invitation to settle among them.

The big flock is sweeping in now, sweeping closer, closer to the rush hide in which crouches the shooter, hoping and waiting. Three hundred yards from the blind the big birds pitch and come down and in against the light breeze on strong-set wings.

The shooter braces himself and lifts the heavy goose-gun, but he is to take no toll of the birds that have faced dangers to get back to their own. Just outside of the danger zone, the watchful old leader of the flock has scented danger. With a wild honk he twists upward and out, his lightened flock clamoring in his wake.

Higher and higher the wild geese ascend until far beneath them the wide expanse of marsh land sweeps like a great plain dotted with shallow lakes and veined with white water-courses, and just as the sun lifts above the scraggy woods far eastward, the old gander leads his weary, hungry followers down to the big muckiands where there is food and safety.

The wild geese have gone north.—A. P. McKishnie in Canadian Courier.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

SCHEME TO GO ON

Church Union Negotiations to Be Continued By Assembly

MAJORITY REPORT ADOPTED

WOODSTOCK, June 10. — By a vote of 286 to 109 a majority of the Presbyterian General Assembly yesterday afternoon adopted a resolution in favor of continuing for two more years negotiations with the Methodist and Congregational churches in the cause of church union. The motion embodied a request that the Methodists reappoint their union committee which was dissolved last year and demand a vote of the congregations.

The minority report, which asked that the matter be shelved was defeated on a vote of 297 against 117 for. Another amendment, moved by Dr. McQueen, of Edmonton, along substantially the same lines as the minority report, was defeated by a vote of 278 against, 114 for. Dr. A. S. Grant did not vote.

The discussion on the church union question was opened yesterday morning by Dr. E. Scott, of Montreal, who presented the minority report. He reviewed the history of the fight for union since it commenced twelve years ago. "We cannot see at the present time that organic union is right," he said.

"I cannot vote for church union because I will be coercing a minority into a union which they do not want," stated Dr. A. S. Grant during a short address. He did not think that it was time for church union, and argued that the different departments of the church could not be successfully carried on in the divided state that was in the opinion of some likely to follow organic union.

The discussion was closed by a short address by Dr. Clark, who moved the adoption of the motion. He could not understand the position assumed by Dr. Grant and advised the commissioners not to take it seriously. He appealed to the minority in closing to set aside the spirit of contention during the next two years and to cultivate the spirit of the Lord.

Government Aid For Wreck Victims.

OTTAWA, June 10.—The Government has decided to vote $50,000 for the sufferers of the Empress of Ireland wreck. Additional supplementary estimates to cover this amount were laid on the table of the House yesterday morning by Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister. There were also an additional amount asked for, of $10,000 to carry on the enquiry into the Empress of Ireland disaster.

GASPE HAS SUFFERED.

Property Ashore and Afloat Damaged In Hurricane.

QUEBEC, June 10.—A special despatch to this city from Barachois de Malbay, Gaspe County, says that in a hurricane 250 fishing boats rode their anchors in the harbors where they were sheltered and were smashed to pieces in the breakers and on the rocks. The damages arising from the loss of all the fleet and from houses and barns being wrecked on shore will approach half a million dollars.

The steamer Canada of the Gaspe Line was on Chaleurs Bay when the hurricane struck her and she came close to foundering out at sea. She is badly damaged.

Windmills on shore were torn from their foundations, barns were reduced to mere kindling wood and a number of houses were overturned.

No loss of life is reported in the section.

Six inches of snow fell at various points along Chaleurs Bay and Gaspe coast.

Death Summons Wm. Armstrong.

TORONTO, June 10. — William Armstrong, one of Toronto's most famous artists, died at his residence at the Priory, Augusta avenue, last night.

Mr. Armstrong, who was in his 82nd year, has lived in Toronto for over fifty years. There was no figure more prominent in Toronto's artistic world, many of his paintings being in the collection of J. Ross Robertson.

He was for some time water-color artist to The Illustrated London News, England.

Bookkeeping Waste of Time.

Of Lord Strathcona, Agnes C. Laut writes in The American Review of Reviews: "There is a curious memory of him as a trader in Labrador. He would not keep books. Relief at Once Cure Certain Conclusive Evidence That Dr. Chase's Ointment Cures Itching Piles.

Mr. John G. McDonald, Pictou, N.S., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching piles, and found that the first application gave relief. After using a few boxes of the ointment I was completely cured, and can recommend it highly to all sufferers from this disease. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mr. James M. Douglas, Superior Junction, Ont., writes:—"For about six years I suffered from piles, and often could not work for two or three days at a time, so great was the suffering from pain and itching. Doctors treated me in vain, and I tried many treatments before I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me, and for several months I have had no return of this annoying ailment."

There can be no doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most effective treatment obtainable for every form of piles. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OFFICES SEARCHED.

Militant Headquarters Are Raided By London Police.

LONDON, June 10.—Another raid was carried out by the police yesterday on the premises occupied by the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization, where a thorough search was made for documentary evidence of the activities of the society. Since the closing of the offices in Kingsway early in May the women have established new headquarters in Westminster, and yesterday the detectives succeeded in collecting there a quantity of documents, books and letters. The descent of the policewomen was quite unexpected and caused great excitement among the occupants of the offices, who, after being searched, were ejected. No arrests were made.

King George and Queen Mary were able to enjoy the brilliant state ball at Buckingham Palace last night. There was no interruption by suffragettes, thanks to the rigorous police precautions which had been taken.

Swede Is Arrested.

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 10.—As a result of the death of Was Grinchuk, a Swede, from injuries of a nature to excite suspicion, another Swede, who was his companion when he was hurt, is being held here by the police pending an inquest by Coroner Campbell yesterday afternoon.

Grinchuk was found lying beside the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway about a mile and a half west of this point early yesterday morning and died while he was being taken to the hospital here. There is only one wound on his body. His companion said that the man was struck by a freight train while he was walking on the tracks.

The policy believes that the wound came from some other cause.

Rich Gold Mine In West.

Headed by Bishop Lucas, who has had twenty-three years' experience in the Anglican mission fields of the north, and Archdeacon Whitaker, with nineteen years, a party of ten left Edmonton recently for the north. Bishop Lucas goes to Fort Chipewyan; Archdeacon and Mrs. Whitaker to Fort McPherson, and Rev. C. H. Quaterman, of Wycliffe College, Toronto, to Fort Chipewyan and Smith's Landing.

Archdeacon Whitaker relates a remarkable story of a lost gold mine of great value between Fort McPherson and Herschel Island. It is to the effect that many years ago it was discovered by a party of nine men. Seven of them starved while returning to civilization, and the others have never been able to again find the spot.

RHEUMA HAS A NOTION.

That U. S. Refuses To Let Him Name the New President.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 10.—The United States is unwilling to extend recognition to a new provisional President if named according to the method prescribed by the Mexican delegates, which is that Gen. Huerta would appoint as Minister of Foreign Affairs the man who is agreed upon here to head the new Government. The Washington administration contends that if Gen. Huerta is permitted to name the Foreign Minister, who, by constitutional succession, would be elevated to the Presidency, even though the selection be made here, such an act would be constructed as recognition of the Huerta Government.

On this issue the mediating plenipotentiaries came to a flat disagreement late yesterday, at a conference held for consideration of the exact method by which the new provisional Government in Mexico would be created out of the present regime.

Although the three South American diplomats argued strongly from the Mexican viewpoint, there is good reason to believe that the Mexican delegates will not insist on this arrangement if they find the United States absolutely determined against it.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Celery Salad For the Nerves.

Those who are troubled with restlessness and loss of sleep caused by nervousness should know of the value of celery seeds to the system.

A few seeds eaten three or four times a day will do much toward quieting our nerves, and if taken a half hour before retiring they will cause more restful slumber.

A tablespoonful of celery seeds boiled for from three to five minutes in a pint of water and a half teacupful of this liquid taken prior to meals, or before retiring, will act like a charm on the nerves and will give the person the needed rest. The liquid may be flavored if the celery taste is not desirable.

And then he sought to find some
In several bars he started fights,
And now he's lodged behind some.

One of the Months at Means.

Mr. W. B. Yeats, when he lectured in Canada on "Ireland, Poetry and Drama," and on "Beauty in the Theatre," invited his favorite interpretor, Miss Fay, to point out the defects of his oratorical style. Dr. Montgomery's criticism brought from her the following remarks, which admirably epitomize the view point of the ultra-modern school of producers, headed by Gordon Craig, Max Reinhardt and Granville Barker: "You do not want to see two actors declaiming blank verse on a stage representing the turnpike which runs past your door, for no one ever does talk blank verse on a real turnpike. But if you cleverly suggest a shadowy and illusive road, then you secure the poetic setting in which blank verse seems natural and inevitable. A little girl friend of mine had the right idea when she broke into tears because her mother poured water into her doll's bath:

"'You shouldn't do that!' protested the child. 'It's a toy bath, and I only want toy water in it'."—Toronto Saturday Night.

Historic Spot Now a Park.

Old Fort Howe at St. John, N.B., which played an important part in defending British settlers and British territory from the inroads of the Americans during the revolution, and was the site of the landing of the United Empire Loyalists in 1783, when three thousand of them came to Canada and founded the City of St. John, has been set aside as a natural park under the control of the Federal Department of the Interior. Hitherto it has been under the administration of the Militia Department.

It will henceforth be known as Fort Howe National Park, and will mount.

YOUNG MEN---Be Sure You Are on the Voter's List--You Can Get the Information by Calling at Gillespie's Committee Rooms on Water Street, over Bennett & Goodwill's Law Office.

THOS. HARRISON IS ACQUITTED BY JURY

North Monaghan Man Charged With Threatening to Shoot Bailiff is Discharged--The Only Criminal Case on the Docket.

THE FACTS OF THE CASE

The afternoon sessions of the County Court yesterday, were occupied with the hearing of the case against Thos. J. Harrison, who was charged with threatening to shoot Charles A. Beatty, then acting as a Sheriff in the execution of a writ of possession.

This constitutes the only criminal case docketed for the sessions. After the Jury had been duly sworn Crown Attorney Wood addressed them, stating briefly the nature of the case, and the alleged threats that had been uttered. It appears that in March last, Beatty went to the prisoner's farm to execute a writ of possession, and while in the execution of his duty it was alleged that the prisoner threatened to "blow his brains out, if he touched anything on the place."

Deputy Sheriff Hall was first called for the prosecution and said that the writ, then exhibited, and dated 13th of March, he handed to Beatty to take a horse and sleigh, and a man, to remove the chattels from the farm. A man named Smith, hired by the plaintiff, was also taken to the farm, and was to have remained in possession after the writ had been executed.

The same day that Beatty went to execute the writ he returned to the Sheriff's office and said he could not take possession because Harrison had threatened to shoot him.

I then took out an information and laid it before the Police Magistrate, said the Deputy Sheriff.

"And the writ was afterwards executed ?" asked Mr. Ruddy,

Mr. Hall.—Yes.

Mr. Ruddy—Did you give any instructions for any whiskey to be taken ?

Mr. Hall—No.

Mr. Ruddy—Were you aware that whiskey was taken.

Mr. Hall—I think I remember hearing that in the evidence in the Police Court.

Beatty Called.

Charles Beatty was then called, and related his version of the affair. He said that under instructions from the Deputy Sheriff he went to execute a writ of possession at the farm of Thos. Harrison, about one mile out, taking with him a man and horses and sleigh. A man named Smith was hired to remain in possession after the writ had been executed and who also accompanied him.

When they arrived Harrison was at the house, washing. He met them at the door. Beatty pulled out his authority, showed it to him, and said "I suppose you know what we are here for?"

Then, said Beatty, Harrison became very violent, and said: "If you touch that waggon, or anything on the place, I have a gun here, and I will blow your brains out."

"He must have known what we were there for," said the witness in answer to a query, as he said to the lad a little later "they are here to put us on the road to-night, but you have the rifle and I have my fists, and we will show them"

"He shook his fists in our faces several times and used very profane language, advising us to get off the place as quickly as we could."

"You did not execute the writ then" asked the Crown Attorney.

"No," replied Beatty, "I was somewhat upset"

Cross-examined by Mr Ruddy:

"Did you run away, or go off the place, then?"

Beatty—No

Mr. Ruddy—Did you see a gun?

Beatty—No.

Mr. Ruddy—I suppose the gun would have been part of the goods that you would have had to put off the place ?

Beatty—Yes.

Mr. Ruddy—This is the first time that you have ever done a job like this ?

Beatty—Yes.

Mr. Ruddy—When you got there, did you show him the writ ?

Beatty—Yes, I pulled it out of my pocket and showed it to him, and said, I supposed that he knew what we were here for ?

Mr. Ruddy—He was annoyed and angry about it and told you the thing was all wrong ?

Beatty — Well, we discussed the mortgages, and he showed me a check book.

Mr. Ruddy—Did he not tell you that the mortgage extended over a period of five years and, being dated in 1910, was not yet due ?

Beatty—I don't remember.

Mr. Ruddy—You first met him at the house and later his boy came home ?

Members of Board of Trade Are Arranging to Have Worthy Exhibit at the Ad. Club Convention in Toronto

A LARGER SPACE

The Board of Trade met last night in the Council Chambers and discussed the plans for advertising Peterborough at the coming Ad. Club Convention in Toronto. The plans are practically completed now, but the members of the Board are still working to enlarge and improve them.

The welcome intelligence was to hand that the local Board will be allotted al arger space at the Convention that was first allowed. For the purpose of using the space to advantage the Board is having considerable descriptive literature prepared. To accentuate to manufacturers the power advantages of the city, photographs of all the dams have been made, and besides these officers of the Board with an expert photographer have toured the city and made all the photos they think will recommend it to the visiting Ad. men. The pamphlet, too, will include statistical information.

The Board have also secured a considerable number of the Salvation Army booklets and will distribute these to all who are interested in this city. The convention will be held from June 21st to 25th, and it is expected that this city will be well represented there. A number of the officers and members of the Board have volunteered to attend to the space for part of the time during the convention so that there will be some one from this city on hand all the time.

REGISTER! REGISTER!

The registration of those who are entitled to vote and are not on the voters' list, takes place to-day, and thebalance of the week. The jqualifications for a registered voter are as follows. He must be a British subject of 21 years, in the riding three months, and in Canada a year preceding the first day for registration, which is to-day. All those who are supporting Mr. Gillespie's candidature are kindly asked to see that their names are on the list. The information may be obtained from Gillespie's Committee Room, on Water Street.

HARNESS BROKE HORSES BOLTED

The transfer truck of the Oriental Hotel dumped its heavy trunks at the C.P.R. station with more than usual expedition last night, and the night porter of the hotel, who was driving, it, was providentially fortunate to escape with only a slight cut in the face.

While entering the station yard before the arrival of the midnight train last night, the harness broke and the pole dropped beneath the two horses that were drawing the waggon. Frightened, the animals got beyond the control of the driver, who could not manage them because of the state of the harness. Swerving to the right one wheel mounted the high platform and the men were thrown from the rig. The driver, when the waggon hit the platform, went into the air like a shot and fell with great force to the ground. A very large and heavy trunk followed, almost landing on the prostrate man's head. The horses dashed through the station yard, out to Aylmer Street and thence to the Oriental barns.The driver had his face slightly cut, and the rig was not greatly damaged.

EXAMINER THAT NEVER WAS READ

Mr. R. J. Devey, while returning from Chemong, saw an old buggy at a farm house that was being put out of commission. He found under the seat, where it had evidently been forgotten, a copy of the Examiner "Fall fair edition, September 1891." It had never been opened, evidently having been put under the seat and forgotten for twenty-three years. It is very interesting to note the many business changes and advances during the present score of years.

W. C. T. U. TO ASSIST IN THE CAMPAIGN

At Annual Meeting in Toronto the Platform of Mr. Rowell Was Endorsed in an Unanimous Resolution

FORGET PARTY TIES

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 10—"We do not care whether he is Conservative or Liberal," said Mrs. Distin, in opening the devotional exercises at today's session of the annual meeting of the District W. C. T. U. in Willard Hall." There is a tremendous responsibility at present before us, as temperance women. When we pray we must ask who is the man God chose to advance His cause. It matters not what his party."

These were the earnest prayrs asked in view of the present vital political situation.

Th "abolishthe-bar" campaign being waged by the Liberal party was discussed at length and a unanimous resolution passed pledging the Women's Christian Temperance Union to do all in their power to help all over Ontario.

WANT 65TH REGIMENT TO TAKE PART

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 10—A deputation of Montreal Catholics waited upon Premier Borden this morning and urged that the 65th Regiment be allowed to take part in the Corpus Christi, procession at Montreal next Sunday, with all arms and accoutrements.

The Prime Minister stated that he would have to refer the matter to Hon. Col. Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, for decision.

RECOMMENDATIONS PASSED BY ASSEMBLY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 10.— The Presbyterian General Assembly today approved of recommendations of the special committee to amalgamate the social service, evangelistic and home mission departments under one general secretary. There was considerable discussion regarding the methods of appointing professors to boards of management of theological colleges and a committee was appointed to report at the next assembly in Kingston.

FINN IS KEPT IN CUSTODY

The Finn who jumped from the train between here and Port Hope while it was going thirty miles an hour Monday night, has been held in Millbrook, where he is to be tried for attempted suicide. P. C. Hayward, one of the local police, has been called to that village to give evidence. The Finn's shoulder was hurt in the leap from the train, but otherwise he is alright.

WEATHERMAN PROMISES US COOLER BRAND

North-west Breeze Will Drive Heat and Humidity Eastward and It Will Be More Comfortable To-morrow

MUCH SUFFERING

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 10.—"Yes, I am glad to say it will be cooler to-morrow all over Ontario," smiled the observatory man. "This northwest breeze will drive the humidity and heat eastward. The heat belonged originally in the Mississippi Valley, and that south wind blew it up here."

Sleep was practically impossible last night in many cities of Ontario. Thousands drew to the open places and parks, and divesting themselves of as much as propriety would allow, spread out on the grass. But the west wind which never blows us trouble in storm or heat, is coming to our aid. For a few days we will have gentle, cooling western breezes to cool the tortured province, unless the weather man has blundered again.

WOMEN FAVOUR BAR ABOLITION

On Monday afternoon, at the Oriental parlours, Mrs. Needham of Toronto, a representative of the Women's Liberal Club, of Toronto, and the Dominion Alliance, gave a lecture to the Peterborough ladies on the Liberal Temperance platform and tax reform. Woman Suffrage was not emphasized by the speaker. About thirty ladies were present who were very unanimous and enthusiastic in their views on the leading questions of the day and thoroughly endorsed the policy of Mr. Rowell, the Liberal leader.

Mrs. Needham was given a vote of thanks for her interesting lecture. It is being talked of to form a Ladies' Club in Peterborough, which will be affiliated with one of the Toronto Ladies' Liberal Clubs.

Mrs. R. B. Hall was agreed on as Secretary-Treasurer of the local club and Mrs. Hunter was appointed convener of the Literature Committee, to receive literature and arrange for its distribution in the different wards.

DOMINION RIDINGS MAY BE CARRIED

Possibilities Are That the Redistribution Bill Will Be Passed at This Session of Parliament

ELECTION IN FALL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 10.—There will be a recarving of the Dominion ridings this session after all. The redistribution committee, which has been working on the new constituencies for several months, will report this afternoon and there will be a short debate and a bill, based on the report, will go through before Parliament prorogues. Such is the expectation of Hon. Robert Rogers, as expressed this morning. It was believed last week that the whole thing was off. An amicable arrangement has been reached, however, whereby a report will be brought in and the Liberal members of the Committee will be in a position to debate the points. There are some who believe that it is the Government's desire to pass the measure this session even at the cost of some concessions. If the Ontario and Manitoba electors do well for the Conservative Governments at the pending Provincial elections the Government will go to the people in the Fall.

OLD RESIDENT OF BOBCAYGEON PASSES AWAY

Mr. Morrow Boyd, formerly of Boycaygeon, passed away in Philadelphia, Pa., on Monday. He was the son of the late Morrow Boyd, Esq., Bobcaygeon.

The deceased was in his 69th year, and the cause of his death was aenemia.

The late Mr. Boyd was well known in Peterborough, and his many friends will be sorry to hear of his demise.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning, June 11, on the arrival of the C.P.R. 9 o'clock train from Toronto, to Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Graves, of Bobcaygeon, will officiate.

MANY LIVES LOST IN NEW YORK FIRE

Tenement Fire Trap is Swept by Flames—Five Burned to Death and Two Others Killed.

MANY JUMPED

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., June 10.—Five persons were burned to death, two were killed by jumping from fire escapes, a dozen others were fatally injured, when fire swept through a tenement fire trap on Essex street in the congested east side. One of the women victims was found dead with a baby hugged to her breast, both burned to a cinder. Within two minutes after the fire was discovered, many fire escapes were crowded with scantily dressed human beings, many of whom refused to obey the firemens' orders to wait for ladders, but jumped to the pavement below.

BIG CIRCUS IN THE CITY

Robinson's Famous Shows Gives a Gorgeous Parade and Excellent Performance

ANOTHER SHOW TO-NIGHT

The Robinson Famous Shows give gorgeous parade and excellent performance.

The Robinson Famous Shows have come to town. The good old circus with its gleam, its glitter and gold, has once more invaded the City, and promises to be the Mecca for all whose hearts are young during the joyous day, circus day.

First of all in this morning's line of march came the rumbling waggons bearing the commissary equipment—the gigantic ranges heated entirely by steam, the dining tents with their long tables of spotless white linen and everything necessary to furnish breakfast for the immense circus family of 300 people, who three times each day gather about the boards. With wonderful rapidity, Stewart Fred Davis had his department at work, and as fast as the working men arrived they were furnished with a hot breakfast and steaming coffee. After the first section, bearing the commissary equipment, came the circus special, containing the wonderful Robinson wild animals and baggage equipment.

With breakfast over active preperations were begun for the parade. It left the show grounds shortly after 10 o'clock. It was a marvel of circus beauty. There was a long line of the fantastic finery, half a dozen bands, ponderous elephants, camels, those ships of the desert which go eight days without water, and horses, well, a small boy said there must have been a million of them.

Following the parade the show grounds appeared to be the objective point. Everything was in readiness to receive the crowds and they descended from everywhere. The doors to the big show were opened promptly at 1 o'clock. One hour was allotted to the spectators for viewing the wonderful Robinson collection of wild animals, said to be the rarest and costliest in the world. Preceding the big show by thirty minutes a concert was given by Prof. Richard Master's Royal Military Band.

Among the many exciting and novel acts are the Nine Nelson Family of Acrobats and Wire Artists. They range from little tots of three up to sixteen years of age, one of whom turns thirty backward flipflops on an elevated pedestal. The tango horse, "King George," is a beauty as well as a wonderful performer. The three LaDue Sisters perform a startling and thrilling iron jaw aerial act supported only by their teeth. Steve Mineo's thirty funny clowns and many other acts of merit filled out a splendid programme.

Another full and complete performance will be given to-night at 8 o'clock. The doors to the big show and menagerie will be opened an hour earlier.

FIVE BROTHERS IN THE MOVING PICTURE FIELD

Every once in a while a family blossoms out and boasts that the son has followed in the father's footsteps, or that two brothers are performing some similar labour. But nothing quite so unusual has come to the notice of motion picture men in this territory (Cleveland) as the Five Thompson Brothers. They are all film men and each manages a progressive theatre or film exchange. They are James Thompson, manager of the New Eclair Theatre, St. Clair avenue; C. C. Thompson, manager of the Cleveland Branch of the Universal film Service; Stanley Thompson, manager Roma Theatre, Youngstown; Lew Thompson, manager of the Globe Theatre, Woodland avenue; Newton Thompson, Cleveland, representative of Great Northern Features.—Cleveland Leader.

These young men are the son of Mr. Peter Thompson, George street, and are all former Peterborough boys, well-known to many in the city.

Appeal For Widows And Orphans Made

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 10—This morning, the member for Gloucester made an eloquent appeal in the House of Commons on behalf of the widows and orphans of the hundred fishermen who have perished in the great storm which swept the Bay of Chaleur and Gaspe Coast, decimating the fishing fleets of Caraquet, St. Simons and Shippegan, and, in many cases, wrecking the cottages of the father folk on shore.

Hon. Rodolph Lemieux echoed the Minister of Marine and stated that it might not be that an appropriation would be made this session, but if conditions called for aid a Governor-General's warrant could be issued at a later date.

Premier Borden concurred.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1914

EVEN THE SENATORS SHY.

We have in these days a great tangling and crossing of party lines, and even the Conservative Senators have caught the mania of anatagonizing their party. The Conservative majority in Parliament passed a bill to indemnify the depositors who lost money by Travers' wreck of the Farmers Bank. It was done not as a matter of justice, but as the fulfilment of a costly promise of bribery. Several Conservative candidates in the 1911 eelctions held out the bribe that they would support the repayment of the depositors. To keep this promise a million dollars was voted a pretty heavy bribe for the election of two or three members. Mr. Borden repudiated these promises at the time, but later thought it best to save the face of the promising members, and brought in and passed the indemnity bill. But it seems that the poor bank depositors have "got the double cross." While the Conservative majority in the House passed the bill, it appears—from the result—that the understanding was that the Conservative members of the Senate should kill the indemnity bill. This they did. The bill to indemnify the losers by the Farmers Bank was killed in the Senate by the vote of the Conservative members. In view of this breach of faith the Conservative politicians and journals must, in decency, hereafter hold their peace as to the Senate destroying the work of the popular chamber. The Conservative members of the Senate not only killed the bill passed by a big majority by the House of Commons, but killed a bill brought in and passed by the votes of their fellow Conservatives. Party lines must be getting very slack when our good Tory Senators are not held by them.

RIDING TWO HORSES.

The opponents of Mr. Rowell rain contempt upon his policy and scoff at it. Yet they see how it has become popular, how the public cotton to it. They sneer at Mr. Rowell as our "Beerless Leader," a jibe at his banish-the-bar policy. Yet the candidates of the Whitney Government—not the same thing as the Conservative party—in this riding anyway—the candidates of the Government are quick to steal this plank of his policy because, in their simplicity, they think it will help their chances. Mr. Soden, in West Peterborough, is not the only sinner. Mr. C. J. Doughty, a Government candidate in Toroy Toronto, has done the wisard act of standing as the candidate in Tory Toronto, has done the appealing for support on the policy of its chief opponent, whose chief plank—abolition of the bar—is anathem to the Whitney Government. They won't touch it with a flag pole, on the principle o fthe long spoon needed if one sups with the devil. Abolish the bar must be a taking appeal, be a seductive slogan when it is adopted by the candidates of a government whose motto is keep-the-bar. It is not only party heresy and party treason for these men to take this attitude, but it is an action that will deceive nobody. If both these men are elected as supporters of the Whitney Government and if that Government is returned they will have no chance to vote for abolition of the bar, for the Whitney Government is to retain the license system and treat the evils of strong drink, by not treating them at all—except to take a direct share of the profits of the traffic that thrives, by the money taken from wives and families—won't even introduce anti-treating legislation.

Mr. Soden and Mr. Doughty are seeking support on this issue on false pretences. If they are elected and the Whitney Government is returned they can't "deliver the goods." They are in the case of a shop employee who solicits custom by promises to supply a certain line of goods—"We don't keep these goods, but I am personally favourable to their sale. Our firm doesn't keep the goods, but give me your order any way." The Whitney Government doesn't keep "abolish-the-bar" in stock and therefore, if Messrs. Soden and Doughty are foolishly trusted and are elected they can't "deliver the gods."

A VICE-REGAL FOLLY.

The people who see that the Whitney government, so poor that it hasn't money to pay the government grants to schools, can pour out money like water on a million dollar government house, to house a Lieutenant-governor who gets a salary of $10,000 a year. Of all the immense extravagances that have contributed to increasing the provincial expenditure from 5 1-2 millions in 1904 to 28 millions a year in 1914, government house takes a front place. A site was selected in a hole near a smoke-belching brick works, costing at $15,000 an acre $147,000, and the fitting up of the grounds cost an additional $169,178, a total of $316,000, and there has already been spent on the building $362,783. And that does not include the furnishing. It is estimated that the probable total expense for lands and laying them out, for furnishing, for increased cost of maintenance and up keep, for capitalised value at 5 per cent. will amount to 2 1-4 million dollars. This is about as much as the cost of the parliament buildings to accommodate the 120 members of Parliament and do all the business for two and a half million people. Spending 2 1-4 millions for the housing of one man, whose chief business is signing a few bills, and company charters, and entertaining a few Toronto society people at dinners, dances and bridge, is going it rather strong for a democratic province like Ontario, which can't find money to pay the school grants in full.

We don't want to be pursimonious or mean in money matters, but we demand reasonable things. In the United States, almost as wealthy a country as Canada, eighteen states, with an aggregate population of fifty millions, spend less on eighteen executive mansions or "government houses, than Ontario spends for one executive mansion or government house—eighteen states at an average of $58,000, spend altogether for eighteen executive mansions or government houses—a little over a million, while Ontario spends a round million or, when everything is taken into account, about two millions for a similar purpose.

When we need money for schools and can't find it; when we need money for good roads, for settling New Ontario, and for a hundred other benefisent and productive purposes, involving the popular benefit, such expenditure as one or two millions on mere show is little short of criminal.

But such an action, such an attitude, is what might be expected from a government whose sole solicitude seems to be for the classes, the wealthy and the privileged, while the claims of the masses, the rights and demands of the common people are neglected and ignored. Mr. Rowell's policy is a policy for the people, the common people, that is the mass of hard-working, good living, respectable people of the province.

SCRIPTURE AUTHORITY.

He that entereth not by the door into the sheep fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

This is a figurative declaration and the reader may figure out himself the way it applies in this election contest.

DON'T WAKE US.

Mr. Rowell's address to the electors of Ontario contains a wealth of fruitful new ideas for the good of the Province and its people. His message is in strong contrast with the Government's attitude towards all progressive proposals, which is one of: "Go away, and don't disturb us!"—Toronto Star.

CONTEMPT FOR THE PEOPLE.

Cabinet ministers must have a supreme contempt for the people who vote for them when they gerrymander constituencies, encompass the defeat of the Scott Act by influence, and the defeat of several local option campaigns by the three-fifths' requirement, sell a valuable timber limit for a song, pay a fancy price for an exhausted limt, and then call a premature election.—Globe.

SIGNS OF CHANGE.

The following is from the Toronto World, (Conservative):

"Mr. Rowell has a right to be proud of the fine demonstration he evoked in Massey Hall, and he has this reflection to give him confidence, that if the Ontario voters respond to his appeal as they did to the Ross plebiscite of fourteen years ago he will be returned to the Legislature at the head of a working majority. The situation is a more critical one for the Government than their supporters generally conceive. The growth of independent electoral opinion has brought about the feeling that Governments exist for the advantage of the governed, and that when benefits are required, social reforms urgently needed, and measures adopted in other enlightened communities are ripe for application in Ontario, it does not matter which party gives relief so long as relief is given."

MR. FERGUSON AS OFFICIAL SUPPRESSOR

In his report as Trent Valley Canal investigator, Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., surpassed himself, or at least he surpassed the toleration of the party friends he set out to please. No man could be more incapable of conducting an inquiry into the canal management. No man could be more incapble of acting as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. No man could be more incapable of acting as Chairman of the Hanna Investigating Committee. For his unblushing partisanship in a judicial position he was appointed to investigate the affairs of the canal. For his unblushing partisanship in a judicial position he was appointed by the Ontario Government Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee. For that same qualifty he was appointed Chairman of the Hanna Investigation Committee.

In the Public Accounts Committee he obstructed and prevented the work of investigation, shielding the Government at every weak point and making inquiry, as far as possible, a failure. In the committee investigatin the Proudfoot charges he boldly stopped and suppressed the evidence of Mr. Taylor against Hon. Mr. Hanna, thus making the whitewash a public disgrace. In its dire need, when hurrying a premature election to head off disclosures, the Ontario Government needed just such a man. He prevented disclosures that were evidently regarded as fatal. But the men at Ottawa whom he thought to serve seem free to repudiate him. Col the Hon. Sam. Hughes declared one of the findings humbug and said he did not believe another. He also gave tributes of commendation to two men condemned by the Ferguson report. That Royal Commissioner also reported that a stenographer, whose affidavit was read to the House was a fictitious person. When evidence did not suit him he ordered the stenographer not to take it down. That is enough. It is time for the people of Ontario to repudiate Mr. Ferguson, M.P.P., and also the Government that finds his services necessary.

INSPIRATIONAL SUCCESS

Prof. Yeatman, Great Mining Engineer, Seizes Opportunity While He Works in Overalls

(By Herbert E. Corey)

Pope Yeatman is one of the few men in America who is paid $100,000 a year in salary. Perhaps his bonuses and other perquisites amount to half as much more. Opportunity did not make Pope Yeatman. All his life he has been making opportunity.

"There isn't any limit to the salary a man like Yeatman can earn," say his employers, the Guggenheim brothers, "if he works at it."

Yeatman is the mining engineer whose brains made possible the greatest low-grade copper miping proposition in the world, down in Chili. He planned the development of the copper mines at Ely, Nev., which are perhaps the second greatest low-grade mines in the world. He has been in charge of some of the greatest gold mines in the Rand in South Africa. He doesn't owe a step or a dollar to influence.

"I want you to tell these gentlemen the exact truth about this mine" said an employer, smiling blandly at him.

Yeatman was a very young mining engineer. This was his first big fee. His employer was a proprietor, who depended upon Yeatman's report to secure banking aid in financing his plan. He thought that Yeatman—being a young and well-paid mining engineer—would make that sort of a report.

"This mine," said Yeatman, deliberately, "would ruin any concern which attempted to supply the money needed. It can never be profitable."

But He Made a Start.

To this day that first employer thinks that Yeatman wasn't precisely fair to him. Yeatman has perhaps never thought of him again. He had hardly left the office from which he made that cataclysmic and hope-shattering statement when he was engaged by the rescued bankers to look into a Nevada proposition. He has been stepping from big job to bigger job ever since.

There was the Chili copper mine, for example. For a century the existence of these tremendous low-grade copper deposits have been known. But they have been un-get-at-able. It only rains once in 15 years in this particular part of Chili. The country is so thoroughly on edge that it leans over. The man who had the options on the copper came to the Guggenheims.

"I don't know whether anything can be done with it," said he. 'Send Yeatman down there."

They sent Yeatman and that engineer promptly violated almost all of the good mining rules, and began to make it over into an immensely profitable camp. He had to devise a new way of getting the ore and a new method of getting it out, and had to pipe water 12 miles and build 50-odd miles of branch railroad. Because he's the sort of man who can do that sort of thing, the Guggenheims pay him $100,000 a year—and they think they are getting him cheap at the price.

Yeatman is a great engineer, of course. That—all things considered—isn't worth saying. But he is a great handler of men, as well. Other great engineers keep their hands manicured and sit in steam-heated offices. Yeatman gets out on the work. He looks like a particularly disreputable labourer in his engineering suit. He leads his engineers where he wants them to go, whether it is through a swamp or around the edge of a precipice. Sometimes he sends for a foreman to come to his office.

"He finds out not only what I know" said one of these gentry, "but what I don't know."

When Yeatman is at home—which isn't often—he lives in Philadelphia. Each morning he catches the 7 o'clock train, eats breakfast, skips through the morning papers, and two hours later walks into his New York office. When he catches the 5 o'clock homeward bound train that night, he is accompanied by a stenographer. His particular fancy is for getting people out of bed too early in the morning, and keping them up—at work— too late at night. Someone told a story of his movements the other day. Yeatman had just returned from a visit to Alaska.

How He Moves.

"Thank Heaven," he told a friend, "I'm at home for a stay. I'm tired of roaming."

Next day the friend tried to telephone him.

"Sorry," said the girl at the telephone board, "but he left this morning for South America."

Yeatman was born in St. Louis. He graduated in 1883 from Washington University in St. Louis, and was employed in various subordinate capacities until 1893. All the time he was going up. He is a man of tremendous energy and indomitable will but he is also a man of dignity. He does not roar when he works. He does not translate dynamic power into frenzied circles about a proposition. He cuts out every motion that leaks power. In Chili it became necessary for him to write letters in Spanish. The delay of translation irritated him, and he was not content until he found a stenographer who could take English dictation and write it out in Spanish. It was a completely typical incident.

Few men are better known in a small circle or less known to the public than Yeatman. He took John Hays Hammond's place with the Guggenheims when that expert decided he could make more money independently than by drawing a salary of $200,000 a year—including extras. Hammond had drawn Yeatman to South Africa years before. Somehow, Hammond was always an object of public curiosity. Yeatman never has been. So much of his work is in the field, and the fields are so scattered from the Rand to the Yukon, that there has been little opportunity for the reading public to know of him.

"Why has Yeatman been so successful?" was asked of one of the Guggenheims.

"Because," said his employer, "he has never been attracted primarily by the money. He has always worked for the sake of the work."

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

You can't, until you become an employer, realize the tribulations connected with business. As an employee, you draw your salary with regularity; and, although you are interested in the business, and help your employer to carry the burden, you cannot put yourself wholly in his place and appreciate his responsibility. Business at best is hard, a strain on both body and mind.

The majority of employers are family men, and thus carry a double load. Perhaps your employer's wife is dangerously ill, perhaps his son has been expelled from college or he has other annoyances with which you are not familiar. He has passed a sleepless night and comes to the office fatigued, and, naturally, irritable. He has no grievance against you, yet he may at times treat you with scant courtesy and be unreasonable.

If your employer is a true man and means to do right, if you know that his irritability is not caused by any act on your part, sympathize with him, rather than criticise him. Don't resent his irritability, unless it is carried to an extreme. Answer him politely. Be more than usually careful in your work, more than usually cheerful. Offer to assist him, and try to ignore his peevishness. He will appreciate you all the more, if you don't retaliate.

There are few concerns which do not suffer from periodical losses and disappointments. A much-desired contract does not materialise; a large order is cancelled. These things mean much to your employer, and he is to be excused if he is irritable.

I am not suggesting that you do not resent insult, for you should maintain your self-respect under all circumstances; but lean the other way. Give your employer the benefit of every doubt. You would probably do as he is doing, if you were in his place. Not one of us is perfect, and few of us can stand trouble with equanimity. Often, unintentionally, we vent our disappointment upon the innocent.

I recall an incident: The proprietor of a large business had family troubles. He came to the office hollow-eyed and nervous. His junior partner was the first one to meet him. Without provocation, as far as the junior partner was concerned, he began to find fault with him. The junior partner was a diplomat, and warded off the blows, but he "took it out" on the head bookkeeper and told him what he thought of him or rather, what he really didn't think of him. The bookkeeper answered courteously, but, in his turn, found fault with his assistant. Instead of resenting it, the assistant scolded the office boy. The poor little chap held his tongue, but vented his resentment on the defenceless cat.

It is difficult to put yourself in the other fellow's place; yet, try to judge him, not by the way he acts, but by the way you would probably act, if positions were reversed.

Resenting irritability adds to it, makes it worse. A cheerful smile and willingness to help will dissolve the fiercest anger.

Good Sleep Good Health

Exhausted Nerves Were Fully Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

IT'S SERVICE THAT COUNTS

Valuable Contribution From An Official of the Local De Laval Staff

The Examiner has pleasure in reproducing the following well reasoned article by Mr. E. D. Cook, special sales manager of the De Laval Dairy Supply Co. of this City, which appears in the May issue of the De Laval Monthly. The article is entitled, "First Cost Does Not Determine Value; it's Service that Costs. While the article is mainly intended for buyers of separators, silos and other dairy supplies, it has an important bearing on, and applies to, all classes of manufactured goods; and for that reason is well worthy of careful perusal by all. The article in the Monthly is accompanied by an excellent half tone of Mr. Cook:

When a man gets actual value for what he pays out you never hear him find any fault, but in how few cases does he actually know just what the value is until he has ascertained how long and how valuable service the article he is purchasing will render, for that is the most important thing in determining value, and the buying public is realizing it more and more as time goes on.

The service and benefit the user derives from his purchase is actually the only thing that matters. The well known motto of one firm noted for their good advertising that "The recollection of quality remains long after the price is forgotten" is truer today than ever before, and quality and service go hand in hand; they are "one and inseparable."

The De Laval machine is one on which the buyer cannot go wrong. Quality and service are there, and thousands of satisfied users all over the world, in terms too emphatic to be misunderstood, testify to value. A prospective buyer is taking no risks, because he is not being tempted into a new and untried path, but is following a broad, well beaten trail, tracked by the footprints of thousands of "men who know." It is one of the cases where value has been proved.

The "first cost" proposition is passing into oblivion, where it should have gone years before. The first cost of a Twenty Dollar counterfeit bill at $1.30 may not be large, but little can be said of its quality, and the service it renders is liable to lead to an immense amount of trouble. Like a cheaply built separator, the more it is used the more trouble it makes.

There is no such thing as "first cost" on any machine. It is cost every day it is operated, it is cost in one form or another year in and year out on any machine used for any purpose. On quality machines the operating cost is small, giving best results at least expense, and that it what tells the story. After years of service of a quality machine figure up the LAST COST and you will known where you stand. When the "last cost" is computed, and compared with the results achieved and service rendered, the De Laval has a record that will shine down through the ages. Price, first cost, or whatever you want to call it, represents only an expense; it is quality alone that represents value. The saying is sometimes heard that a machine that will do the same work can be bought for half the money. Never. A machine that will do part of the same work for part of the time, it might be. The housekeeper might get along with a fifteen cent. saw, but a carpenter or cabinet-maker would not waste time with such an article.

It Pays to Handle Confidence Producing Merchandise.

There is also another side to every transaction other than the money viewpoint. Every sale an agent or dealer makes should be made with future business with the same catomer in mind, and also his friends and neighbours, for a host of satisfied customers is the best advertisement that can be had. No copy writer has ever been able to turn out anything to equal it. On the other hand, one disgruntled customer (a host of them is entirely unnecessary) can raise more disturbance, make more trouble and turn away more trade than any dealer can afford to take a chance on, because you are taking just such chances every time you sell or recommend one of the "just as good but you'll never find it out" machines.

The undertaker is the only man who can palm off a "just as good" article and not be afraid the user will come back and make a kick, but it must also be remembered that the undertaker never sells twice to the same user, and, consequently, does not employ a follow up system. But for the dealer or agent who intends to stay with the "live ones" and wants to be able to keep on a basis of future sales, care must be exercised as to what goods are recommended and sold. In fact care is not a strong enough word; it is of vital importance that such should be the case, for the dealer's whole business future depends upon it.

The Company that stands behind the machine is another important point to take into consideration; as a man is known by the ocmpany he keeps, so is a dealer known by the Company he represents. On the other hand, a Company is known by the dealers who represent it. That is why only dealers of recognized integrity and standing are found on the De Laval list, and explains why such dealers are anxious to hold a De Laval contract.

De Laval machines, De Laval standards, De Laval advertising make business for De Laval Agents, and where Agent and Company work together good business and satisfied customers are invariably the results.

The Lord's Day Alliance and the Sabbath

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It appears they have an Association in Toronto called the Lord's Day Alliance with highly paid salaried officers by which they seek to justify the change of the Lord's Sabbath from Saturday, the seventh day of the week to Sunday, the first day thereof, and to prosecute and incarcerate all and sundry persons who do not agree with them.

In order to support this propaganda they sally forth from their head centre at irregular periods and solicit subscriptions from the various congregations of our churches throughout Canada, and elsewhere, for anything that I know. We have been visited of late by them as on former occasions. They induce thoughtless people to subscribe to the fund which, of course, is their own business, but when they try to pervert holy writ by pretending that the change of the Sabbath was authorised by it, then it is time to cry halt. The inviolability of the Bible must be preserved. They admit that other great events are also worthy of commemoration, such as Good Friday, and are commemorated by the churches, but in no case do they go the length of saying that they should supersede the Sabbath with the one exception as stated. They falsely argue that the seventh day (Saturday) is the Jewish Sabbath only, and commemorates their deliverance from Egypt when they know better. The good book says that the Sabbath was made for man—all mankind and not merely for the Jew or Gentile, and it originated on the seventh day after the Creation, two thousand years before there was a Jew.

They also work in the specious argument that there can be no division of time into days in the ice-bound regions of the north where in the summer the sun does not disappear for sometimes over a week, but that is only subterfuge, for any school boy knows that the sun there goes down in the west and rises again in the east as it does here, only that for a short time it does not go below the horizon. The hours and the days are just as sharply defined as they are here. I challenge any of them to point to any passage in the Bible whereby God's Sabbath is changed. The only change that was ever aimed at was by an egotistic man who—in A. D. 364—by an edict at the Council of Laodicea, anathematized those who kept the Sabbath and urged all persons to labour on that day under penalty of anathema.

When the Lord's Sabbath was observed by our Saviour and who enjoined others to keep it, and which his apostles kept as did the prophets previously, surely it ought to be good for latter day Christians. I think this ought to be enough until they can produce their Biblical authority for the change. The observance of Sunday is fixed by our statutes and no doubt the civil authorities are quite capable of enforcing their own laws without the interference of the so called Lord's Day Alliance.

Yours truly,
Consistency.

A Friend Paid His Poll Tax

A friend of C. Degan left one dollar at the tax collector's office this morning to pay (Mr. D.'s poll tax, reference to which was made in yesterday's issue. Whether it was Magistrate Dunuble alleged threat of the usual treatment that spurred the friend's action was not given out. Mr. J. W. Green searched the books for a while but could not find any C. Degan entered therein. Hence the hot weather question arises as to whether Mr. Degan's tax shall be paid or not. Apparently the wires are crossed just now, and an explanation of some kind is needed.

An 'Opening' for Summer Goods

To the merchants of PETERBOROUGH—

INTRODUCE your Summer goods as you introduce those of Spring, Fall or Autumn.

The most radical change of the year in wearing apparel comes in the Summer months.

Each season in the year sees its changes and modifications of dress. In Summer comes the greatest change of all.

You announce your new Spring goods
You announce your Autumn openings.
You spread broadcast the news of the arrival of sturdy Winter wear.

You dress your store with your Summer styles as you do your Spring and Fall openings. Why not an "opening" of Summer goods? Call the people in to see your Summer goods. Send the summons far and wide by means of the merchant's trusted servant—the advertising columns of the daily newspapers.

Think of this idea. It may be new and it may be not. But it is well worth your consideration.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of THE EXAMINER.

New Summer Blouses With A New Rare Charm

VERY very filmy things---and beautiful. They come not only in Voile, but in sheer stripe Dimity, plain, stripe and Cross-bar Crepe. The greater number on display are of American make, copies of their French predecessors, that have lost none of their original charm by the adaptations, and so essentially French that one instantly supposes them to be hand made.

Undoubtedly these fineSummer Blouses are the best for the money this season has seen--so cool, so dainty, so inexpensively priced. Each $2.25, $3.50 and $5.00

What Do Farmers Think Of A Million Dollar Government House?

Whitney Government Spends a Million in Palace for Lieut.-Governor When It Can't Get Money Enough to Pay Rural School Grants—Motor Garage Costing $10,000, the Price of a Farm —Two Billiard Rooms Each as Big as a Barn.

One of the most reckless, unwarranted and extravagant expenditures is that made by the Whitney Government on the new Government House, and not a member of the Government defended the expenditure when it was brought up in the House by the Liberals. The building is not yet completed; and the estimate is that it will cost over a million dollars, and then added to that will be the furnishings.

This is done in the face of the Whitney followers' attack, when in Opposition, on the then Government for a moderate expenditure on the Government House. The Whitney forces at that time moved a resolution that in opinion of the House the maintenance of Government House at the expense of the Province should be discontinued.

Some of the Big Items.

The building is a palatial one which will require an enormous sum yearly to support. The cost of the grounds was $147,054; to lay them out cost $109,178.30, and the building up to February, 1914, had cost $362,783.31. The Minister of Public Works made a special trip to Europe, at a cost of $1,800, to examine styles of furniture, and this great expense of furniture has yet to come. It was estimated by Mr. C. M. Bowman, of North Bruce, that the Province would be involved in a total expenditure for the Government House of no less than $2,250,000.

Garage Costs Price of a Farm.

The cost of the garage is $10,000 or the price of a good farm, and some of the rooms in the house are the most elaborate that could be imagined. There is a big billiard room and a ballroom, which are fitted out at an enormous expenditure of the people's money. Some idea of the cost of the place may be gleaned from the fact that the heating plant cost $78,000, which in itself would build a very fine house.

Moreover, this costly pile is built on a site which is a "forlorn hope" as far as beauty goes. The view from the place is over a brickyard, where smoking kilns will make one of the "charming views" for the folk in Government House. The Liberals had fought the expenditure, but the Government, although not defending it, continues to spend the money lavishly.

On this point a comparison with the practice of the States of the Union in supplying "Executive Mansions" is worthy of note. The States which own Executive mansions, with their population and reported capital cost, as given in a contemporary publication, are:

State.	Population.	Cost of Governor's Residence.
Alabama	2,138,093	$ 50,000
[illegible]	2,377,549	50,000
Florida	751,139	25,000
Georgia	2,609,121	95,000
Illinois	5,638,504	88,500
Kansas	1,690,949	35,000
Kentucky	2,289,905	97,000
Mississippi	1,797,114	30,000
Missouri	3,293,335	75,000
Montana	376,053	30,000
Nevada	81,875	40,000
New York	9,113,279	50,000
North Carolina	2,206,287	124,000
Pennsylvania	7,665,111	100,000
South Carolina	1,515,400	60,000
Tennessee	2,184,789	31,000
Washington	1,141,990	50,000
West Virginia	1,221,119	45,000

Out of forty-eight inquiries addressed to the Treasurers of as many States it is found, out of forty replies received, that eighteen States do not supply Executive mansions, although four make a small allowance in this respect.

With Infantry And Cavalry

There is only one more regular parade for the 57th Regiment, before the annual training at Petawawa, and strenuous efforts are being exerted by the officers and men alike, to take a strong, efficient, and well-trained contingent to the Army Reserve.

Though no criticism is being made, it must be admitted, evidence of the statement being clearly gained from the parade state, that the attendance during the past three or four weeks, has materially increased. This, though, is a usual occurrence at this time of the year, and is due no doubt to men taking vacations.

Despite this fact it is hoped to take one of the strongest City Regiments into training. The men are assured of a good time. Each man will be allowed $5.00 for the training, and the Regiment is only in camp for three days.

As is almost generally known the camp will be a "dry" one, intolerably so to some men, and warning should be taken from the fact that some of the Brigades which have gone into camp have been searched at the Petawawa landing.

The Regiment will leave Peterborough on Sunday, June 21st, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and will arrive at the training camp at 6 o'clock in the morning. A fact of interest might incidentally be mentioned at this junction, namely, that the three contingents of the Peterborough Garrison, Cavalry, Artillery and Infantry will be encamped together. The Artillery leave on Saturday, June 13th, the Cavalry, on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, June 14th, and the 57th, as stated above, on the 21st. The Cavalry will be encamped for twelve days, the Artillery for sixteen days, and the Infantry for three days and will thus bring the Regiments together.

There will be no practice at the ranges this week, as extensive work is being performed in that locality.

The Dragoons and 24th Brigade, alike, are busy preparing for camp, and enlisting men for training. New Khaki uniforms are being issued to the Dragoons and present a quiet but smart appearance.

Orders by Officer Commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers:

1. The following extracts from Divisional Orders are promulgated for the information of the Regiment:

D. O. No. 203. 1914. The annual inspection of the 57th Regiment will take place at Peterborough on June 26th, 1914.

Col. Sergeants Succee and Dodds, and Sergt. Dawes of the 57th Regiment will report at the Petawawa Camp on June 16th, where they have been appointed Assistant Musketry Instructors with duties from the 16th to the 26th of June.

2. The Commanding Officer directs attention to the following extracts from King's regulation and orders, and from the Militia Act, R. R. & O., Section 249—Officers commanding corps are strictly prohibited from enlisting men who, at the time, belong to another corps.

Militia Act, Section 111, sub-section two: "Every man who claims, or has received pay, on account of any duties performed in the ranks of any other than his own proper corps, or in more than one Corps in any one year, is guilty of an indictable offence."

3. Major V. Eastwood is hereby detailed as Acting Paymaster, and Capt. A. G. Carruthers as Acting Quartermaster.

The following are struck off the Regiment: C Co., Ptes. J. Boyle, W. Cooper, W. Rhynd, and A. Yorkston, June 2nd, 1914.

5. Pte. J. Dyer is hereby transferred from C Company to the Regimental Band, and Pte. W. Woods to the Signalling Corps.

D. Walker, Major.
Adjutant.

The parade state showed an attendance of 221 of all ranks. This number was made up of 22 officers, 27 Sergeants, 21 Corporals, and 151 in the ranks.

C Company again boasted the largest turnout, with 30 men, followed closely by the Band, with 29 in attendance.

The 19th Brigade Staff, and the 24th Battery, C. F. A., will parade at the Armouries on Saturday, at 1 o'clock. As soon as the horses and guns are loaded the men will entrain at the C.P.R. Station for Petawawa.

Lt.-Col. T. W. H. Young,
O. C. 10th Brigade C.F.A.

The camp orders for the Artillery will be issued shortly, as will those for the 57th Regiment.

Found Lying On The Floor

Son Found Mother Lying Dead on Floor

MILLBROOK, June 9.—Mr. Stanley Carveth is down from Saskatoon. He intends spending some time in Millbrook.

Mrs. Wm. Vance and Miss Vance went to Belleville on Monday to visit Mrs. Calling.

Mr. T. B. Collins attended the opening of the Armouries in Orono last Wednesday.

Mr. Sam Hunter is down from Toronto for his summer holidays here and at Stony Lake. Mrs. Hunter will be down in a few days.

Mr. Fred Clark was elected Councillor of Cavan on Monday last by 23 of a majority over Mr. L. N. Winslow. The vote was small, yet quite an interest was worked up.

Mr. W. T. Collins returned home last week after an absence of some months in Southern States.

Bailieboro Items.

A few citizens of Bailieboro enjoyed the excursion from Bewdley to Peterborough on June 2. The Bewdley band furnished delightful music.

On Thursday last Mrs. Jas. Bateman passed away very suddenly. She had a stroke in the afternoon and her son found her lying on the floor in the evening when he came home from work. Her death has removed one well known and highly esteemed citizen of Bailieboro. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, two dauters and nine sons. Mrs. J. Bullock, Bailieboro; Mrs. Geo. Smithson, Peterborough. The sons were George of Ottawa, Fred of Cobourg, Hamilton of Bethany, Burt, Norman and Will of Hamilton, Stanley of Toronto, Westley of Port Arthur, Herbert at home. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Medd of Cavan, and two brothers, George and William McCarthey of Bethany.

The funeral took place on Saturday and proceeded to the Baptist Cemetery for interment. It was largely attended.

There also passed away on Wednesday, after a lingering illness, a well-known resident of South Monaghan in the person of Mrs. John Fry. She leaves to mourn her loss five daughters, Mrs. Isaac Lunny, of Cresswell; Mrs. Robert Nurse, of Saskatchewan; Mrs. Baron Wood, and Mrs. Everet Wood, of Bensford; Miss Dolly, at home, and four sons, Harold, of Peterborough; Wesley, of Northwest; Lewis and Stanley, at home. The funeral was on Friday, and proceeded to the Baptist cemtery for interment.

The farmers are longing for rain.

Miss E. Fry has returned home to Peterborough, after visiting friends here.

Hot Weather Advice By Dr. Hastings, of Toronto

That iced water at meals is "an abominable American habit," and that "we're all eating too much and drinking too little," were the hot weather comments of Dr. C. J. O. Hastings of Toronto. Dr. Hastings is not a vegetarian, but he says some emphatic things about eating meat in summer.

"The vast majority of people tickle their palates at the expense of their constitutions," he says. "They do not stop to consider their bodily requirements. There is something fascinating and stimulating about meat juices; so people consume vast quantities of meat. No person, except those engaged in heavy physical labour, should eat meat during hot weather more than once a day; most would be benefited by leaving it alone altogether. Eat peas, beans, all kinds of vegetables. Eat fruit. Eat cereals.

"Drink six to eight tumblerfuls of water a day," says the M.O.H. "Water from the tap in Toronto is as cold as anyone needs. Iced water should be avoided. Artificial temperance drinks are no better than water; alcoholic drinks are much worse. Clothe lightly, eat lightly, drink freely—those are the three best rules for hot weather happiness.

"It used to be thought that premature hardening of the arteries, of which there is so much nowadays, was due to alcoholism. That theory has been largely abandoned. The extremes of exercise involved in competitive athletics are partially responsible, but it is now recognized that auto-intoxication is at the root of much of this type of trouble; in other words, the absorption of toxins from the alimentary canal. To the latter process an excess of meat undoubtedly contributes.

"Eat little meat and see that it is in good condition," he told his audience. "The poor are in the extremely unfortunate position of having to buy poor meat, and often yield to the temptation to buy tainted meat because it is cheap. Fish, if absolutely fresh, is a better summer food than meat; but remember that cooking does not alter the poisonous nature of tainted fish."

Back Goes The N. T. R. To Its Original Grades

OTTAWA, June 9.—The Government has decided that momentum or sag grades on the Transcontinental Railway, east and west of Cochrne, must be eliminated and the road restored to the standard intended by the former Government.

Such was the admission made in the House this morning by Hon. Dr. Reid, Acting Minister of Railways, when submitting a million-dollar supplementary appropriation for approval. Dr. Reid stated that part of that amount was designed for the purpose of getting rid of some thirty-two sags in the line within 100 miles west of Cochrane and 200 miles east.

"It is really refreshing," declared Hon. Geo. P. Graham, formerly Minister of Railways, "to have this admission from the Government. They argued not so long ago that momentum grades improved the road. Now they say that they will eliminate them."

The Minister stated that the sags from Cochrane to Moncton could be remedied by the contractors since the work had not yet been completed. In regard to the other portion westward the sags could be remedied by the G.T.P., and the expense added to the cost of the road according to the contract.

"It would be much better," said the Minister, "to get a regular freight service at the earliest possible moment than to wait for the remedying of the sags before taking over the road."

"I think we have accomplished something," said Mr. Graham. "I hope it is clear now that the country is to have a transcontinental line up to the standard agreed upon."

THE TRAPPER OF THE FAR NORTH

41 Jackson Ave.,
Peterborough, 4th June, 1914.

The Editor, The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Having lately returned to this city from Edmonton, Alta., and having spent several months of last winter in the Peace River country, I have written these verses, thinking that perhaps they may be worth a place in your daily paper. The subject of the verses was suggested to me by a conversation I held a short time ago with an old trapper from the north country, who was grumbling over the fact that the spread of civilization to the north and the west had gradually driven him to seek his trapping grounds further and further afield each year. You are quite at liberty to make whatever use you wish of the verses, as they were only written for my own pleasure.—I remain,

Yours respectfully,
SID. SPOONER.

(The word "mush" that occurs in the verses is an Indian word from Alaska, and is used by them when urging on the husky dogs. The word literally means "get on.")

A man he is, a man of iron, a man with thews of steel,
A man of dauntless courage, a man of boundless zeal;
Straight-lipped, grim-faced, and silent, clear of eye and brain,
He roams the Silent Places of Northern bush and plain.

He has lived his life in the open; the wilderness knows him well,
And the awful cold of the Northland has his spirit tried to quell;
But inured, toughened, and hardened and seared by the hand of time,
He laughs to scorn the rigours of this rugged northern clime.

He has left his old haunts behind him, with a heart that is filled with wrath;
For civilization has spread there, and presses him back to the North;
And now in the great new country he is seeking a hunting ground
Where the Indian still is ruler and the white man's never found.

With snowshoes strapped upon his feet, with husky team and sled,
He hits the trail for the Great Unknown that is new to the white man's tread.
No sound but the crunch of footsteps or the crack of a rawhide thong,
Or the mournful howl of a starving wolf as he presses on, still on.

A new world lies to the northward, a world with a carpet of white;
A world where the lurid aurora sheds
a flickering, ghostly light;
A world steeped in awful silence, a world wrapped in gloom profound;
A world that strikes fear to the bravest, and dashes his hopes to the ground.

The snow clogs the wearying footsteps, the frost grips with icy hands,
Till the man who has dared the northland feels clasped by invisible bands,
Then the huskies grow weary and falter, and howl with hunger and pain,
But a slash of the whip, and a mush,
mush, urges them on again.

At last he reaches the goal of his hopes, reaches the end of his quest;
And here in this lone, virgin country, at the end of the trail he will rest;
Here is his home for the winter, here
'neath the pines' snowy caps,
So here will he build his dead-falls,
here set his snares and his traps.

Far from the noise of distant towns,
far from their turmoil and strife,
In the wilderness here he is happy,
for the woods swarm with animal life;
'Tis here that he garners his harvest here in those cold Northern lands,
By wrenching a hardy livelihood from the grasp of nature's hands.

Daily now he plies his lonely craft;
each day adding to his spoil;
For each trap yields to him its furry catch, mounting up the profits of his toil.
Frozen muskeg, slue, or forest depths
all give up their toll at his demands,
And the beaver, marten, fox, and mink are the victims of his hands.

A man he is, a man of iron, a man who stands alone;

HOME-MADE ICE CREAM

A Dainty and Delicious Summer Dessert

Ice Cream made the right way with a "White Mountain" Freezer is easier to make than a pudding or a pie—a fact that you can prove for yourself if you will get a White Mountain Freezer and learn the right way to use it.

When you make Ice Cream at home you can be sure that it is pure, sweet and wholesome, and if you make it the right way, with a White Mountain Freezer, your task will be an easy one and you will get an Ice Cream unexcelled by any you have ever tasted.

It is the triple motion that does it. Every particle of the Ice Cream is stirred and mixed and beaten, producing a smooth, fine grained Cream of uniform quality.

MARMORA IS BEING REBUILT

The village of Marmora, which about three weeks ago was visited by a fire that destroyed practically two blocks of the business section of the town, is being rebuilt wherever the fire swept. One of the two hotels of the village is being rushed to completion and will be a handsome stone building. The office of the Marmora Herald, which was partially destroyed, is also being rebuilt, and it is thought that the paper, which has suspended publication during the past three weeks, will publish next week. Besides several stores, four or five residences were destroyed by the fire. These are being rebuilt.

Owing to several causes, skilled labour is scarce in Marmora and the bricklayers are being paid $6 and their board. There is prospect for the work lasting till Christmas, so that the labour market in that district has been considerably stimulated.

UTILITY COMMISSIONERS HAVE COMPLETE CONTROL OVER MONIES PASSING THROUGH THEIR HANDS

Guelphites have followed with considerable interest the suit brought by the city officials in Berlin to compel the water commissioners to pay over certain sums, classed as surpluses, to the city treasurer. This the water commissioners had refused to do, claiming that they had the power to hold them or use them for the purpose of extending the system. The finding handed out at Osgoode Hall does not state in hard and fast terms under what conditions surpluses must be handed over to the city. The decision in part is as follows:

"Before paying over the commissioners have the right to deduct all outgoings. If there is then surplus, that surplus is to form part of the general funds of the corporation, but it is not to be used for the general funds of the corporation, but it is to be used for the general purposes unless it is 'not required for the purpose of the work.' The money even when paid over is to be 'placed to the credit of the account of the public utility work.' While it is at the credit of the public utility work in question the commissioners are bound to pay over the surplus in their hands quarterly or oftener, but payment over must not hamper the commissioners in whatever they may think fit to do under the general wide powers conferred upon them by the statute. They and they alone have the right to determine what extensions are necessary and proper, and they may apply money in their hands to meet the cost of such works and may, if they see fit, draw upon any money which they have in the interim paid to the Council. Any money paid over from time to time must remain to the credit of the waterworks system until the commissioners determine it is required for it, then, and then only, may it be used for municipal purposes."

It would seem then, that although the water commissioners might hand over quarterly the amounts they have, that they still have a string on them, and that they can be pulled in any time the money is required for extensions, etc. As the Mercury has contended before it will always be a hard matter to determine what is a surplus, and what is merely a temporary surplus that may be required almost any time for extensions to the system. The opinion handed out from Toronto will be poor satisfaction to the city officials, who were trying to force the water commissioners to hand over certain amounts which they claimed were surpluses. It is said that the case will be appealed. If this is true, the presiding judge would confer a favour on all municipal ownership cities if he made the case so clear that there would be no possible chance for future disputes.—Guelph Mercury.

Water Rate For The Knox Church

Fixed by the Utilities Commission Yesterday Afternoon

The Utilities Committee met yesterday afternoon and attended to a small amount of routine business that was demanding attention. The water rate for the Knox Presbyterian Church was fixed at $75 a year. The superintendent was also instructed to lay a 12-inch main from Weller to Charlotte Streets on Monaghan Road.

THE CIRCUS HAS EVERYTHING, EVEN WARM WEATHER

From warm weather to silent-footed elephants, not overlooking the discordant calliope and mile-a-minute music, the Robinson Circus embraced all the parade features expected by the small boy and his great-grandfather. There have probably been longer and more elaborate parades seen in Peterborough, but the Robinson variety is neat and clean, and beapeaks a good show. Out in front of it was the man who tells the farmers to watch their horses, and warns the small boy to keep away from the elephants. It concluded with the steam calliope and the rube acrobats. The horses looked well fed, the trappings showed care and attention, and the general appearance of the parade suggested quality without extravagance.

The Robinson shows wintered in Montgomery, Alta., and since the first break of spring they have been working north, playing to decidedly good business, according to the press agent. Of course it is the duty of this gentleman to boost the show, but the Robinson Circus gives every appearance of quality, and it has been noticed that good reports have come from towns where it has played.

$25 FOR PARADE.

This morning's parade netted the City $25 for the use of the public streets, and with hundred of dwellers in the wheat belt in for the show, the business coffers were doubtless swollen by the demands of the visitors.

NEW RULES FOR POOR SUITORS ARE IN FORCE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., June 10.—The new rules for poor suitors came into force yesterday. Persons wishing to take legal action whose assets are less than 50 pounds will be found solicitors and counsel and court fees free. All expense will be paid if the applications are approved. Eight hundred lawyers have already agreed to act and fourteen hundred applications have already been received, largely applications for divorce. Hundreds more are arriving.

Royal Family Contribute To Militants' Fund

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., June 10.—Police raids on suffragette headquarters yesterday resulted, it is alleged in the discovery that several of the Royal family, including the Prince of Wales, have been regular contributors to the militant funds, while the Queen tried to contribute, but her offer was refused. Those contributions do not mean that royalty favours the militants. On the contrary it really amounts to paying for immunity for the persons and property of the Royal family from militant attacks.

"HE LEADETH ME."

There are many things in which we differ from each other, in mental capacities, in accomplishments, in disposition, in the character of our work, and for that reason no two of us have the same experience at the same moment. . . . When we are toiling the hardest some other is enjoying rest. Therefore the message that is suited to one is inappropriate for the other. . . . But here are words that are appropriate for all occasions, "He leadeth me." If we believed that and lived it, our lives would be transformed. What we need to make our rest sweet is a consciousness of God's presence and leadership. What we need to take the irksomeness out of our work is a consciousness of God's presence and leadership. What we need to take the bitterness out of our sorrow is that same consciousness. Those who have strayed into wrong pleasures and tasks and needless sorrows would have been saved all that if they had followed the divine leadership.

The leadership of God is a definite and blessed reality. In all the experiences of life, rest, work, sorrow, we ought to be able to say, "He leadeth me." And if we follow where He leads we can join in the chorus with which the Twenty-third Psalm closes: "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."—United Presbyterian.

Mr. N. C. Cameron Was After The Toy Balloon Men

Mr. N. C. Cameron, of the Retail Merchants' Association, arrived down town this morning to find circus attaches selling canes, balloons for the children and similar goods of a circus flavour. Mr. Cameron believes so strongly in the principle of local business for local merchants that transient traders and pedlars have mighty little chance of disposing of their goods in this locality without the necessary license. Hence, he decided that the toy balloon vendors were cutting in on local trade, and considered it his duty to get after them. He found out, however, that Chief Thompson had granted permits to the visitors, and they were in a fairly safe position. But the retail merchants' representative was then bound for the City Clerk for another debate on the matter. The fact of the matter, as far as can be learned, is simply that for a particular reason these circus followers have always had the privilege of selling canes and pink balloons on the street, and it is understood that they indirectly pay for the privilege.

Prof. Wrong On The Irish Situation

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., June 10.—Professor Wrong, of Toronto University, suming his conclusions after a tour of Ireland, declares: "Of two things I am certain one is that all Irishmen dread the division or their country. The other is that, the opposing sides have more respect for each other than the outside world imagines. The real problem of Ireland is to get Irishmen to remain true to one another. Attempts at settlement from the outside have failed. There is now in Ireland a deadlock that was the parent of settlement in Canada. A conference among Irishmen can end it and for a conference I plead."

Excursion Was Splendid Success

The Moonlight Excursion of the George Street Epworth League, held down the river, last night, per the steamer Stoney Lake, was very successful from two standpoints. In the first place, before the hour for the boat to leave the wharf had arrived, its capacity was taxed to the limit, and a hundred or more people who arrived sharp on time had the doubtful satisfaction of seeing the crowded boat leave her moorings and head down the river. The sight of the boat with its four hundred passengers, as it slowly left the wharf, was a gay and inspiring one, but the small crowd on the wharf who had intended to view the departure of the good ship from a different angle, did not seem to appreciate the artistic feature of the scene.

In the second place the officers of the George Street League had done everything possible to make the excursion an enjoyable one, with the result that every one on board had a good time. The Sunday School Orchestra was present and dispensed some splendid music, which was certainly a very enjoyable feature of the excursion. A refreshment booth carrying a full stock of ice cream and soft drinks, had been arranged, and there was a big run on the liquid refreshments all evening, showing that those on board appreciated the presence of such a booth, and resulting in a tidy profit for the League. There were perhaps only three or four who said they did not enjoy the excursion to the full, and they were in the vicinity of the "Agony Quartette," who took possession of the rear of the deck and "executed" songs that until last night were universally popular.

The boat left the wharf about eight o'clock and returned about eleven. The sail was a pleasant one and the League is to be complimented on the success of the venture.

VISITORS ARE ARRIVING AT CHEMONG NOW

Examiner Special:

Harry Jopling is out with his new auto Buick, delivering meat through the country. He takes in Buckhorn, Burleigh Falls and Young's Point. It is a great convenience for the villages that have no butcher, as they can get their meat in a short time.

The Bridgenorth Court of Foresters attended Divine service at the Gilmour Memorial Church on Sunday last, and listened to a fine discourse delivered by the Rev. Mr. McLarnie. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the Rev. Mr. McLarnie for the welcome to the Foresters and the able sermon they listened to.

Quite a number of summer visitors have arrived at the Park during the last week, and it looks at present that the Park is going to boom this summer. Mr. Jobe has added some improvements to the pavilion and ice cream stand, so as to make everything more convenient. No doubt the public will appreciate the improvements.

Wm. Ball, our village painter, has secured some contracts for painting in the city, and will be absent from the village for some time.

Mr. A. McWilliam has a contract to keep the cottagers in the Park cool. He delivers the ice.

Mr. Gordon Robinson is going to supply the Park with milk and cream this summer again. He gave good satisfaction last summer and no doubt he will do so again.

DEMENTED GIRL HAD $1417 IN HER HANDBAG

NEW YORK, June 9.—A demented girl modishly dressed, with a big Scotch collie on a leash at her side, was wandering aimlessly about the waiting room of the Grand Central Terminal the other day, when the dog began to bark. She had attracted considerable attention earlier in the evening as she walked back and forth in the room, and the minute the dog began his barking the crowd of curious ones gathered about her.

In the crowd was Miss Michelson, of the Travellers' Aid Society, who asked the girl if she could be of assistance.

"Why, yes," replied the girl. "Perhaps you can help me be captain of the Titanic. I came here early this morning, but I can't find where the Titanic is docked. I think I'll try the Aquitania."

On account of her manner and talk Miss Michelson and two station attendants accompanied the girl to a side room, where she said she was Ellen Bushnell, 24 years old, of Great Barrington, Mass. She could not remember her father's name or his occupation.

After a few minutes of rest she was again questioned, but her answers were incoherent. Miss Michelson then decided to take her to Bellevue on the Third Avenue elevated.

A large leather handbag hung from her arm and when she was admitted to Bellevue and searched a purse inside this handbag was found to contain $1,417.

She was placed in the psycopathic ward and her father at Great Barrington, was notified by telegraph.

Thos. Harrison Is Acquitted

Witness—Yes.

Mr. Ruddy—Did you go into the house, or attempt to go into the house?

Beatty—No.

Mr. Ruddy—Did you see the rifle, did you ask for it, or did you take it?

Beatty—No.

Mr. Ruddy—Is it not a fact that the prisoner had some minutes' talk with you in the barn, and explained the whole matter to you and that you, after hearing his case, said: "I don't know what they all want?"

Witness—I do not remember saying that.

Mr. Ruddy—"And is it not also a fact that before you went you said it was a rather hard thing?

Witness—I don't think I did.

Mr. Ruddy — Did you take any whiskey?

Witness—No.

Mr. Ruddy—Did you see any whiskey?

Witness—Yes, Mr. Smith had a bottle.

Mr. Ruddy—Did you drink?

Witness—No.

Mr. Ruddy—Did the others?

Witness—Smith offered it to Harrison and Davidson, the man in charge of the rig. Harrison refused it the first time, but took it afterwards.

Mr. Smith.

Mr. Smith, who was engaged by the plaintiff to remain in possession of the property corroborated the story of the two previous witnesses. He was of opinion that the writ was not properly executed, and thought he could have done the job if he had been in authority.

For the defence, Harrison was put in the box, and the points relied on for acquittal were, briefly: the following:

That the Sheriff Officer, Beatty, did not understand his duty.

That he did not explain his business when he first arrived.

That he did not ask Harrison to remove his chattels to the road, and that Harrison succeeded in explaining to him that he was not in arrears. It was admitted that threats may have been made at first, but the fact of Beatty remaining on the place for half an hour, claimed the defence, put all thoughts of intimidation out of the question. On these points, Mr. Ruddy asked the jury to consider their verdict. The Judge, in his charge to the jury, pointed out the fine points of the case, and after being out half an hour, the jury returned with a verdict of "not guilty."

Prisoner was accordingly discharged.

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again
FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000, No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.
The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.
The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.
On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.
Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.
Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?

GRAND JURY MAKE THEIR REPORT TO JUDGE HUYCKE

Have Commented Upon the Presence of Tuberculosis in the County and Recommended Additions to Various Institutions

To His Honour Judge Huycke:

May it please Your Honour to receive the report of the Grand Jury of the County Court of Peterborough.

We are pleased to join with you in congratulating this County in its freedom from serious crime.

In accordance with your instructions we have passed upon the indictment which came before us and we trust our duties in that respect have met with your approval.

We have inspected the County Jail and found everything in that institution to be conducted in a satisfactory manner. We found no old people there, and those few who were there, six in number, were committed on minor charges.

We visited St. Joseph's Hospital, House of Providence, St. Vincent's Orphanage, Nicholls Hospital and the Protestant Home. We wish to congratulate those in charge of the various institutions for the capable and efficient manner in which they look after the welfare of the inmates. We believe that great care and skill is exercised by those in charge. We regret very much that we found no fire escapes in connection with the Protestant Home, and would respectfully recommend that the proper authorities would have that institution equipped with fire escapes as soon as possible.

In visiting the House of Refuge we found it to be conducted in a capable and efficient manner. We, however, found one unfortunate inmate, who is suffering from a form of insanity, which is a source of great annoyance to the inmates, and would recommend that he should be removed from that institution and committed to one adapted for cases such as his.

The Grand Jury are led to believe that there are a large number of people in the County of Peterborough suffering from Tuberculosis, and as there is no provision made by the Government or County to look after diseases of this description, we would suggest for the protection of the community, that a suitable building should be provided to give those people suffering from this disease the proper care and attention.

Respectfully submitted,

JAS. LYNCH,
Foreman.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKET

Latest reports indicate a continuance of the bullish specialty tactics in the stock market. A remarkable underlying confidence is seen in parts of the financial district, evidence of it coming from many directions. Here is a typical expression: "I feel more encouraged, more hopeful and more confidence in the future than at any time in the past 25 years." This emanates from a highly responsible source. An additional declaration that is made is, "In fact there is more interest than ever." This view is taking the place of the pessimism of last year. Specialties in which pools are reported working for higher prices include Westinghouse Pref., Third Avenue, Am. Beet Sugar, Can., Republic Steel, Am. Loco., Central Leather and Peterboro' Pref.

Very good buying is noted by floor brokers in Atch., B.R.T., G.Q., St. Paul, Union Pac., Southern Pacific and C.P.R.

Shorts are still finding it difficult to release from U.S., Reading and New Haven. C.P.R. rose to 196 and brokers are of the opinion it will sell between 206 and 210. It still can be bought if it reacts a couple of points, and more if it goes to 193.

THE DRIFT TOWARDS ROWELL

How High Principle is Melting Party Lines—Everybody Getting Behind Rowell's Policy to Push it to the Front

Every day adds to the list of men in Ontario who are Conservatives or of different views to the Liberals who are "getting behind" the "abolish-the-bar" policy. The action of some Conservative candidates also in pledging support to the temperance reform and the number of Temperance candidates being put in the field show distinctly the run of the tide. Every day it grows stronger, and the confusion in Conservative ranks springing from fear is becoming so pronounced that it is the subject of comment even amongst the Conservatives themselves. The action of Mr. C. J. Doughty, the candidate nominated by the official Conservative convention in the riding of Riverdale, in acquiring the "abolish-the-bar" plank and two others of the important Rowell policies, is but typical of the change taking place in the minds of hundreds of Conservatives.

Conservatives' Confusion.

Confusion and weakness are shown in the arguments of some Government candidates, who evidently not appreciating the intelligence of Ontario people, make the absurd charge that Rowell is not sincere. That this statement is not swallowed by the electorate is apparent from the remarks at the Church conferences and the statements of temperance people.

At several conventions the temperance people have desired to ask the Conservative candidates questions, but were refused hearings.

Breaking the Ranks.

Even in the Conservative conventions themselves the temperance feeling has been such that many splits have occurred, and in some cases Independent Conservatives, because of temperance principles, will take the field against regular Conservative candidates. In East Durham F. W. Galbraith, a prominent Conservative of Port Hope, but an ardent supporter of abolish-the bar, is opposing Dr. J. J. Preston, the regular Conservative candidate. In West Simcoe Rev. John Coburn, who has been a man of Conservative leanings, will oppose Hon. James Duff. In West Peterborough the sentiment was so strong that R. J. Soden, a Conservative and advocate of abolish-the bar, captured the nomination from E. A. Peck, a former member, comes out for abolition of the bar. In Wellington Charles E. Steele who has been a prominent Conservative for years, taking the abolish-the-bar platform, opposes Major Sharpe.

In Toronto some of the sentiment is seen in the nomination of W. McTavish by the Ontario Young Manhood Association in the riding of Parkdale. North Waterloo also has a temperance candidate.

Ministers Speak Out.

The remarks of certain well-known ministers, who have never before said anything concerning active politics, are attracting the attention of Ontario now. Here are some of the statements made by ministers recently.

Rev. John McNeill, pastor of Cooke's Church, at the Rowell mass meeting: "It is not a question of Liberal or Conservative. It is a question of 'abolish the bar.'"

Rev. R. J. Treleaven at High Park Methodist Church, Sunday: "I voted against the Ross Government and twice since for Whitney, but I'm going to change my vote on this issue."

Rev. C. A. Sykes at St. Paul's Methodist Church on Sunday stated that Churches and temperance organizations had sought some party to bring on advanced temperance legislation. "One party has done so and we should stand by it."

Rev. W. H. Crews, President of Hamilton Conference, declared at the Conference he was for the Rowell policy and advised the ministers to speak fearlessly in its support.

Hamilton Methodist Conference on Monday passed a resolution pledging united support to Rowell on the "abolish the bar" platform. There was but one dissenter.

Ex-Alderman James Hales, a Toronto Conservative, at the Rowell meeting, said: "I have no right to be here to-night except as a citizen of Canada who is dissatisfied with the lack of progress along temperance lines made by my own party."

Revolt Outside Toronto.

Mr. A. H. Allen, D.D.S., Paisley, and a prominent Conservative of Bruce county, in a letter to The Globe says: "I am indeed thankful that a man like Mr. Rowell is not afraid to test the people and find out whether they meant it the other to "abolish the bar." . . . being naturally a Tory partisan by training and environment, it follows that some strong conviction must have impelled me to take up arms against the Whitney Government."

Mayor Gollett, of Orillia, a Hepburn Conservative, spoke at the council in favour of Mr. Herbert Cooke, the Liberal candidate in East Simcoe, last night, and said that he was still a Conservative, but held that it was every man's right to think and act for himself."

TURNBULL'S

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Petes Win Another Ten Innings Game From Beavers

Beat Torontos Yesterday by 4 Runs to 3, the Winning Run Being Shot Over With One Gone in the Tenth.

Now we know what was the matter with the Petes. Nine innings' games are not long enough to give them a chance. Monday Knotty Lee's Beavers were beaten in an extra innings contest ,and yesterday the home talent repeated the feat, beating the Leaflets 4 to 3 in a ten innings battle. There was some history made yesterday. In the first place it made two wins in succession for the Petes; in the second instance Stan Cresswell had a base knock, and in the third the Petes played errorless ball. Opinion is devided as to which is the most wonderful feat of the three.

The Petes staged another effective wind-up, along the same general lines as that which distinguished the tenth spasm of the Monday victory. After Schettler had died on a line drive to left and Mr. Isaacs had obligingly dropped a foul fly from Blount's bat, Pitcher Graham helped things along by plugging the home leader with a pitched ball. Now Mr. Blount is no person to put on the sacks when one run will break up the ball game. He showed it a moment later when Byrne hit safely to third, Isaacs deflecting his high bounder past Killilea, and Blount by a fine turn of speed went all the way to third. This was the setting when Welsh strode out to the plate. A moment later the scene was changed, the left fielder cracking one on a line to right. The ball went over Trout's head and Blount walked home with the winning run.

The game was one of the finest exhibitions of the year, with snappy, accurate fielding on both sides, and it was a highly tickled crowd of fans that left the grounds. It was Ladies' Day, and the many representatives of the fair sex enjoyed themselves immensely. K. Lee honoured the occasion by putting on a clean shirt, while he gave the ladies a treat by going out on the coaching lines for a while, risking the chances of getting his finely chiseled features sun-burned.

Cresswell was selected by Manager Blount to do the heaving, and for five innings he twirled a mighty nice brand of ball. The Beavers bunched two hits for acounter in the first. but were blanked in the next four innings. The big youngster weakened in the sixth and four hits in a row, one of them a fluky double by Schultz, gave the Lee gang a chance to tie the score. With everything even Manager Blount sent Schettler in in the seventh, and as on the previous day his choice was a wise one, the Beavers being at the mercy of the Youngstown boy for the balance of the game.

Alex. Graham, product of the Toronto City League, was the Beaver's gunner, and after the first innings when two bases on balls, a bone-head play by Schultz, and hits by Stewart and King, gave the homesters three runs, he was very effective. In the next eight innings Graham allowed but four hits, and held the homesters scoreless. His undoing came in the tenth, a muff by Isaacs of a foul fly helping to put him in bad.

Clean hitting gave the Beavers a run in the first. Trout, first up cracked the first ball on a line to centre for a single, and Burrill sacrificed neatly. Ort died on a hot grounder to Byrne, Trout being held at second.. Marty Killilea came through with a hot one through the box scoring Troutie. Killilea purloined the middle station but Cresswell fanned Schultz.

There were doings in the home talents' half. Graham was very wild on the go-in and Blount and Byrne waited him out to get free transportation. Welsh laid down a bunt for a sacrifice, but Schultz pulled a John Anderson by trying for Blount at third.. The little munager easily beat the throw and the bases were drunk when Dad Stewart ambled up to the plate. "Bing," and the pellet shot along the third base line for a double, Blount and Byrne registering. King kept up the good work by cutting a single past first base, and Welsh counted. The chances for more runs looked rosy, but Wilcox introdueed a new brand of baseball by making three foul bunts in a row, and Gorman hit to Ort who tried to tag King on the line and then threw to first, getting Gorman. King was declared out for running off the line and the run-getting was over.

Neither side threatened in the second and third. In the fourth, however, the Beavers looked dangerous when Ort lead off with a single and was sacrificed to second by Killilea. Cresswell got by safely by fanning Schultz and getting Isaac on a bounder to Byrne

There was more trouble in the air in the fifth when Loud was passed to start with. However, when Harkins bunted for a sacrifice, Wilcox threw Loud out at second and Kelly nipped Harkins a moment later when he tried to steal. The two killings were very fortunate as Graham was passed, and Trout singled to right. Burrill's best was a fly to Blount and the danger was over for the time, being.

Next innings, however, it broke out again. With two strikes on him, Ort poled a clean single to left. Killilea laid down a bunt on which he easily made first. but Ort tried to go to third on the play and was chased and tagged out by Byrne. Schultz dropped a Texas Leaguer into right field for two bases and with the infield in Isaac slammed one over second, sending Killilea and Schultz over and tying up the game. Loud drove a wicked one over second which Wilcox managed to knock down in time to force Isaac and Kelly got Loud by a neat peg when he tried to steal.

Schettler relieved Cresswell at the beginning of the seventh and had the Beavers jumping through a hoop for the balance of the game. Graham singled with one gone in the seventh, but not another of Knotty's help found their way to the initial sack. Graham was also breezing along in great style holding the Petes hitless from the fifth until they broke loose in the tenth.

HAMILTON TEAM HERE TO-MORROW

The Hamilton Athletics in charge of Doc. Yates, dentist and alleged pitcher, will drop into town to-morrow for a three-game series with the Petes. This is the first visit of the Hams here this season, and with the Petes going along nicely the series should be a hummer and should draw big crowds across the river. The Athletics will introduce a bunch of new players and also some well known personages including Jack White, formerly of the Petes, Harry Corns, Gilhooly and Red Fisher. The visitors have a strong pitching staff, and some hitting strength as well, and they will give the Petes a merry battle during the last three days of the week.

GAME WILL BE REPLAYED

President Fitzgerald, of the Canadian League, has decided the Peterborough protest in the game at the Island as follows: The ball hit into the enclosure by Blount of Peterborough should have been a home run. There was no ground rule, and a ball out of sight is a home run. Manager Blount, however, should have gone back to third as ordered by the umpire and finished the game under protest. Because he refused to do so and left the field the game must be played over. Toronto had still its tenth innings to play, and Peterborough had only two out when the hit was made. The game will be played over here on Peterborough's next visit.

GOLF

On Friday evening the Peterborough Golf Club will play the Lindsay Golf Club at the Lindsay Links. Eighteen members of the local club are going up for the game

NOTES ON THE GAME.

Two in a row.

That's our longest winning streak.

Manager Blount's choice of relief pitchers in thel ast two games has been a very happy one.

You've got to hand it to Knotty Lee. He has produced a team that the Petes can beat.

King made a beautiful catch to wind up the Toronto half of the tenth, going back to the fence to pull down Burrill's long foul fly.

Schettler did some fine fielding. In the ninth he speared a high bounder from Loud's bat with his gloved hand, and then followed up this stunt by fielding Harkins' slow roller near the third-base line, and getting the catcher by a beautiful throw.

Dad Stewart's double in the first innings was put in just where it would do the most good. The bases were loaded at the time, and two runs scored.

Trout is the man-of-all work for the Beavers. Yesterday he was in right field. As usual he came through with a couple of hits.

Burrill did some nice fielding in left garden for the visitors, grabbing six flies.

Kelly pegged out two base runners out of three chances. Killilea was the only one to steal safely, and at that the throw beat him to the bag. The Petes' catcher was in the limelight also with a beautiful catch of Trout's high foul which he chased to the visitors' bench to grab.

Bobby Auld will pitch for the Beavers this afternoon in the closing game of the series. Manager Blount's choice was not given out this morning.

Kelly has a sore hand and will be unable to work to-day. Mully Miller, whose injured hand is nearly better, will be behind the bat.

The probabilities are that Fox will be back at second base this afternoon.

There is nothing new in regard to Fried. The Ottawa infielder may report on Friday if Smykal rejoins the Senators before that time.

3000 HITS FOR WAGNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—"Hans" Wagner, the veteran shortstop of the Pittsburg National League team, today made his three thousandth hit in 17 years of major league baseball. It was a two-bagger off Pitcher Mayer with no one on base, in the ninth inning. He subsequently scored Pittsburg's only run of the game. He was applauded when he made the hit and again when he crossed the plate.

The only other player who is said to have made 3,000 hits in his major league career was Adrian C. Anson, who batted out 3,047 in 22 years.

BASEBALL

Cressman's 2, St. Paul's 0.

In the best played amateur game of the season, last night at Riverside Park, the Cressman store team shut out St. Paul's Church League team 2 to 0. Payton pitched a beautiful game for the Big Store boys and only two of the Church Leaguers reached third base. Germany Schlueter again came through at the right time, making the hit that scored the first run after two were out in the fourth. An effort is being made to have the two teams meet again nert week.

This year the same able management will arrange a similar picnic on Saturday next to Rice Lake, leaving the Peterborough wharf at 2 p.m. by the steamer "Stoney Lake."

Although this pleasant function is not advertised generally, it is understood that any lady or gentleman who is acquainted with any of the Conservatory staff, will be able to procure a ticket.

Given such weather as exists at the present time of writing this paragraph, a most enjoyable outing may be looked forward to.

WEDDING BELLS

SMITH—LOGAN.

A pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon when Miss Florence Hilda Logan of Auburn, became the bride of Mr. David Smith of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's Church in the presence of a number of invited guests. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left this afternoon for Toronto.

FLANNERY—MANLEY.

This afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Laura Wesley, daughter of Mr. Henry Manley, Edinburgh street, was married to Mr. Geo. Wesley Flannery. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. G. Peever, after which a very nice wedding dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Flannery have left on a wedding trip, and on their return will reside in Peterborough.

COPPING—ALDRIDGE.

An exceedingly pretty wedding was colemnized in St. Paul's Church this morning at 7:30 o'clock when Miss Hattie Aldridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hartley, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Russel V. Copping, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo Copping, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Pogue.

The bride, who looked charming in a travelling suit of navy blue, a picture hat of pink, and a waist to match trimmed with pearls and mignons, was given away by her father. She carried an immense bouquet of large pink roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmand, Miss Francis Routley, was dressed in pink taffeta silk, with pretty hat to match. She carried a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Mr. Ross Barber, of Toronto, was groomsman.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Geo. Copping, of Toronto, was dressed in a beautiful gown of charmeuse silk, trimmed with mignon, and a beautiful picture hat to match.

Mrs. Hartley, the bride's mother, wore a splendid gown of blue shot silk, trimmed with chinchilla lace, and ap lumed hat to match.

After the ceremony the happy couple left on a month's wedding trip, and on their return will reside in Peterborough. The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and costly wedding presents.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Norman Copping, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Clarke, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Copping, of Toronto. The wedding march was played by Mr. John Allan.

The death occurred in Toronto this morning of Mrs. Eastwood, the mother of Dr. Eastwood, Brock street. Mrs. Eastwood, who was 78 years old, had been sick for a long time, and suffered a relapse about ten days ago.

The funeral will take place at Whitby on Friday afternoon.

MICHAEL O'BRIEN.

Phillip O'Brien, aged 56 years, and a lifelong resident of Douro, passed away at his home, lot 7, con. 3, yesterday. He was well-known and highly respected in Douro and many friends will regret to learn of his death.

He is survived by a widow and one daughter, Miss Emma, at home, as well as one brother, the Rev. M. J. O'Brien, North Dakota, and five sisters, Sister St. Geraldine, Lindsay; Sister St. Michael, Brockville; Sister St. Mary Rose, Holyhope, Mass.; Mrs. J. H. Moher and Mrs. O'Donnel, Sault Ste. Marie

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock to St. Joseph's Church and Cemetery.

RUMOURED RESIGNATION OF THE OFFICERS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., June 10—Col. Hodgins, Divisional Commander of Militia, here, declared to-day that he knew nothing of the resignation of the officers of the Sixth Field Battery of this City as a result of the tents being searched for liquor at Petawawa Camp.

The rumoured resignations have caused a furore among local military authorities. Col. Hodgins stated that if the story was true he would endeavour to smooth things over.

HASTINGS NEWS

Items of Interest From The Thriving Eastern Village

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, June 9.—Mr. Willis Preston has taken to himself a wife in the person of Miss M. Lobb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lobb, of Asphodel. The wedding was solemnized on Wednesday last at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of a large company of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Rev. D. A. Thomson, Hastings, was the officiating clergyman, and firmly tied the nuptial knot, which bound together the happy young couple for life. After a short honeymoon trip they returned on Tuesday to their home here, where a right royal reception was tendered them at the groom's home, a large company gathering to bid them welcome. A host of friends join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Preston "bon voyage" through life.

Wednesday, June 3rd, was generally recognised as a bank holiday. Quite a number of our young people motored to Peterborough to enjoy the lacrosse game, returning in the "wee sma' hours."

A very successful "Church Bee" was held at the Methodist Church here on Wednesday last, under the capable management of Mr. Jas. Buck, who had the oversight of lifting in and levelling the church lawn preparatory to seeding. The ladies of the church furnished hot meals in the basement of the church, which was much appreciated by the workers, who put in a faithful day. The committee in charge are pleased with the success of the venture.

Rev. T. H. J. Anderson is in Napanee attending the different sessions of the conference.

Mr. Winter Runnels spent Wednesday in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Downie, of Peterborough, have been holidaying at the home of the former's uncle, Mr. J. Buck.

Mr. E. Sluggett, of Warkworth, motored to Hastings on Wednesday last.

Miss Hawkins, of Perry, is a guest of Mrs. (Rev.) Anderson, The Parsonage.

The congregation of the Presbyterian Church here been improving the appearance of their property by laying a cement pavement from the street to the front of the church.

Mrs. J. Buck returned on Saturday from Toronto, whither she was called on account of her daughter's illness. Her friends are pleased to learn that she is recovering.

Messrs. T. P. Lancaster and A. Armstrong, of Havelock, gave us a call last week.

Mr. S. A. McBride, of Peterborough, spent Saturday in this vicinity in the interest of the J. Deere Plow Co., of Toronto.

Miss Flossie and Clara Ivey, of Campbellford, have been guests of Miss Myrtle Hess.

Little Miss Bertena Beavis is visiting her aunt, Mrs. V. Gorman.

At the lacrosse game played here on Saturday, the locals came off victorious.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanvolkenburg, of Trent Bridge, visited on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Brooks.

Miss Hazel Humphries, of Campbellford, spent the week-end under the parental roof.

Miss Blewett, of Lakefield, is visiting with Mrs. C. Plant.

Miss Wilkinson, of Campbellford, spent Wednesday last in town.

Mr. John Ivey, of Bethan spent Sunday with Dr. Hess.

Dr. and Mrs. Edmison have been visiting friends in Keene.

Monday, 8th June, was acknowledged by all as the hottest day of the season, and everyone breathed a sigh of relief when, in the evening, a delightful breeze was wafted along and the extreme heat of the day was a thing of the past.

Mr. Robert Harriman, of Otonabee, passed through this district last week, delivering books, for which he had taken orders a short time ago.

Mr. E. J. Laing, of Norwood, gave us a call last week.

Mr. C. Jones has purchased a beautiful Heintzman piano and has had it placed in his home.

ROMANCE ON THE HOMESTEAD.

The U. S. House of Representatives has passed a bill allowing women homesteaders to marry and live elsewhere with their husbands without losing title to their claims.

They're lettin' Mister Cupid take a homestead in his name;
No more they're goin' to bar him — Uncle Sam's O. K.'d his game;
The lady honyocker opens up her tiny shack,
And when she sees Love comin' she doesn't send him back;
And she doesn't spend her evenin's on a sleep dispellin' plan,
Debatin' o'er the question of the homestead 'gainst the man.

The lady honyocker now kin drive her homestakes deep,
And in case she loves some cowboy or some man that herds the sheep,
She kin say "Yes" without losin' all the acres she has staked.
And she needn't drop the pennies that through lonely days she's raked,
For your kindly Uncle Samuel's looked this Cupid feller o'er.
And will let him come a-tappin' at the honyocker's door.

Oh, it's a good ol' Uncle Samuel for to smooth love's trail out West.
And the girl upon the homestead will rise up and call him blessed;
And no doubts will crowd upon her in her small, tar paper home
That's a speck upon the prairie, arched above by bluest dome;
She kin hold her hand out freely, when she meets the Only Him.
'Stead of hangin' back and askin': "Is the claim worth more than Jim?"

—Arthur Chapman.

BASEBALL

A fan showed the Examiner to-day a copy of the sporting page of the Montreal Gazette in an issue of 1910 in which Louie Schettler's name appears as pitcher for the Philadelphia Nationals. Schettler pitched an eleven innings game against Brooklyn and won 3 to 5, with Ruether and Benzau doing the twirling for Brooklyn. In the same issue appears a report of a game which Dr. Reisling, the present London manager, lost for Washington.

CONNAUGHT MAY STAY.

It Is Reported That Term Will Be Lengthened Until April, 1916.

QUEBEC, June 11. — There is a rumor here that H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught may remain as Governor-General of Canada for another eighteen months, that is to say, until April of 1916, instead of leaving in October, when his present term as vice-regent will come to an end.

The rumor is said to have originated in the citadel, where the Governor-General's quarters are, but it is impossible of confirmation at this time, and if any announcement is to be made it will in all likelihood come from Ottawa, and it could hardly be given out here just now. In view of the criticism of the appointment of Prince Alexander of Teck, to succeed the duke, this latest report is meeting with credence in many quarters.

LONG TASK IS OVER

Redistribution Bill Read First Time in Commons

UNANIMOUS REPORT MADE

OTTAWA, June 11.—The redistribution bill was given its first reading in the Commons last evening. As the committee which had charge of the bill brought in an unanimous report, it is likely that the discussion on the second reading of the measure to-day will not be prolonged.

In the next House there will be 234 members, an increase over the present House of 13. Quebec which provides the unit of representation, will have 65 members, Ontario will have 82, losing 4; New Brunswick 11, losing 2; Nova Scotia 16, losing 2; Prince Edward Island 3, losing 1; Manitoba 15, gaining 5; Saskatchewan 16, gaining 6; Alberta 13, gaining 5; British Columbia 13, gaining 6; Yukon 1, as formerly.

The difficulty which has existed for some time regarding Russell and Richmond, N.S., has been overcome by the Government yielding Russell, which they proposed to eliminate and giving two members to South Cape Breton and Richmond as united counties.

CALLS IT "GOLD BRICK."

Parcel Post Achieving Little Says Hon. Mr. Lemieux.

OTTAWA, June 11. — The Commons spent yesterday quietly over estimates of public works, fisheries, finance and labor. The wholesale voting of millions of dollars for public works of all kinds was the feature of the day.

In connection with the postoffice estimates, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux said the parcel post service so far was "more or less of a gold brick." It was doing little to bring producer and consumer together. A 6-pound parcel went from Ottawa to Montreal for 40c., and by express it went for 35c. In the United States it would go by parcel post for 19c. Eleven pounds was the limit here, while 72 pounds was the American limit. It was cheaper also to send a parcel from Toronto to Hong Kong than from Toronto to Vancouver. He urged a readjustment of the rate weight, and soon the system might be a success here as in other countries.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier said there had been an organized war on the parcel post all over the country. In all the Liberal papers, he said, the same article had appeared attacking the system, and the campaign had had some effect. The number of parcels, however, was steadily increasing, and the system would succeed in spite of all opposition. Mr. Pelletier said the department was considering the matter of not only delivering but also collecting parcels from the houses in all cities where there is a carrier delivery.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux asked if the question of Hindu immigration would be brought up at the Imperial Conference, but Mr. Borden could not give him any information on this point.

SHIP IS GOING BACK.

Hindus Must Find $15,000 at Once Say Owners.

VANCOUVER, June 11. — Captain Yamamoto, master of the Komagata Maru, received a cable yesterday morning from the owners [illegible] definitely instructing him to sail from Vancouver to-day for the orient, if the remainder of the charter money, amounting to $15,000, is not paid on behalf of the 359 Hindus now aboard, by that time.

Monday evening a consignment of provisions was sent out to them, but they paid only $100 in cash and owe a balance of $1,000. They declare they cannot get the money to complete payment unless they are allowed ashore, and this the immigration officers will not permit.

If the ship sails to-day, trouble is looked for. The ship owners have no responsibility for provisioning. It will require many thousands of dollars to buy provisions for the return trip, and the Hindus insist they have no money to buy any unless allowed ashore. The officials fear that the Hindus may jump overboard as the ship is leaving the harbor.

STEPS ON CARS MUST BE REMOVED

The Ontario Railway Board Issues Peremptory Order

The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to-day, gave the Toronto Street Railway Company until Sept. 15th in which to submit plans which would do away with the side steps on open trolleys. The order which came as the result of the application of the Railway Company Employees' Union for a centre aisle in summer trolleys, practically means the elimination of the running board on Toronto street cars, and from statements made by officials of the company it appeared quite possible that in future summers, the public of this city will travel in the same cars as used in the winter time, with exception of lowered windows.

The representatives of the conductors and the motormen took a flat stand for a centre aisle. Only this, they claimed, would do away with the dangers to the lives of conductors, and a conference with the company officials would be fruitless.

The street railway officials, through Mr. H. S. Osler, solicitor, and Mr. R. J. Fleming, general manager, believed that the cars were not wide enough for the centre aisle and considered that the only solution would be the using of winter cars the year around. They were, however, prepared to consult with their experts and plans will be submitted.

The stand taken by the members of the board throughout the hearing was that running boards were dangerous in the extreme and must go.

"Running boards were in use in the days of horse cars," said Mr. Gibbons, "when the speed was only three, four or five miles an hour, and street congestion was not what it is to-day. One hand was always free. With the electric cars came transfers, occupying the other hand. The conductor has only three fingers free in passing from seat to seat. A sudden jolt causes him to lose his balance and fall into the street. These cars have been done away with in American cities and it would be no hardship to place an aisle in the middle in Toronto cars."

Chairman McIntyre: "It seems to me there is no need of delving into the causes of accidents. It is apparent to anyone that the Conductors are asked to perform their duties under conditions with a very imminent element of danger with the cars running at a high rate of speed. We have not hesitated to legislate in connection with factories and we should allow the men to suggest means of eliminating that danger."

Dropped Wreath Where Mother Died.

LONDON, June 11.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—When the Canadian Alaunia which reached Plymouth yesterday from Canada, passed the scene of the sinking of the Empress of Ireland, a service was conducted by the Salvation Army delegates on board. The passengers sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and Bandmaster Perryer, who lost his mother in the disaster, dropped a wreath over the spot.

Cattle Drovers' Bet Thrown Out Of Court

Jury Decided Transaction Was Simply a Bet and Court Had No Jurisdiction

LINDSAY, June 10—A very interesting case came before Judge McMillan at the jury sittings of the Spring Assizes of the County Court, Tuesday afternoon, in which Wm. E. Hutchings, cattle drover of Haliburton, sued Geo. Perrin, of Peterborough, another cattle drover, for breach of contract and for damages therefrom.

It seems the whole action grew out of the sale of some cattle to a commission house in Toronto.

Hutchings stood and watched Perrin unload the two carloads of cattle and then that evening offered Perrin $5 for his check from the commission house saying he would give Perrin $2500 for the check when paid and keep anything beyond that amount or make good himself anything under that.

In the morning, however, he rued his bargain and got his $5 back so that the deal was off. Later, however, he offered Perrin $1 for his chances of getting a check for $2375. As in the previous case Hutchings was to have for his own everything beyond that amount and to make up out of his own pocket any shortage below that amount should that occur.

The amount realized was $2,380 and the bargain was not carried through.

Hutchings claims that he understood there were sixty cattle and four calves while in reality there were only fifty cattle and four calves. He claimed, therefore, that a certain amount was due him on the bargain as the full number of cattle would have brought a great deal more than $2,375.

Perrin in a counter claim maintained that an amount was due him because the cheque fell due below the amount agreed upon, $2,375.

Perrin claims he never at any time stated the number of cattle he was selling and that the transaction between himself and Hutchings was merely that of Hutchings buying for $1 his chances of getting a cheque for the stated sum of $2,375.

The jury held that the whole transaction was a betting proposition, pure and simple, and therefore was illegal, so that neither could enforce any claim, agreement or implied agreement on the other, through the courts. The counter-claim by the defendant was withdrawn by him under this ruling. The court dismissed the action, costs to the plaintiff. I. E. Weldon for Wm. R. Hutchings. McLaughlin, Peel, Fulton, Stinson and Anderson for Geo. Perrin.

QUICK TOUR ENDS

Mr. Rowell Gets a Bumper Audience in North Bay

TWO THOUSAND PRESENT

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 11.—The Liberal leader's hasty tour of New Ontario was concluded here last night by a big meeting. The opera house was filled to the doors and many had to stand. The attendance was about two thousand. Mr. Rowell, after an exhausting trip from Port Arthur and a side trip to New Liskeard, was in good form, and was well received.

He scored the Government for refusing to pay taxes on the vacant land held by the T. & N. O. Railway in northern towns, censured the timber policy, charged that the workmen's compensation act was inadequate, and dealt with the cost of the Government House and the unemployed labor question.

He also attacked the refusal of the Government to give the vote to married women, while giving the vote to corporations on money bylaws. Tax reform was advocated by Mr. Rowell in his address, and the reduction of the grant to rural schools was also criticized.

As to bilingual schools, he said there could be no ground for objection to the use of French in the schools if it would further the education of French-Canadian children.

Mr. Rowell also charged that the franchise was refused to married women at the behest of the liquor interests.

J. H. Marcon, the local Liberal candidate, endorsed himself strongly in favor of the "abolish the bar" policy of his leader.

G. A. McQuarrie was chairman and the speakers included A. J. Young, J. H. McCurry and Dr. Bedard, the last-named speaking in French, while the candidate spoke in both languages.

Regiment Disbanded.

THREE RIVERS, Que., June 11.—The ill-feeling in the city of Three Rivers against the militia has culminated in the disbanding of the city regiment of infantry, the 36th, which was commanded by Lieut.-Col. L. P. Mercier, and although efforts are being made to reorganize the regiment, the greatest difficulties are being experienced, and a suitable commandant cannot easily be secured.

SYLVIA IS ARRESTED.

Scheme To Visit Premier Asquith Balked By Police.

LONDON, June 11.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was not even permitted to approach Westminster last night to interview Premier Asquith. The proposed visit to the Prime Minister was arranged for some days ago by Miss Pankhurst and other militant leaders, and it was decided Tuesday night that she should be carried shoulder-high in the procession, as she was not considered strong enough to bear the strain of what promised to be an arduous journey.

Before the procession had gone a mile Miss Pankhurst was arrested for the eighth time since she was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and conveyed to Holloway Jail.

The procession struggled on without a leader, but by the time it reached the Strand it had been dispersed by the police. Under the leadership of George Lansbury, former Socialist member of the House of Commons, a deputation of women proceeded to Parliament, where they were received by F. H. Illingworth, the chief Liberal whip, after having been refused in all attempts to see the Premier.

The demonstration was organized with all the well-known cleverness of the suffragettes for dramatic effect. A crowd of 10,000 people gathered at 3 o'clock at the junction of Commercial road and High street, Whitechapel, where two processions, one from Bow and the other from Poplar, were to join about the same hour.

A procession was formed, but suddenly at a narrow place in the route the police arrested Miss Pankhurst and whisked her off to Holloway Jail.

There was little enthusiasm among the marchers, and the openly expressed hostility of the populace dampened the ardor of the demonstration, so that by the time it reached the Strand the police had little difficulty in dispersing it and preventing any reformation.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

Power was slightly ashamed of his outburst already. "You make me feel myself a blatant misanthropist," he said contritely. "I had no right to blaze out at you in that way. But, now you are here, you shall not escape so easily. Again, and most heartily, I thank you for coming. I realise now that what I want more than anything else in the world was some kindly ear into which to pour my griefs. Ordinarily I am not that sort of man. I prefer to endure the minor ills of life in silence. But I have been slammed so hard this time that self-control became a torture. I think I reached the full extent of my resources when I stood by my mother's open grave to-day, and saw her name on the coffin. I wanted to tear my heart out with my own hands. For a few seconds I was actually insane."

"MacGonigal told me how terribly shaken up you were. He said you would have fallen if he had not held you up."

"Ah, was that it? I suppose I nearly fainted. Some nerve in my brain seemed to snap. Perhaps that is why I am talking at random now."

"Not all Dacre's tact could stop the imminent recital of events since their last meeting. Yet, curiously enough, Power seemed to grow calmer, more even-minded, as he told of his idyl and its dramatic close. By the time they had reached the house again he had recast his views as to Nancy's desertion of him. During some few days there after Fate ceased her outrageous attacks, and he was vouchsafed a measure of peace.

The next blow came from an unexpected hand. Mrs. Moore and her daughters were about to leave Bison for their home in San Francisco. All preparations were made, and their baggage was piled on the verandah ready for transport to the station, when the good lady called Power into the library. He noticed that she was carrying a small package, wrapped in a piece of linen, and tied with white ribbon.

"Derry," she said, "I have one sad duty to perform before I go."

He winced slightly. He was beginning to hate that word "duty." The very sound of it was ominous, full of foreboding.

"It is nothing to cause you any real sorrow," she went on, thinking he had misinterpreted her words. "Just before your dear mother's death she gave me to understand that I was to take charge of a bundle of letters which she kept under her pillow. They were meant for you, I suppose, but unfortunately, I could not make They were meant for you, I suppose; but unfortunately I could not make out her wishes. Anyhow, here they are. You are the one person in the world who can decide whether or not they should be destroyed. I put them in a locked box, and would have given them to you sooner, but——" She hesitated, seemingly at a loss for a word.

"But I was acting like a lunatic, and you were afraid of the consequences," he said, with a pleasant smile.

"Well, I have never seen any man so hard hit," she admitted. "Mr. Dacre's arrival was a perfect God-send for you and all of us, but I thought it best to keep these letters longer than I had planned at first, though I am sure there is nothing in them to cause you any distress. Indeed, I have an idea that they are mostly your own correspondence, sent from New York and elsewhere, because I saw your handwriting on an envelope, and a postmark. You are not vexed with me for retaining them till to-day?"

Power reassured her on that point. He placed the packet, just as it was, in a drawer of a writing-desk, and did not open it until he had returned from the station after escorting the women to their train.

Dacre had strolled to the outbuildings to inspect a reaping-machine of new design which had been procured for harvesting work; so the room was otherwise untenanted when the son began to examine his mother's last bequest. At first it seemed as if Mrs. Moore's surmise was correct. The first few letters he glanced at were those he had despatched from New York and Newport. Then he came upon others posted at Racket, and a twinge of remorse shook him when he recalled the subterfuges and evasions they contained. Still it had been impossible to set forth the truth, and there was a crumb of comfort in the fact that he had written nothing untrue.

He was so disturbed by the painful memories evoked by each date that he was on the verge of tying the bundle together again when his eye was caught by one letter in a strange handwriting. The postmark showed that it had hailed from New York, and the date was a curious one, being exactly six days after he and Nancy went from Newport.

Instantly he was aware of a strong impulse to burn that particular letter forthwith. Perhaps some psychic influence made itself felt in that instant. Perhaps a gentle and loving spirit reached from beyond the veil, and made one last effort to secure the fulfillment of a desire balked by the cruel urgency of death. But the forces of evil prevailed, and Power withdrew the written sheet from its covering.

And this is what he read:

"Madam.—Your son, John Darion Power, has probably represented to you that he is detained in the East by certain horse-dealing transactions. That is a lie. He has gone off with another man's wife. But his punishment will be swift and sure. He cannot escape it. Its nature will depend on the decision arrived at by the woman he has wronged. I am telling you the facts so that you may be in a position to form a just judgment, whether or not you ever see him again. Keep this letter; although it is unsigned. If circumstances require its production, the writer will not shirk responsibility for either its statements or its threats."

Dacre came in nearly an hour later. After witnessing an exhibition of the new reaper, he had gone with Jake to admire some of Power's recent purchases in horse-flesh, and the time passed rapidly. When he entered the room, he found his friend sitting in the shadows.

"Hello!" he cried. "I dodn't know you had returned. I've been vetting those black Russians you bought at Newport. What a pair for a tandem!"

"Did Dr. Stearn ever tell you the exact cause of my mother's death?" was the curiously inappropriate reply, utter in a low tone.

"Yes; acute ulcerative endocardis was the actual cause. But why in the world do you ask such a question now?"

"Because our worthy doctor was mistaken. I alone know why she died. I killed her. You recollect I said as much the day you arrived."

"I wish to goodness you would cease talking, or even thinking, such arrant rubbish!"

"Nothing could be so certain. Willard wrote and told her I had taken Nancy away from Marten. Willard struck the blow; but I forged the weapon. My mother lay dying while I was philandering with another man's wife. Poor soul! She tried to have the letter destrayed—to spare me, no doubt—but the dagger I placed in Willard's hand had pierced so deep that she died with the words of forgiveness on her lips. No, you need not worry unduly, Dacre; though I have no right to harrow your feelings in this way. I shall not anticipate the decree of Providence by self-murder. My worst chastisement now is to live, knowing that I killed my mother."

"What damned rot!" broke out Dacre furiously.

Power rose, went to his friend, and put a hand on his shoulder. He smiled, with an odd semblance of content.

"You're a good chap," he said, "but a poor actor. You know I am right. You wouldn't stand in my shoes for all the gold in the Indies; 'for what doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?' I've lost mine. I must try and find it again. Don't you see? That is my only chance. Good God! If there is another and a better life hereafter, I cannot meet my mother and tell her that I valued my wretched husk of a body so greatly that I made no search for the soul I flung away. I've thought it all out. The road is open and marked with signposts. A man without a soul can surely afford to risk his body. Come! It is growing dark, and this room will soon be peopled with ghosts. Let's walk in the fresh, cool air, and I'll explain myself clearly."

CHAPTER XIII.

THE BEGINNING OF THE PILGRIMAGE.

At first none save Dacre knew what was going on. To MacGonigal and Jake it seemed that Power was not merely seeking distraction by putting his affairs in order, and they regarded such healing activity with joy. People in Bison, too, were delighted by the change in his habits. The man who used to leave to his mother everything connected with the social well-being of the town now gave these matters his close interest, and inquired thoroughly into the philanthropic schemes to which she had devoted so much time and almost unstinted means; incidentally, he contrived to puzzle Dr. Stearn.

One day, when in Denver on business, he called at the doctor's house.

"I want you to clear up a point that is bothering me," he said. "Suppose nothing unusual had occurred to hasten my mother's death, how long would she have lived?"

"Nothing unusual did occur," insisted Stearn.

"Ah! I have expressed myself awkwardly. How long, then, under favourable conditions, should she have lived?"

"Three or four years."

"Five?"

"It is possible."

"Six?"

"I should doubt it."

"Seven?"

"You are marching too rapidly. If Mrs. Power lived seven years with inflamed aortic valves, I should regard the fact as something akin to a miracle."

"But miracles do happen, even in science."

"Um—yes."

"Thank you, Doctor. That is all I wish to know. Anything you want for your poorer patients?"

Stearn laughed. "Great Scott!" he cried, "you ought to come with me on a round of visits. It would be an eye-opener for a wealthy young sprig like you. Why, if I had ten dollars a day to spend on special diet, stimulants, and the like, I could get through every cent of the money."

"Sorry I haven't time to-day for slumming. Good-bye. I may not see you again for quite a while."

"Going abroad?"

"Yes; but my plans are indefinite."

"Well, young man, when you come back to Colorado, bring a wife, or, better still, look around for one before you go."

"I'll think it over. But I must be off. I'm due at the lawyer's."

No More Ugly Hairs To Mar Your Beauty

(Toilet Tips)

Any woman can keep her skin free from bothersome hairy or fuzzy growths by the following simple and speedy method: Mix a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and some water; apply this to the objectionable hairs, and let it remain about two minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and every hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience attends this method, but to be certain of results it is advisable to buy the delatone in a small original package.

Conspicuous Nose Pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be.

Instead these pores collect dirt, clog up, and become enlarged.

Begin tonight to see this treatment

Wring a cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibres of the nose pores so that they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and cause them to contract until they are inconspicuous.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's and try this treatment. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this facial soap.

Woodbury's Facial Soap

For sale by Canadian druggists from coast to coast, including Newfoundland.

CLEAN—No dust or flying ashes. Ash chutes guide all ashes into convenient pan.

SIR JOHN HENNIKER-HEATON KEEPS AT POSTAL REFORMS.

Father of Imperial Penny Post Will Work at His Hobby Until He Makes It Universal, He Says—Australia, His Own Home, Was Last Imperial Dominion to Enter the Project.

The father of Imperial penny postage, having accomplished his aim of bringing about two-cent postage between all parts of the British Empire, and also between Great Britain and the United States, has now turned his attention to France, and before long it is probable that letters will cross the Channel as cheaply as they cross the pond. Sir John's ideal is universal penny postage, and he will work towards that end till he drops.

This man of vision, the eldest son of Lt.-Col. Heaton, R. E., was born in Rochester, England; after a course at Kent House Grammar School and King's College, he turned to Australia, to agriculture, and to journalism. In all enterprises he prospered so greatly that at one time he could boast that he held $15,000,000 in his own name, and several newspapers. His marriage with Miss Bennett perpetuates his connection with the Australian Press, for her family founded and maintains a great Sydney organ.

The great event happened on July 12, 1898, Imperial Penny Postage was carried by seven votes to five at the London Conference on that day. One of the delegates made straight for the House of Commons to tell Heaton the news that he had won. "I hardly slept that night," he remembers, and at five o'clock a copy of SIR JOHN HENNIKER HEATON, M.P.

The Times, confirming the news, was sent hot from Printing House Square to his bedside. At luncheon at the Carlton Club the Duke of Norfolk, who had previously been officially opposed to him, crossed the floor to shake hands with the conqueror. On that day, too, he received a popular, as well as, ducal recognition. When he called a cab to take him home, and was about to give his address to the driver, that worthy interrupted him with—"I know, sir; same name as yourself, Eaton Square!"

By an irony of fate, Australia, Sir John's own continent, held out against the penny rate, but on March 25, 1905, Lord Stanley wrote: "Dear Henniker Heaton,—I cannot allow the bald statement which will appear in Monday's papers, to the effect that a penny postage rate is to come into force with Australia on April 1, to be the first announcement to you of the fulfilment of one of your postal dreams. You have worked for this reform with untiring energy, and I am glad to think that I am the first, though I certainly shall not be the last, to congratulate you." There was no April fooling about that, and Sir John at once sat down before a sheet of the familiar House of Commons quarto notepaper to make a handsome return of compliments. "You have forged the last link in the chain of Empire," he wrote; "you have thrown the mantle of Imperial unity over the shoulders of the sovereign. You have struck the 'Lost Chord' in the Imperial Symphony, and one grand, perfect chorus ascends over land and sea." These sentences illustrate a characteristic manner, but Sir John has used the Penny Post to even better advantage. No documents in the world would make friendlier reading than Sir John's personal correspondence.

In the year following the inclusion of Australia in the Imperial scheme he extended his activities to Universal Penny Postage. At that time it was Mr. Sydney Buxton who received his attentions and was given no loophole of escape. In proposing a penny rate between England and America Sir John was able to tell the Chancellor of the Exchequer that he would place in his hands a bank guarantee, "bearing names honored on every Exchange," for the amount of the proved loss during the first three years' working of the reduced rating. Heaton, moreover, had the American Postmaster-General and public opinion behind him. Mr. Sydney Buxton and the Chancellor of the Exchequer did not, at the time, "see their way to accept his offer." But within two years the thing was done; and now Sir John is all intent on France. What Postmaster-General can evade him? Evasion always fails, though always tried. If it succeeds in the House, it melts away in private. "I have known," says Sir John, "an administrative chief, so 'stiff' in opinion, always in the wrong, at his desk, prove the most reasonable of men over a bottle of Moet and Chandon, or an after-dinner cup of coffee, and a genuine Havana."

CURED AT SEVENTY-FOUR

Little Digesters are a Great Help to Mr. John F. Becker

The weight of years very often brings with it a still heavier burden, that of Indigestion or some Form of Stomach Trouble.

Then "Little Digesters" come to the rescue—if you give them a chance, as did Mr. Becker. Here is this letter telling what they did for him:

New Dundee, Nov. 10, 1909.
To THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.
Dear Sirs,—

I was for a long time troubled with bloating after meals, and my tongue was always coated. Seeing the "Little Digesters" advertised I bought a box, and they took all that trouble away, but I thought one box would not be enough, so I sent to you for more. They are a great help to my body.

Yours truly,
JOHN F. BECKER.

Excuse my writing with pencil, being an old man of 74."

"Little Digesters" aid the feeble stomach to digest the food perfectly. This means that you can enjoy every meal, and get the strength out of what you eat, if you take a "Little Digester" afterwards.

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines — Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cures Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

One Way to Get Tough.

Perhaps the most extraordinary of all methods of warding off cold is that adopted by some of the tribes of the Canadian northwest. It is a matter of discipline. The boys when young are first whipped in order to make their flesh tingle and then sent to bathe in the half frozen rivers. On entering their teens they are made to lie out of doors at night without clothing. The consequence is that those who survive are able to go naked in any weather without the slightest discomfort.

Sorry He Spoke.

Some time ago, on a certain inspection day Sir John Fisher had a very amusing experience. Somehow he got separated from his official friends, and at last lost his way. He wandered about and eventually came upon a workman gently hammering a piece of iron outside one of the workshops. "Are the Lords of the Admiralty about here?" asked Sir John.

"No fear, matey," said the man, who did not know his rather carelessly-dressed inquisitor. "I'm here doin' crow for 'em!"

"Crow! What's that?"

"What, don't yer know? Inside this 'ere shed my mates is a takin' of it easy. When I sees some one that don't matter I knocks soft like now. But when I sees old 'Jacky' Fisher I knocks like blazes, and when old 'Jacky' pokes his nose inside they're workin' like blazes, too, See?"

"Jacky" Fisher did see, and crow-shooting was begun in the dockyards that day.

A bite of this and a taste of that, all day long, dulls the appetite and weakens the digestion.

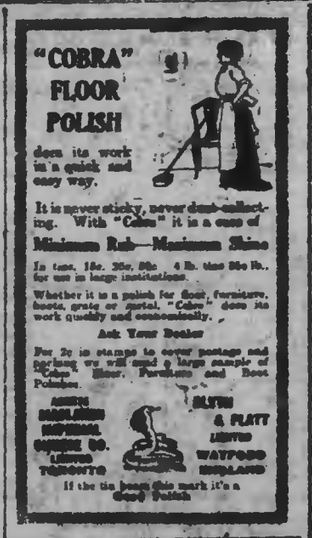
Dr. Johnson's Spelling.

Dr. Johnson's ignorance of derivations led him to absurdities in spelling that were admitted even by Boswell. Dr. Johnson's methods in tracing etymologies were of the simplest. "This is a great work, sir," said Dr. Adams to him. "How are you to get all the etymologies?" "Why, sir," replied Johnson, "here is a shelf with Junius and Skinner and others, and there is a Welsh gentleman who has published a collection of Welsh proverbs who will help me with the Welsh." And so the famous dictionary was written, with little assistance from the learned, as the dictionary maker himself complained. That little came from a man who sent him a list of thirty derivations.



AVENGING DEAD BRITONS.

Wars Over Murders In Foreign Lands.

The international pother over the death of Benton, the English rancheman who bearded Villa in his headquarters and suffered for his temerity, recalls the fact that unprovoked murders of British subjects in foreign lands seldom went long unpunished.

When, for instance, Chinese officials boarded the British vessel Arrow, hauled down the national flag, and killed her captain for daring to protest, Sir J. Bowring, governor of Hong Kong, declared war there and then, practically on his own initiative, and within a few weeks the Chinese fleet had been destroyed and Canton bombarded and burned. This happened in 1856.

In 1862, again, similar swift retribution overtook the murderer of Mr. Richardson, an English merchant living in Japan. Because he refused to prostrate himself in a street in Yokohama when the Prince of Satsuma happened to be passing with his suite he was brutally beaten to death by the prince's armed retainer's. Whereupon English warships bombarded Satsuma's town of Kagoshma, burned his palace and sunk his steamers.

Britons were quick to draw the sword when the British empire was a-building. In some cases, even, outrages falling short of the actual taking of human life, have been followed by hostilities.

There was, for instance, the conflict which was known in semi-derision as the "War of Jenkins' Ear."

Jenkins was a merchant captain whose vessel was boarded by a Spanish guardship, and in the course of a scrimmage that ensued Jenkins' ear was cut off. "You'll hear more of this!" yelled the angry master mariner, and he caused the severed ear to be smoke-dried and cured, much as if it had been a kipper or a haddock.

In this state it was exhibited to the members of the House of Commons who passed it from hand to hand with a great show of gravity, and many expressions of sympathy. Afterward an apology and a money indemnity were demanded, and, neither being forthcoming, war ensued.

Not infrequently, however, "money talks" in these international disputes, as in private ones. There was the case of Major Lothaire and Mr. Stokes, which created such tremendous excitement in the spring of 1896. Stokes was an Englishman engaged in trading for ivory in the Congo Free State, and he was arrested by Major Lothaire, a Belgian officer, on a charge of gun running and inciting the natives to rebel, and, after a summary trial by drumhead court martial, was hanged.

The British Government insisted on Lothaire being brought to trial, and this was done. In fact, he was tried twice, once at Boma, and again at Brussels, and each time he was acquitted. Whereat public indignation in England blazed up afresh, and with tenfold force.

However, a war with Belgium being unthinkable—it would have set all Europe by the ears—England compromised matters on the usual money indemnity basis, the sum of $30,000 being handed over by the Belgian Government to the next of kin of the dead man.

AN ANCIENT SHIP.

Timbers Found in England May Date Back 400 Years.

At the present time there is a controversy raging in England over some old ship timbers. One party contends that the remains are those of a warship of the time of Henry VIII., the Henri Grace a Dieu; while the other believes them to be portions of Sir Francis Drake's famous flagship the Golden Hind.

J. Seymour Lucas, R.A., the British artist, after seeing the relics, has come to the conclusion that they are those of a sixteenth century vessel, possibly the famous Henri Grace a Dieu. This craft was burned at Woolwich in 1553. It was little more than 12 months ago that the borough council of Woolwich, in preparing a site for a new electricity station on the south bank of the Thames first unearthed the timbers of this old ship. The late Sir William White then inspected them and was of the opinion that they came from an eighteenth century merchant vessel. The authorities were not very keen, if this was so, to preserve the remains.

The theory of Mr. Lucas, the artist who painted "The Armada in Sight," has put quite a new aspect on the matter. He considers that the closeness of the ribs and size of the keelson are irrefutable evidence of the date of the hull. In addition, he has seen two wheels, evidently from a gun carriage of the time of Henry VIII.; some stone cannon balls and pieces of Elizabethan pottery, all taken out of the hull.

The theory that the vessel is the Henri Grace a Dieu is put forward by the Woolwich antiquarian society. There was a dock built at Woolwich in 1521, to which the hull of the Henri Grace a Dieu was taken, after the fire which destroyed her upper works and rigging. The question then arises, How came the hull to be buried? It is believed that after the hull had been placed in the dock something in the nature of a landslip occurred which removed both ship and dock bodily.

This, at any rate, is held to explain the circumstance that part of the timbers are still sunk beneath an old house. Very little is known concerning the methods of ship construction in vogue in the reign of Henry VIII., and it is not surprising that expert opinion is divided as to whether the Woolwich wreck may be taken to be that of the Henri Grace a Dieu.

It was the Henri Grace a Dieu which Henry VIII. built in 1515, that was burned at Woolwich in 1553. In this vessel Henry VIII. embarked at Dover on May 31, 1520, to meet Francis I. at the Field of the Cloth of Gold, the incident being the subject of a picture by Holbein in Hampton Court Palace.

For the present there is a good deal of doubt about the identity of the relics of the Woolwich, and it would, therefore, be premature to accept the theories put forward, but undoubtedly the possibility of a ship of Tudor times being recovered is causing widespread interest, and already there have been several offers of financial help to reconstruct the hull of the vessel.

To Help Nature Shed A Bad Complexion

Beauty devotees are enthusiastic over the beautifying qualities of mercolized wax. Nothing discovered within recent years accomplishes so much, so quickly, without harm, at such small expense. The principal reason for its wonderful merit is that it works in harmony with physiological laws. Instead of hiding complexion defects, it removes them. It actually takes off the aged, faded, sallow freckled or blotchy cuticle, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience. It is Nature's way of renewing complexions. When the natural process is retarded because of deficient circulation or nerve tone, mercolized wax comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. The new complexion which appears is a natural one, youthful, healthy, exquisitely beautiful. If you've never tried mercolized wax, get an ounce of it at the druggists, use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning.

Another natural beautifying treatment—for wrinkled skin—is to bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This is remarkably and instantaneously effective.

Miners Are Critical.

At a meeting of the Colonial and Continental Church Society in London the other day, Bishop Stringer, of the Yukon, while inviting ministerial candidates to come to the Dominion, said that Canada preferred to give them their training in its own colleges. He objected to the idea that any type of a minister would do in the camps, and declared that the miners were most critical.

Joynson Hicks, M.P., who occupied the chair, suggested that it would be better to missionize their own race before endeavoring to convert the savage nations.

Insects Ravage Forests

As the result of recent scientific investigations of insect ravages in British Columbia, it was found that in some places forest insects have destroyed 25 per cent. of the timber crop.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTIN

VERA R.: Your skin will grow soft, clear and smooth after a few applications of a plain almosoin jelly-cream, made at home as follows: Put 4 tablespoonfuls glycerine into ½ pint water and in this dissolve 1 ounce almosoin (which you can buy at your druggist's). Apply a thick coat of this to the skin before retiring, then wash off in the morning and use more of the jelly-cream before massaging. This gradually dispels the wrinkles and lines and banishes pimples, blackheads and the "muddy," oily look. The almosoin jelly-cream is greaseless and will not grow hair.

MRS. A. T.: You may not require glasses. Get from your druggist 1 ounce crystos and dissolve in one pint water. Then put a few drops in the offending eye several times a day until inflammation and soreness have vanished. This crystos eye-tonic is especially good for granulated eyelids, and using it strengthens the eyes and gives to them a youthful sparkle.

ADELINE: The reason for that dryness of hair after your shampoo is because that kind of soap irritates the scalp's tissues and makes them oversensitive. Canthrox will correct this, for it is a tonic as well as cleanser and is so stimulating to the blood-vessels and scalp tissues that the danger is entirely eliminated. To prepare your shampoo, dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water, then pour it slowly on the head as your rub briskly. This dissolves every trace of dust, dandruff and excess oil, and after rinsing, the hair will dry quickly and evenly.

LUCY G.: Loss of weight is a serious matter and calls for prompt action. Get from your druggist 1 ounce hardene and put it, together with ½ cupful sugar, into ½ pint alcohol, then add hot water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. This simple home remedy increases your appetite and gently cleanses the system of impurities, restores a healthy condition to the vital organs. When this is done your weight will be normal and the glow of health will be upon your cheeks.

MRS. A. R. J.: I make a good lotion that is very helpful to my skin by dissolving 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel or hot water, to which is added 1 teaspoonful glycerine, which will soon correct that oily, sallow, "sermony" appearance of your complexion. This simple lotion is soothing and healing and imparts a velvety smoothness and natural loveliness to the complexion. Get powder with powder and rouge. You will like the spurmax lotion because it is easily applied and cannot be detected when on.

LUCILLE: I always use a plain quinsoin hair tonic, made at home by pouring 1 ounce quinsoin into ½ pint alcohol, then adding ½ pint water. Rub a little well into the scalp twice a week and you will soon rid the scalp of dandruff and restore the hair roots to health. The regular use of the quinsoin tonic will restore the former gloss and even color to the hair and make it soft, long and fluffy.

MRS. M. N. T.: Your excess weight can be easily and quickly reduced by taking this parsotin treatment, made at home, as follows: Put 4 ounces parsotin (which you can get at your drug store) in 2½ pints hot water and strain when cool. Take a tablespoonful before meals until weight is where you want it. No harm results from the use of the parsotin treatment, and the flesh is left solid and the skin soft and smooth.

A Charter from the Public

IF publishers of daily newspapers were to cease issuing their papers during the summer months, saying—"It's too hot in July and August to publish papers, and, anyway, people don't read papers in summer,"—what a cry of protest would go up all over the land!

The people would say to the publishers:—

"We must have the news and you "must give it to us. You are our "servants in this matter—our news "gatherers and scatterers. We are "ready to pay you for this service. "You have no right or liberty to take "it upon yourselves to cease publishing your papers at your pleasure "or convenience."

Think of it! The Daily Newspaper exists by the mandate of the people. It alone among all publications may not continue or cease at its pleasure, for it holds its charter from the people whose servant it is.

Then think of this:—

Have those other servants of the people—the merchants who supply them with their daily necessities—any right to be silent with respect to the news they have for those who depend on them? Has not the public a right to demand that the news of the stores shall be published along with other news of value and interest? We put it up to the people of this community and to the merchants of this city that the store news of this community is necessary news and should appear regularly in the public press at all seasons of the year. Think of this, you merchants of this city.

BLACK HAND SECRETS REVEALED BY CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE

The Long Arm of the Black Hand

By WILLIAM J. FLYNN,
Chief of the United States Secret Service

ACROSS deserts, rivers, seas the long arm of the Black Hand reaches. In every State of the Union its crushing grip may be felt, and even in Europe it may strike and do its enemies to death.

In the fight against the Lupo-Morello gang the Secret Service was concerned for the most part with counterfeiting operations in and around New York, but much was learned about the activities of the band in other fields, and many crimes were at least in part explained which might otherwise have gone down as baffling mysteries. There are criminal organizations in Italy perhaps to a certain extent allied with the Black Hand of America, but the society which has its headquarters in New York fights its own battles.

Comito, the man who ran the counterfeiting presses for the Black Handers in the stone house at Highland, in his confession, which I have quoted freely, throws light on the killing of Joseph Petrosino in Palermo while on business there for Theodo Bingham, then Police Commissioner of New York city. It is an example of how the Black Hand hounds its enemies to death. Petrosino left New York in great secrecy and no mention was made of it in the newspapers. His purpose was to get evidence against members of the Black Hand so that they could be deported, and he was chosen for the work because he was himself an Italian, serving as the head of the Italian Detective Bureau of the New York police. He it was who helped me in establishing the identity of Marueno Benedetto, the victim of the barrel murder, and there was among the police no man more hated and more feared by the Lupo-Morello band than this Petrosino.

While Petrosino was in Palermo carrying out his mission he was shot to death walking in the street, and his murderers escaped and were never apprehended. The crime remained a great mystery, and although the police of New York called upon the Italian government to assist in clearing it up nothing was accomplished. While I may not say with certainty who killed Petrosino, I believe that certain things which Comito, the man who operated the counterfeit press in the stone house at Highland, told me throw light on the subject.

As I told in a previous article, Comito was called to New York by Cecala, Morello's lieutenant, to consult on the printing of the two dollar American bills, which were continually a little off color. After complying with certain formal conditions Comito was taken to a room over a bank up town, where he was questioned by Morello about the ink used in printing the bills. In the room with Morello, Cecala and Comito was a Calabrian, a tall man, very dignified in appearance and giving the impression of great dignity and strength. Throughout the interview this man, whom Comito knew only as Michele, the Calabrian said not a word. He seemed to be in a revery. As Cecala and Comito were leaving the room, according to Comito's confession:—

"Cecala turned to Morello and said in a low voice:—'Tell me something, Piddu, have you arranged for the fare for the Calabrian?'

'Piddu is a nickname for Giuseppe.

"'I have not arranged for it yet,' said Morello.

"Cecala asked, 'Why not?'

"'Because we are not certain that he is going,' said Morello.

"'How not certain?' Cacela asked.

"'It is not sure that this low detective will go. But as soon as Coco returns from Brooklyn I will have him get information from that friend.'

"Coco was a stepbrother of Morello.

"'The newspapers are not talking about it,' said Cecala.

"'Certainly not,' said Morello, 'for it is a secret thing and not even known to many of the police as yet.'

"'Pezzo di Sbirro!' said Cecala, which is to say, 'damn detective.' 'He guards his own hide without calculating how many he has ruined.'

"'Don't talk too much. Go away,' said Morello, and we left the house. I did not know at that time of whom they were talking."

Now this was just before Petrosino left for Sicily, and although in itself it might not seem to have any great bearing on his death, Comito was to hear more of it later.

In one of the previous articles Comito told how Ignazio Lupo came to the little stone house at night and frightened the counterfeiters before they learned who the visitor was. After Lupo had unpacked the magazine rifles and cartridges which he had brought to the house the Black Handers sat down to a big meal which Caterina and Comito were forced to serve. To quote from Comito again:—

"They were all eating and drinking merrily when Uncle Vincent (one of the counterfeiters) turned to Lupo and asked: 'What news are you bringing, Ignazio?'

"'You know all the news that I bear,' said Lupo, 'except that it is said Petrosino has gone to Italy.'

"'If he went to Italy he will be killed,' said Uncle Vincent.

"'If it could only be done successfully,' said Cino.

"Lupo smiled, a crooked, twisted, wicked smile. 'He has ruined many,' he said. 'It is enough to say that he and himself locked up in the Tombs prison to interrogate the detained and moved criminals.'

"'Many mothers' children he has ruined,' said Uncle Salvatore Palermo, 'and how many are crying!'

"'Well, but I can tell you that I HAVE GIVEN MICHELE THE CALABRIAN HIS FARE.'—Lupo broke off and looked around the table, then finished with a sly look, 'to go and see his family, which was stricken by the earthquake.'

"'You have done well,' said Cecala, and, winking one eye, he lifted his glass. 'Let us drink to our health and to h—— with that carogna.'"

Carogna in Italian means the putrid dead body of an animal and here evidently refers to Petrosino.

Some days later Lupo returned to the stone house to examine some of the notes. Incidentally he was very much vexed with Comito for the work he had done on them. He praised Calichio for the manner in which he had mixed the inks, but to return to Comito's confession:—

"Lupo said that for my wretched workmanship I should be given a dirty leather medal.

"'But what!' he cried, turning on me, 'This homely Calabrian doesn't even deserve to be looked at. The work he did should have been burned on his head.

"After examining the work, Lupo said to Uncle Vincent:—

"'Uncle Vic, don't you know the news?'

"'What?' asked Uncle Vincent.

"'Petrosino was killed in Italy,' said Lupo.

"'Honestly?' With great joy and a little unbelief.

"'Honestly,' replied Lupo, smiling with satisfaction. 'The papers are full of it.'

"'I said it, I said it,' cried Uncle Vincent excitedly. 'I told you that if Petrosino went to Italy he would be killed.'

"'Who was the author? He deserves a medal!' said Cecala.

"'And where have they killed him?' asked Uncle Vincent, showing great interest.

"'In Palermo,' said Lupo.

"'Then I will bet that it was well done,' said Uncle Vincent.

"'Certainly,' Lupo said. 'The way it was done it could never fail.'

"'Ah,' said Cecala, 'this [illegible] don't becoming him. How many sons of mothers he has condemned for nothing.'

"Hearing all this and remembering the conversation at Morello's house and the time that Lupo was at the stone house before, I asked:—

"'Who is this Petrosino?'

"'He was the head of the Italian police in New York,' replied Cecala. 'A homely man! Worse than the bubonic plague!'

"'I never knew him,' I said.

"'You never will,' Cecala said grimly.

"Then, after all it was successful?' repeated Uncle Vincent.

"'Certainly,' said Lupo. 'It could not be successful in New York because he guarded his hide so carefully. When he walked he brought a revolver in his coat pocket and was accompanied by two policemen a short distance behind him.'

"'It is a good example for the policemen,' said Uncle Vincent. 'No one will dare to go to Palermo, for going there they will find death.'

"Cino, another of the counterfeiters, came down from the pressroom in time to hear the last part of the conversation.

"'As soon as we can,' he said, 'we must have a really big celebration. Now we will have to be content with a glass of wine.'

"After this I went again to work at the press and because of the noise I could hear no more about Petrosino."

No one has ever been arrested and convicted for the murder of Joseph Petrosino, but what Comito heard during his connection with the Black Hand speaks for itself. It shows the scope of the society, how its mailed fist may strike even across the seas, though the headquarters of the band is in prosaic, matter of fact New York.

There are other evidences of the world-wide power of the Black Hand. Many of its members have committed crimes in Italy and would be extradited if the Italian government would institute proceedings. The fact that they do not is probably due partly to a feeling that Italy is well rid of them and partly to political influence. The political parties of the United States are by no means free from the influence of the Black Hand. Neither party as a whole is culpable in this respect nor any party in particular, but minor organizations of all parties existing in New York realize the power of the Black Hand and are not always above using it.

In fighting the Black Hand the police in the past were to a certain extent hampered by this political influence.

After the arrest of the counterfeiters which I described in a previous article a fund of $50,000 was quickly raised to be used in their defence. Much of the money was forced from Italian and Sicilian residents of all the cities of the world by the compari or godfathers of the accused. These compari are bound to do all in their power to protect their godchildren, even though they know them to be criminals and are honest themselves. The money raised by the compari to defend the [illegible] counterfeiters came from Tunis, Algiers, New Orleans, St. Louis, Liverpool, New York and every other big city of the world where there are considerable numbers of Italian residents.

In all [illegible] for wonder that the friends and agents of the Black Hand in foreign cities are able to raise money for the [illegible] of the society who fall under arrest. Most of the Black Handers have left villainous reputations behind them and their compatriots are afraid to refuse to contribute to the fund. This reputation gained in Italy often stands the Black Hander in good stead.

One of the men raising the defence fund for the trial of Lupo, Morello and the other men arrested in New York visited an Italian in New Orleans.

"Some of my compatriots are in trouble," he said. "The law persecutes them and they are in need of money."

The man in question knew that the law did not persecute any person unjustly. He realized that the men in trouble must be malefactors and he did not wish to give up any of his hard earned money to help them out of prison so that they could prey on peaceable citizens.

"Who are the men?" he asked.

The Black Hand agent enumerated them. At the mention of Giuseppe Morello his listener started. It would perhaps be wise to contribute to the fund. He knew the record of Giuseppe Morello in Italy.

Giuseppe Morello! That was the man who had slain Giovanni Vella, chief of the Sylvan Guards, [illegible] half a block from his residence in Corleone. The entire story came to the [illegible] the man who had been asked to contribute to the defence fund for Lupo and Morello.

Again he heard the crash of exploding [illegible] the night. As though he were [illegible] the scene he remembered how [illegible] had run from his house into the street, frightened more by the horrid scream of anguish he had heard than by the report of the revolver. He saw the sickly, pallid face of Giovanni Vella in the light from the street lamps shone on the little group of men who were trying to succor him. He heard the choking voice of Vella, trying to tell them who had fired the shot which sent a bullet tearing through his back into his lung. And he remembered how Vella had died almost as soon as they had carried him into his house, before even the priest had come to insure his soul everlasting life.

The man in New Orleans remembered all this, and he trembled for his wife and for his children, should he refuse to contribute to the fund.

He gave freely.

But what had Morello to do with all this? I will tell you the story, and it is stranger than fiction.

One night in 1889 Anna Di Puma, a neighbor of Giovanni Vella, walked through a dark alley to make a short cut to her home. In a shadow, she noticed two men, lurking. She was a little frightened at first, but noticing that one of the men was Morello, whom she knew very well, she continued on her way and would have thought nothing more of the incident.

She had not reached her house, however, when she heard a shot behind her. Running back into the alley she was the first to come upon the body of Giovanni Vella lying in the very shadow where the two men had been standing. Next day Mrs. Di Puma told her neighbors of the two men she had seen in the alley, and declared that she would go to a magistrate and relate all she knew. Two days later Mrs. Di Puma sat in the doorway of a neighbor's store. A carbine crashed twice. Mrs. Di Puma toppled forward on the ground. Two bullets had entered her body and she was dead.

Morello was arrested and charged with the murder of Anna Di Puma, for it was known that the woman intended to become a witness against him when the Vella case got into the courts. Now Morello was at that time a member of the Mafia, an organization which Vella had sworn to break up. In the Mafia were two lawyers, who swore that Morello was in Palermo at the very hour when Anna Di Puma was shot in Corleone. Morello was discharged for lack of evidence.

Francesco Ortonello had been arrested meanwhile for the murder of Vella.

This is the way it came about. Shortly before his death Vella had accumulated so much evidence against the Mafia that he would soon be in a position to arrest and convict a number of the members. At the time of his death the election for the chief of the Sylvan Guards was at hand, and the Mafia, knowing that to defeat Vella they must put up a man of unquestioned integrity, brought about the nomination of Francesco Ortonello, who was not aware that the Mafia agents were behind the campaign for his nomination.

Shortly before the election was to take place Vella went to the home of Ortonello and denounced him.

"So, Francesco Ortonello," fumed Vella in a rage, "you have taken off your mask. Never before did I think that you were one of the Mafia's puppets. I thought that you were an honest man, but, alas, I fooled myself."

Angered by this denunciation in his own home, Ortonello took up a carbine and drove Vella from the house. Nevertheless he considered well what Vella had said and investigated the situation. When he was satisfied that the Mafia had forced his nomination in order to defeat their sworn foe, Vella, he resigned.

The next night Vella was shot to death.

The commander of the carabineers was a great friend of Vella and dined with him the evening before he was shot. He was at the wounded man's side before he died and asked him if he knew who was responsible for his death. Vella reeled off a string of names of men he had been fighting in the Mafia.

"So many could not be held responsible," said the chief of the carabineers. "All would escape and none be punished. Have you had a quarrel with any person recently?"

"Yes," muttered Vella. "I quarrelled yesterday—with—Ortonello. He wanted to—take—my job away—from—me—and—butter—from—my wife and children. He threatened me—with a gun."

Ortonello was immediately arrested by two of the carabineers and taken before Vella.

"Is this the man with whom you quarrelled?" asked the chief.

Too weak to speak, Vella nodded his head in the affirmative and fell back dead.

When Ortonello was brought to trial for the killing of Vella many honest witnesses attempted to aid him. Pietro Milone, a police officer, tried to bring into court evidence clearing Ortonello. One night as he was walking home he was murdered and the assassins were not apprehended.

Biaggia Milone lived directly across the street from the spot where Vella was killed. Later she admitted that she saw Morello shoot the captain of the Sylvan Guards. She then disappeared and later came to New York, where her cousin Domenico Milone conducted a grocery store, which served as the headquarters for the distribution of the counterfeit money.

Ortonello's son was tireless in his efforts to have his father freed, and was several times warned by the Mafia to cease his efforts. He was not to be intimidated, and one night three rifle shots were fired at him, all of which, however, went wide of the mark.

Guarina Zangara lived in a room next to the one occupied by Morello and his mother at the time of the murder of Vella.

He heard Morello enter the room shortly after the shooting and heard his mother say to him, sobbing:—

"Oh, Peppe, what have you done? Now they will come and arrest you."

"Have no fear, mother," replied Morello. "They have gone on the wrong scent."

Zangara, fearing a fate such as Anna Di Puma met, did not tell the authorities until after Ortonello was convicted of the crime. When he did offer his information he was told that it was too late; that he should have come forward during the trial.

It was many days before Zangara's dead body was found under a bridge which crossed a small stream near Corleone.

Two lawyers who conducted Ortonello's defence were in reality members of the Mafia. They continually pointed out to the accused that his case was so clear that he could not be convicted. There was no necessity, they said, to prepare an elaborate defence. No tribunal could find him guilty. All the time they were playing into the hands of the Mafia, and Ortonello was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Thus with the dying motion of his head did Giovanni Vella seal the fate of a victim of the very men fighting against whom he gave up his life. Ortonello served more than twenty years in prison before he was released on evidence presented to the Italian government. He and his family also [illegible] prosperously in New York at the present time.

All this was known by the man in New Orleans when the Black Hand agent asked him for a contribution to the defence fund for the counterfeiters. He knew what he might expect from these men if he refused, and he gave generously.

Uncle Vincent, one of the counterfeiters who were with Comito in the stone house at Highland, enjoyed a reputation for crime in Italy. Comito tells of it in his confession.

"One day while we were working on the presses," he told me, "Uncle Vincent explained that he had been a raiser of cattle in his own town. Passing a field he saw two oxen which he wished to purchase.

"The price the owner asked was not satisfactory to him and a discussion followed, in the course of which the owner of the oxen said something [illegible] which Uncle Vincent took offence.

"Without saying a word Uncle Vincent raised the rifle which he was carrying and shot the owner of the animals dead. Another man who had been working in the field ran for his life, but Uncle Vincent dropped him with a bullet before he had gone fifty paces."

Having committed a double murder Uncle Vincent knew that he must leave the country. He had no money, so he searched the pockets of the first man and found 250 lire. The murderer waited only long enough to write a letter to his family, then he escaped to Tunis. From there he made his way to Tokio, where he lived by robbing. When he had accumulated enough money he went to Liverpool and lived by theft until he left there for New Orleans."

It is no wonder that Italians throughout the world fear these men who glory in a reputation for crime as who hold human life so cheaply when it is not their own. That is why we should inspire fear in the hearts of the men of the Black Hand and scatter the society to the winds. The decent living Italians must be shown that there is a power greater than that of the Mafia, greater than that of the Black Hand, a power that can and will protect them and put their persecutors behind prison bars.

"You have done well," said Cecala. "Let us drink to our health and to h—— with that carogna.

ON THE SPOT WITH BRIGADIER GENERAL FUNSTON.

BRIGADIER GENERAL FUNSTON, now one of the leading figures in the Mexico difficulties, is one of those men around whom legends gather.

In some of his pictures, especially those showing the heavier growth of beard, there is a strong resemblance between Funston and General Grant. That fact alone is sufficient to lift him to the plane of a popular hero.

Nicknames are a sure sign of a man's popularity. Funston rejoices in two. To many he is "Freddy-on-the-Spot." Among the soldiers he is known as "The Fighting Bantam of the Army."

"Freddy-on-the-Spot" was given Funston because of his happy faculty of being in the center where history is being made. Roosevelt has the same faculty. By the same token, if the Mexican upheaval lands anybody in the President's chair "Freddy-on-the-Spot" is likely to be that man.

Funston's records show that he was in Dawson City before gold was discovered in Alaska. On the eve of the Spanish War he was discovered in Cuba. His regiment fretted because they were not sent to Santiago. A greater destiny awaited them. They went to the Philippines and tasted war in a bigger and more bitter campaign.

Again, when San Francisco was crushed by an earthquake, it was Funston's good fortune to appear in the ruins and help straighten things up.

These are the highlights in his career. He has always been where things are stirring in the outposts of civilization. He has pursued adventure up and down the world from the tropics to the Arctic and back again.

He does not call it "The Quest of the Great Adventure." That is story book talk. Funston calls it "looking for trouble."

Look at the list of his activities. He has been a school teacher, a reporter on newspapers, an editor, a conductor on a passenger train, a mining prospector, a botanical collector, a coffee planter on a Mexican plantation, a writer for the magazines, a filibuster, a revolutionist, a lecturer and a soldier in the artillery, cavalry and infantry of the Cuban and United States armies.

It is a list which makes even the achievements of the hero of a best seller seemed pallid and anaemic.

They tell stories of his accomplishments in each of these fields. When he was a conductor on a train in the West a too exuberant cowboy relieved his feelings by trying to shoot off the roof of the car.

Conductor Funston kicked the gun out of the cowboy's hand and ran him to the back of the car. Major Cowboy tossed a piece of ballast through a car window. Funston charged him, and he fled.

In Alaska he won the reputation of making the longest journey any white man ever made on snowshoes. He also paddled down 1,200 miles on the Yukon, and didn't meet one human being on the trip.

His coffee planting was not a success. He then trained Cuban patriots in New York city, and presently joined the Cuban army, where his thrilling experiences with Gomez and Maceo are still talked of.

In the Philippines his great achievement was the capture of Aguinaldo, which broke the back of the revolt.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN CUPID SLEPT

Helen paused once more to read the letter before sealing it. It was such an important letter that she felt nothing should be omitted. Of course, when she and Phil had quarrelled the night before she had insisted she was right, and that it was his fault, but in the privacy of her own heart she knew he was right, and that the trouble lay entirely with her naughty little temper; hence the little note of apology with a pleading little postscript to the effect that she would be at home the next evening. She knew how surprised Phil would be to receive the letter at his office, and how he would commend her for being brave enough to admit she was in the wrong.

Satisfied at last that there was nothing left unsaid in her note and not caring to trust the precious note to small brother Bob, Helen went to the letterbox with it herself. In her haste to deposit it in the proper place she did not notice that it slipped back off the slide and not into it. Little Cupid, instead of properly watching this little affair, and being widely awake as he is always supposed to be, was quietly napping, and so the tiny blue envelope lay on the dusty street while Helen joyfully walked away.

It so happened that a wee gust of wind, having nothing to do on that particular day, caught the blue envelope up and whisked it away. After playing a short while with it, he passed it on to another breeze, who continued the fun and soon the little blue envelope found itself firmly lodged in the bare branches of a hedge fence surrounding a cottage a few rods away.

All the next day Helen sang about her work and planned just what she would say to Phil when he came. "I shall wear my white dress. Phil always liked white," she smiled as she took the soft, dainty dress from the hanger. She was thinking of what he said the last time she wore that dress. "Girlie, you're just like a bride to-night." Sometimes he called her "a little snowdrop," but to-night her cheeks were like pink roses and the blue eyes twinkled with a radiant light.

She waited and waited and still no Phil. The light faded out of the clear blue eyes, and a little girl with an aching heart finally turned out the lights and cried out her troubles to an ever comforting pillow.

Phil waited and waited also from day to day. Dearly as he loved Helen he felt it was not wise to give in to her when she was absolutely wrong, and though he was sorely tempted, he resisted the temptation to call her up. Eagerly he watched the mail man and sorted his mail with a feverish rapidity, but no dainty, girlish handwriting appeared to brighten his heart.

When it was time for the hedges to receive their spring pruning, the occupant of the cottage was surprised to find a little envelope in his hedge, and after examining it was surprised to find it was stamped but not postmarked. "Guess I'll have to be Cupid's assistant," he murmured as he dropped the letter in the nearby letterbox.

"Here, Phil," called out the senior partner; "there's a little billet-doux for you; looks rather seedy, but guess it's all right." Phil snatched the soiled, faded envelope from the old man's hand and was astonished to recognise a familiar handwriting. It was only a matter of a few seconds until he had read the contents, and, after deciphering the date, discovered it had been mailed three weeks previous, one day after he and Helen had quarrelled.

It did not take Phil long to arrive at Helen's house and he spied her planting seeds in her own special garden. He crept up softly behind her and she was so busy she did not hear him until his arms closed around her. "Helen, dear little girl," he was whispering, "what a beastly shame we have been separated these four weeks. See, dear, here is your little note and I only received it an hour ago." Helen looked up, a smile radiating her flushed face. "I thought you would never forgive me, it seems so very long ago," she said softly.

It is not really necessary that we should know all the explanation which followed and how severely Cupid was arraigned for so grossly neglecting his sacred duty, that of guarding love letters. But it only remains for us to know that in the most conspicuous place in their bungalow hangs a faded blue envelope in a little gold frame.

Thought Nothing But Death Would End Her Misery

WAS TROUBLED WITH Heart Disease.

Mrs. J. D. Talbut, Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from heart disease, and leaking valves. I have had resource to every kind of treatment I could think might help me, including the skill of several doctors. I suffered so for years that at times I have felt that nothing but death could end my misery. I was advised by a friend, who had suffered untold pain and misery, just as I had, and had been cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, to give them a trial, so I decided to do so. I am delighted with the result, as I am now completely cured, and can eat and sleep as I have not done for years.

You are at liberty to use my name at any time as I am convinced they are the best pills on the market for any form of heart disease."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

POSTAL BILL DEFEATED.

Senate Amends Government Measure Which May Be Dropped Now.

OTTAWA, June 11.—By a vote of 28 to 13 the Senate yesterday rejected another Government bill. This was a measure designed to place under the control of the Postmaster-General and the Treasury Board the control of postal rates on newspapers and periodicals.

Senator Kerr, Toronto, moved an amendment to the bill as introduced by Hon. Mr. Lougheed, declaring that changes made in the rates on newspapers and periodicals should not go into effect until ratified by Parliament.

Mr. Lougheed announced that the Government would abandon the whole bill, which also affects salary increase to postoffice employes, should the amendment carry.

After the division had been taken and the bill amended it was sent back to the Commons.

Oh, Ethel!

"Home Sweet Home" Is 91 Years Old

"Home Sweet Home" was being sung for the first time just 91 years ago. The song came from the operatic stage. Its author, John Howard Payne, posed as a dramatic critic in New York when he was only 14 years of age; before maturity he was successful on the stage; then came 20 years of varying success abroad as actor, manager and playwright. Pressed for funds, he sold the opera "Clari" for $250. In this was "Home Sweet Home." Payne had written it, recalling his early cottage home at East Hampton, N.Y. The opera had a phenomenal run and the song brought a fortune to its publishers. Payne never received another cent for it. He later became United States consul at Tunis, where he died.

Tuesday, June 9th was the 123rd anniversary of John Howard Payne's birth. His song is known throughout the English-speaking world and it rises above all else, including the 60 plays and operas which Payne wrote, "a monument to his time," the ballad is as popular as ever for knitting home ties. It is said to have had a more universal circulation than any song ever written. Payne's body, originally buried at Tunis, was disinterred after many years and brought to the United States for reinterment in Oak Hill cemetery at Washington in 1883. The remains were placed beneath in appropriate monument which was unveiled while a great chorus sang, "Home Sweet Home."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Shad flies are so numerous at Prescott that when the wind is from the east it is almost impossible to see across the streets.

Twenty Hindus, passengers on the Komagata Maru, have been permitted to land at Vancouver, having proved they were former residents of Canada.

Fifty mounted policemen are scouring Moosejaw, Sask., and district in search of three desperadoes implicated in the murder of J. B. Chivas, J.P., of Amisk, Alberta.

Three men and four women lost their lives and four more were badly injured in a fire in an East Side tenement at 90 Essex street, New York, yesterday morning.

The International Congress of Chambers of Commerce at Paris yesterday adopted a motion advocating the advancement of the time for beginning and closing work by one hour during the summer.

At the request of strike leaders in Pittsburg, all saloons have been ordered closed for the week, and wholesale dealers are forbidden to ship liquor into the district around the Westinghouse works.

Joseph Beauchamp, one of the two men held for trial on a charge of murdering Constable Bourdon at Montreal, tried to destroy his own life at the Bordeaux jail by setting fire to his cell furniture.

The Norwegian Parliament yesterday adopted a resolution prohibiting the consumption of intoxicating liquors by officers of the Norwegian army and navy during their terms of service. The rule already holds with enlisted men.

When in doubt it's a good plan to tell the truth.

If money didn't talk some people would never be heard of.

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to the remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

LUMBER IS BURNED

Big Midland Yards Are Ravaged With Loss of $250,000

TOWN HAS A CLOSE CALL

MIDLAND, Ont., June 11.—About 5,000,000 feet of lumber was destroyed, entailing a loss of about $250,000, in a fire which broke out in the lumber yard of Manley Chew, ex-M.P., from a spark from the sawdust burner and consumed all but 300,000 feet about two o'clock yesterday afternoon. The mill and accessories were saved.

The town was saved from the fact that the wind was blowing strongly away from it. When the alarm was sounded the Midland brigade turned out and it was assisted by the fire-fighting apparatus of the Georgian Bay Ship Mills, which adjoin the lumber plant. These mills were able to turn the full force of several powerful pumps on the flames, and this aided materially in checking them, especially as they were working against the wind.

The timber trams, which run through the yards, were also consumed.

The burning lumber presented a wild spectacle as the flames shot up many feet in the air, and a big crowd was attracted to the vicinity of the conflagration. It just took two hours for the flames to eat their way against the wind and consume the big piles of lumber. To prevent the flames from spreading to the mill buildings the big force pumps of the ship mill were used to soak with water all inflammable material within reach of the sparks.

Much of the lumber destroyed had been ordered for delivery in Toronto, and it was said last night as a result of the fire several city firms are threatened with a lumber shortage for a few days.

The fire will throw one hundred men out of employment. This is the second fire in these yards in a year.

Big Fire at Hearst.

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 11.—Hearst, on the National Transcontinental Railway, west of Cochrane, had a serious fire Tuesday night. Ten stores and nine residences were destroyed. A light rain which started during the progress of the fire helped materially to check the spread of the flames.

Hearst is one of the new towns springing up along the G. T. P., and is the most northern outpost of organized communication in Ontario.

INSIST ON CARRYING RIFLES.

Influential Deputation Puts Religious Matter Up to Minister of Militia.

OTTAWA, June 11.—Asking that the regulation of the Militia Department in respect to prohibiting the participation of regiments carrying rifles in church parades be changed in order that the 65th Regiment of Montreal may take part in and present arms to the Host in the Corpus Christi procession next Sunday, a Montreal delegation yesterday afternoon waited upon the Prime Minister.

It consisted of Sir Alexander Lacoste, ex-Mayor Guerin, Dr. Kennedy, Clarence Smith, Edward Kennedy, F. J. Bisaillon, K.C., F. De Salesbastien, D. O. Lesperance, M.P., Albert Sevigny, M.P., and Paul Lamarche, M.P., and was accompanied by Hon. Messrs. Doherty, Pelletier, Nantel and Coderre.

They claimed that since 1837 the privilege of attending the Corpus Christi procession has been accorded French regiments by a special rule from England.

The Prime Minister said the matter would be taken up at once with the Minister of Militia.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont. writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

Fifteen of Crew Arrive.

MONTREAL, June 11. — Fifteen members of the crew of the sunken C. P. R. liner Empress of Ireland, arrived at the marine department of the C.P.R. here yesterday. They came to arrange for payment of their allotments, also for advances of salary while they are being held as witnesses at the investigation. The crew are being lodged at the Place Viger Hotel, owned by the C. P. R.

Smallpox Case In Hospital.

BROCKVILLE, June 11. — A patient in the Eastern Hospital, committed two weeks ago from the County of Russell, is under quarantine at the institution, ill with smallpox, which he is thought to have contracted before coming to Brockville. All necessary precautions have been taken.

DEAD NUMBER NINETEEN.

But One Report Puts Fishermen's Loss at 125 Lives.

CHATHAM, N.B., June 11. — Conflicting reports made it impossible yesterday to determine definitely how many fishing smacks and lives have been lost in the storm which swept the Gulf of St. Lawrence, Chaleur Bay and the Straits of Northumberland on Friday.

One report received yesterday placed the number of dead at 125.

Advices from Caraquet said that 19 lives were said to have been lost. One vessel was missing and nothing was known of the fate of the crews of two vessels reported ashore on Pokesudie Island.

The vessels that suffered from the gale were small schooners. Nearly every craft was manned only by members of a single family, with the father in command and three or four sons or other relatives composing the crew.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes:—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Tried To Rob Minister.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 11.—An attempt was made on Sunday night last, to "hold up" Rev. A. M. Hibly, pastor of Emmanuel B. E. Church of this city. He was crossing the overhead bridge, on North Front street, about 9.45 p.m., when two men stopped him and ordered him to "put up his hands." Instead he assumed a warlike posture with an umbrella, at the same time shouting for the police. The would-be thieves then ran away.

DR. GRANT TAKES BIG JOB.

He Will Head Amalgamated Presbyterian Boards.

WOODSTOCK, June 11.—Dr. Andrew S. Grant, superintendent of home missions and chairman of the finance board, accepted the position of general superintendent of the amalgamated boards of home mission and social service and evangelism at yesterday afternoon's session of the Presbyterian assembly. Later he also accepted the chairmanship of the finance board for the year 1914-15.

Shortly after the session opened yesterday afternoon, Dr. Murdoch Mackenzie, convener of the special committee appointed by the moderator to confer with Dr. Grant, reported he had been unable to secure a promise from Dr. Grant to reconsider the matter. He submitted a recommendation advising the assembly to accept the resignation.

On behalf of the home mission board Dr. Mackenzie then submitted a resolution requesting Dr. Grant on account of the important works he has initiated to remain as head of the board, but Dr. Grant declined the appointment.

Rev. R. J. Wilson, Vancouver, then moved that Dr. Grant be appointed as general superintendent of the amalgamated boards of home missions and social service and evangelism, which motion was carried.

Dr. Grant was asked for his answer and taking the platform he said:

"I wish to tell you I accept your proposition with the understanding you put in the same yoke Dr. Shearer, and appoint Mr. Edmundson as my secretary."

On a motion of Dr. Wilson, Dr. Shearer was appointed Dr. Grant's team-mate in the work of the combined board, and the request of Dr. Shearer that Dr. McGregor and Rev. Mr. Robinson be appointed to their positions was concurred in. Dr. Grant's request was also granted.

The report of the board of finance was concluded and the budget for the year was fixed at $1,500,000.

The assembly finished its business before ten o'clock last night. In his closing speech the moderator stated that this assembly has established a record for expeditious work.

Furs Found In Woods.

TORONTO, June 11.—Despite numerous attempts to drive him out of the country and to end his life by means of knives and other weapons, Provincial Constable James Edwards, of White River, is still very much alive. Only two weeks ago he had the Hudson Bay Co. fined $16,000 for buying furs out of season and yesterday he journey to Missanabie and found 181 beaver skins, and 14 otter skins cached in the bush. The total find was worth about $3,500 and the officer lost no time in shipping the furs towards Toronto.

Tolls Vote To-day.

WASHINGTON, June 11. — The Senate last night cleared away most of the legislative barriers in the way of a final vote on the canal tolls exemption repeal bill, and unless there are unforeseen developments, the fight which has raged in Congress over this measure for many months will come to a close before adjournment to-night.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, June 8.—Dame Nature is now the centre of attention. Her caprices will be anxiously watched for upon her good behaviour during the next few weeks depends a bounteous harvest. Advices from the continent are to the effect that good weather conditions prevail in England, but in the great wheat growing district of South-Western Europe crops have received a severe check from drought. In Western Canada there is an increase of 2,000,000 acres in the crop area. There was some anxiety because of continuous dry weather, but rains have fallen during the past few days. United States crop conditions are good.

WHEAT

The reports of poor weather conditions from Europe have been counteracted by the prospects of bumper crops in Canada and United States. Ontario wheat has dropped two or three cents. Some business has been done in winter wheat flour for Eastern Canada. No. 1 Northern is quoted at $1.00½; No. 2, 99c; Ontario wheat, car lots, outside, $1.02 to $1.03.

COARSE GRAINS

A very fair local demand continues for oats. The price of corn shows an appreciable decrease since last week. Quotations are: Oats, No 2, C.W., 42½c; No. 3 C.W., 42c; Ontario, 40c to 41c outside; 44c and 43½c on track Toronto. Corn, No. 4, yellow, 74½c; peas, No. 2, 98c to $1.03 car lots; rye, No. 2, 63c to 64c outside; malting barley, 56c to 58c; Manitoba feed barley, 50c to 52c; buckwheat, 83c to 85c in car lots. At Montreal the feature has been the demand from the continent for barley. No. 2 C.W. oats was quoted at 43½c to 44c; No. 2 C.W., 42¾ to 43c; corn, American No. 2 yellow, 79c to 80c; Manitoba feed barley, 51c to 53c.

MILL FEEDS

The market here is quiet. Bran is quoted at $23 to $25; middlings, $28 to $30; good feed flour, $30 to $32. At Montreal the demand has been fairly steady. Bran is quoted at $23, shorts, $25; middlings, $28.

HAY AND STRAW

Choice hay is still bringing a good figure. No. 1 is quoted at $14 to $14.50 on track; extra No. 2, $12.50 to $13; No. 2, $10 to $11; No. 3, $8 to $9; baled straw, $6 to $6.50. At Montreal prices are higher. No. 1 is bringing $16.25 to $16.50 in car lots; No. 2, extra, $15.50 to $16; No. 2, ordinary, $14 to $15; No 3, $12 to $13; clover, $11 to $12.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Potato prices rule a trifle higher than last week. Wholesalers are quoting to the trade as follows: Ontario's, $1.25 per bag out of store; $1.15 in car lots; New Brunswick's, $1.25 in car lots. Montreal quotations are: Car lots, 85c to $1.10 per bag.

Prime beans are quoted at $2.25 a bus.; hand picked, $2.40. At Montreal hand picked are quoted at $2; one-pound pickers, $1.90; three-pound pickers, $1.70.

EGGS AND POULTRY

The price of eggs holds fairly steady at last week's level. Wholesalers are selling new laids to the trade at 20c to 22c. At Montreal receipts have been heavier than at this period last year. Large quantities will be required for storage. Dealers are quoting 18c at country points. Dressed fowl are quoted at 16c to 18c per lb. alive, 15c to 16c; turkeys, No. 1 dressed, 22c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

English buyers have shown quite an interest in Canadian offerings, but cables have been at too low a figure to give any great impetus to the export trade. Considering the short receipts a greater interest might be expected. Country markets are keeping up, however, ranging around 12½c. The make still continues to be short of last year. The receipts of cheese up to the end of May have been 71,239 boxes, as against 99,343 boxes for the same period of last year.

Now that full grass butter is coming on the market the demand has improved. Several cars of creamery went through to Vancouver a week ago. The same applies to butter as to cheese. Receipts are below those of last year for the same period. At Montreal finest Eastern Townships has been selling at 25½c to 25¾c. Wholesalers here quote: Creamery prints, fresh, 25c to 25c; farmers' separator prints, 19c to 21c; dairy prints, 18c to 19c.

HORSES

Buyers from the Canadian West have been on the horse market the past week. Present quotations are: Heavy drafters, $225 to $340; agricultural horses, $140 to $190; general purpose, $170 to $230; delivery, $160 to $200; light delivery, $125 to $150; roadsters, $70 to $160; serviceably sound, $50 to $90.

LIVE STOCK

The live stock trade has been slow. At times there was a fair demand for common butchers. Choice heavy steers have been selling at $8.10 to $8.35; handy choice steers, $8 to $8.30; butchers' steers, com. to good, $7.25 to $8; heifers, $6.75 to $8.20; choice butcher cows, $7 to $7.50; com. to good, $4.50 to $7; butcher bulls, $6 to $7.65; feeders, $7.25 to $7.80; stockers, $6.50 to $7.80; canners, $3 to $4.

Choice milch cows, $65 to $85, com. to good, $40 to $65; springers, $40 to $95. Calves range from $5 to $9.75.

Spring lambs are bringing $4.50 to $8.50 each; wether lambs, $8 to $9, buck lambs, $7.25 to $8.25; light ewes, $6 to $6.75; heavy culls and bucks, $4 to $6.25.

Hogs are slightly lower at $7.75 f.o.b.

CHEESE AND BUTTER

Utica, June 1—A slight increase in butter was the feature of to-day's session of the Utica Dairy Board of Trade. Small white cheese sold at 12¾c to 13c a lb.

Stirling, June 2—796 boxes were offered. 580 sold at 12¾c, balance at 12 5-16c.

St. Paschall, Que., June 2—230 boxes of butter sold to A. A. Ayer, of Montreal, at 28 13-16c and 220 boxes of cheese sold to Hodgson Bros., Montreal, at 13 5-16c.

Campbellford, June 2—740 boxes of cheese were offered, all sold at 12 5-16c.

Peterboro, June 4.—1,404 cheese sold at 12 9-16c.

PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT FOR A BANNER CROP

Report of Experts Says the West is in for a Great Year and the East Will Share in the Prosperity.

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK

Special Wire to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, Ill., June 11—Reports gathered here by prominent grain men, from all the grain provinces and states of Western Canada and the United States, and summarized by experts this morning, indicate prospects for bumper crops generally all through the wheat country.

Indications in the Canadian Provinces are particularly bright. There has been just enough rain and sunshine to bring the wheat out and the alfalfa along in good shape. In comparison with other years, especially in Manitoba and the lower parts of Saskatchewan, the outlook is very bright. From Winnipeg comes the news of optimistic feeling all over the Canadian West. This means that Ontario and the Eastern Provinces will benefit immensely, too. It is predicted that there will in the immediate future be lots of meniess jobs, instead of jobless men.

It will require a greater army than ever to harvest Canada's grain crop in 1914, and its financial result to Canada, as a whole, will be tremendous.

REGISTER! REGISTER!

The registration of those who are entitled to vote and are not on the voters' list, takes place to-day and the balance of the week. The qualifications for a registered vpter are as follows: He must be a British subject 21 years, in the riding three months, and in Canada a year preceding the first day for registration, which is today. All those who are supporting Mr. Gillespie's candidature are kindly asked to see that their names are on the list. The information may be obtained from Gillespie's Committee Room, on Water Street. The registration now being held is for the City of Peterborough only and not for the entire riding.

WILL INQUIRE INTO HIS SANITY

The Finn named Carson, who jumped off the Port Hope train at Garden Hill, the other night, was arraigned before Magistrate Doake, at Millbrook, yesterday. Constable Hayward of the local police force, went to Millbrook and gave evidence of his actions in this City. Carson was committed to the Cobourg Jail pending investigation into his sanity.

MUST SUPPLY ENGINEER WITH THEIR PLANS

Board of Works Decides That Different Companies Should Acquaint City of Their Intention in Regard to Streets

MEETING LAST NIGHT

At the Board of Works meeting last night a petition was read from T. Robertson and others asking the Board to use its influence to have the Grand Trunk Railway engine house removed, preferably to a point outside the city. It was decided to confer with the superintendent before taking action.

A letter was read from Mr. H. F. Coyle, superintendent of the G.T.R. for permission to place the watchman's cabin for King and Sherbrooke streets on two posts, fourteen feet above the ground, and on Bethune street. On the motion of Aldermen Johnston and Green, the matter was laid over, and the City Clerk was instructed to meet him on the ground the first time he is in the city.

A notice was to hand from the Ontario Railway Board saying that in Toronto on June 11th, at eleven o'clock in the morning, they intended to deal with the application of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company for a relocation of part of their line, and an extension of their present system. The Mayor will be present to represent the city when the matter comes before the Railway Board on June 11th.

A solution to the difficulty that has arisen over the fact that so many companies have the right to tear up the streets and lay mains, resulting in constant friction between their mains and the city's, was discussed. Finally on the motion of Aldermen Anderson and Green, the City Engineer was instructed to write the different public utilities companies and ask for plans of all their work on the streets, showing its location and depth, and also for plans and profiles of all future work before it is undertaken, and notify him one week ahead when they propose beginning any work.

A letter was read from the Board of Health recommending the construction of a sewer on Bethune street from Sherbrooke street to Dalhousie street, and on the Monaghan Road from Homewood avenue to Walkerfield avenue. On the motion of Aldermen Johnston and Saunders it was agreed that notice be given of the intention of the Council to construct these sewers.

A petition for a sewer on Cambridge street from Elm to Cedar streets was referred to the Board of Health.

A letter was read from Messrs. O'Connell and Corkery asking for the removal of the standpipe in front of Mr. Pappas' residence at the corner of Water and Antrim streets.

It was moved by Alderman Stratton and seconded by Alderman Johnston, that the Utilities Commission be requested to remove the standpipes on George near Antrim street, on Aylmer at Wolfe street, and on Smith street at Dennistoun avenue. Carried.

A petition was read from J. Blodgett asking for a sidewalk on the south side of Dublin street from Downie street about 90 feet west. On the motion of Alderman Johnston and Mayor Buller the City Engineer was instructed to build the sidewalk.

CONSTITUTIONALISTS CONTINUE TO WIN

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 11.—Word was received here of continued Constitutionalist victories in Mexico, and it is believed that within a month or two, unless they receive some setback, Villa and other leaders will be practically knocking at the gates of Mexico City. It is persistently rumoured here that Huerta is ready to resign if arrangements can be made satisfactory to the A-B-C mediators without prejudice to Mexico's position in peace negotiations. At best Huerta's position is dangerous at the hands of the Constitutionalist soldiers his life would not be worth much. It is believed here he desires to get out while he has a chance to save his life and fortune, as he is a wealthy man.

The Quashers of the Farmers' Bank Indemnification Bill—Six out of eleven Conservative Senators who helped defeat the Farmers' Bank Bill, and Liberal Senator Power, who moved the resolution to carry the bill over for six months.

APPEAL NOT CONCLUDED

Robinson vs. Havelock Case Which Was Tried Here by Justice Kelly, is Being Appealed at Osgoode Hall

APPELLATE COURT

The appeal was heard yesterday in the Appellate Division of the Court of Appeal, of Robinson vs. the Corporation of Havelock. The appeal by defendants (Havelock) from the judgment of Justice Kelly, who delivered judgment in favour of Robinson, on March 14th, 1914. The action brought by Robinson, it will be remembered, was to recover the sum of $5,000.00 damages, for the death of the plaintiff's three children who, while playing in a gravel pit belonging to defendants, on August 12th, 1913, were killed by reason of overhanging earth falling upon them. This was alleged to be due to the negligence of the defendants, or their agents, in leaving the place unprotected and unguarded, and also unfenced.

At the trial the jury assessed the damages to which the plaintiff was entitled, at $725 and costs, for which amount Mr. Justice Kelly entered judgment.

The appeal was partially argued, but not completed, in Toronto yesterday, at Osgoode Hall.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell is appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. F. D. Kerr for the defendants.

HOUSEHOLDER FOR NINE YEARS BUT REGISTERS

When a citizen of over nine years' residence in this City as a householder, appeared in the registration court this morning, Mr. Brownscombe was slightly puzzled. Mr. R. J. Devey informed him that his name appeared as "Devo," and suggested that a Returning Officer would be in order in declinging to issue a ballot. In order to insure the right vote on June 29th, Mr. Devey insisted on being sworn as a registered voter, and will accordingly be perfectly in order unless someone blunders again.

"Reminiscences of England."
God Save The King.

FOUR KILLED IN SMASH-UP

Motor Car Was Stalled on Track and Union Pacific Flyer Crashed Into Machine With Terrible Results

MRS. FISHER DYING

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OMAHA, Neb., June 11. — Four people out on a joyride in a auto were instantly killed early this morning on a level crossing of the Union Pacific railroad by a westbound flyer. Their machine got stalled on the track.

Fatally Injured.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Her chest crushed in, Mrs. Bud Fisher, actress, wife of the well known cartonist, is lying in the hospital here following an auto accident early this morning.

A MILLIONAIRE BUT DOES NOT KNOW IT

EDMONTON, Alta., June 10—Paul T. Fleischer, local manager of a prominent life insurance company, who organized the Edmonton lodge of Canadian Elks in February, is a millionaire, but so far as can be learned he is not aware of the fact. He owns leases on several hundred acres of oil lands in Southern Alberta, which have become valuable since the recent "boom." His friends, assisted by the local contsabulary and members of the Royal North West Mounted Police have not been able to locate him. The theory advanced is that he is either sick in some place out of the way, or that he met with an accident. He left here the night of February 23 to visit North Battleford, Sask., planning to go to Calgary afterwards. Since then none of his friends have seen him or heard from him and the police are unable to obtain any trace as to his whereabouts.

THE CATTLE MARKET

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, June 11—Receipts fair, trade active; prices unchanged from last quotations, except milch cows, which are slightly easier, at $65 to $80.

VALEDICTORY TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Presented in the House of Commons To-day---Premier and Laurier Unite in Praising the Royal Family.

SERVICE TO CANADA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 11.—The House of Commons this morning presented its formal valedictory address to his Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, whose term of office as Governor-General of the Dominion expires this summer. Both leaders, in supporting the address, spoke eloquently of the service of his Royal Highness to Canada.

"I am convinced," said Premier Borden, "that his course as a constitutional presentative of His Majesty will add additional lustre to Canadian history. To accomplish all that he desired," added the Premier, "his Royal Highness has not spared himself, and he may be assured that his visits will be held in happy remembrance by our people in every province from the Atlantic to the Pacific."

Mr. Borden referred to the deep sympathy of the people of Canada at the time of the serious illness of the Duchess of Connaught. "In offering our very sincere congratulations," said the Premier, "that Her Highness has made such complete recovery of her health, we add that she and the Princess Patricia with equal tact and graciousness, have also endeared themselves to our people."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Canadian people should take advantage of every opportunity to testify to the deep regret caused by the early departure of their Royal Highnesses.

"The Canadian people are essentially a democratic people, and the pomp and ceremony which surrounds royalty does little or nothing to increase our respect for the Crown," said Sir Wilfrid. "But the Canadian people appreciate these domestic virtues and solid qualities which are characteristics of their Royal Highnesses."

STRONG ADDRESS AT METHODIST CONFERENCE TO-DAY

"The Time Has Now Come When We Must Act From Expediency" Dr. Carman Present

CERTAIN OBJECTIONS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 11 — Fire-works were promised in the Methodist Conference here to-day when Rev. Dr. Carman, the venerable Superintendent of the Methodist Church for Canada, rose after the President, Rev. C. W. Watch, had delivered his opening address, and objected to the address being accepted as stamped with the seal of the Conference. He intimated that he would call for a vote on it, before it was passed out as the Conference address. Mr. Watch had made some pointed political references. He said, speaking of the liquor traffic, "the time has now come when we must act from expediency. The time has come when the godly man, in the presence of the ballot box, must cast his ballot not from party cry, but from the contact of his heart with the heart of Christ. The problems suggested to us this day are the challenge of the world to the Christian Church. The Church is part of the nations life, not in politics but in teaching and example."

HOME CEASING TO BE RELIGIOUS

And Is Ceasing to Teach Religion —Schools Are Not Contributing in This Respect

CHURCH MUST DO ALL

TORONTO, June 11—"The home is ceasing to teach religion," said Rev. Canon Tucker of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Ont., speaking on the sixth annual report of the Sunday School Commission of the Anglican Church, "because the home itself is ceasing to be religious." "As for the schools only two out of 150 entrance pupils in London knew the Golden Rule. Only fifty knew who condemned Jesus to death and most of these spelled it 'Pilot'. That gives some idea of the effect of the religious teaching as far as our schools go. They leave it all to the churches."

A Provisional of Mexico Is Expected Now

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 11. — It is believed here that a man of Constitutional sympathies, but not Carranza himself, will be named provisional President of Mexico when Huerta retires, as it is now felt inevitable. No reply came from Carranza to-day to the mediators' suggestions, but the conference went on during the afternoon between the delegates and the mediators.

MILITARY JOTTINGS

There are still a few vacancies for any young men who wish to go to camp at Petawawa on Saturday next, with the 24th Brigade Canadian Field Artillery. The ranks are filling up quickly and any who wish to go should make application as soon as possible.

The advance party leaves to-morrow morning in connection with the above-named unit of the Peterborough Garrison, and when the men arive in camp their comfort will have been provided for and catered to.

POST OFFICE ACT NOT PASSED NOW

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, June 11. — Hon. L. P. Pelletier's bill to amend the Post Office Act will not be passed this session, because of the Senate's emendments.

"I cannot accept these amendments," said Mr. Pelletier this morning, and "as a consequence the whole thing goes—rates on postage, increases in salaries for mail clerks, insurance on letters, everything. The bill is now dead." It is stated that 1,400 postal employees would have been affected by increases in salaries provided for by clauses of the bill.

PROOF WANTED.

We reckon it's up to Ted
To show a tooth from that river's mouth,
Or some feathers from its bed.

PUTS THE BLAME ON THE LONDON BOARD OF TRADE

LONDON, June 10.—John Bull, the weekly periodical, dealing with the recent disaster, scores the Board of Trade, declaring that it is not surprised at any maritime catastrophe so long as the control of the mercantile marine is left in the hands of a bogus Board of Trade. It complains that practical suggestions have been ignored, such as a centre derrick permitting the launching of boats on either side of the ship, a deck dynamo for the Marconi installation, and also both transverse and longitudinal bulkheads. John Bull, while disclaiming any love for the Salvation Army, addresses an open letter to Major Frank Morris, referring to his effort to save Commissioner Rees as one of the finest feats of gallantry in the grim annals of the sea

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKET

The opening of the Stock Market, this morning, was an exceedingly tame affair, the volume of business being small, while the active issues were unchanged in price from Wednesday's close. The weekly statement of the Bank of England and the Bank of France were favourable. It is expected that the interstate Consumers Commission will hand down their decision in the rate case before the end of the week and it is expected to be favourable to the railways. The question is how much of a rally will follow a favourable rate decision. It is expected that stocks will advance very materially this coming week.

U. S. Interference Unwarranted.

PARIS, June 11.—A news agency despatch from Athens says that Geo. Williams, American Minister to Greece, has informed his diplomatic colleagues in a circular note that his Government authorizes him to go to Albania and Epirus to enquire into the situation there, in the interest of peace and goodwill among all races and all parties.

The news agency adds that this action "amazes the diplomatic corps, who regard it as inadmissible intervention by the United States into Albanian affairs."

The State Department at Washington says Williams has had no instructions to do as reported.

Manitoba Elections July 9?

The meeting then adjourned.

CUT DOWN BUTCHER'S BILL.

"This is an opportunity for the citizens to cut down on their butcher's bills," said Dr. Hastings to-day, smiling cheerfully as he watched perspiring people tramping past in the glaring sunshine outside the City Hall. "If they'd eat more vegetables and fruit," continued the M. H. O., "and not so much meat, or better still, no meat at all, they'd be much more comfortable. For these hot days, the way to keep comfortable is to eat little, drink plenty of water, and wear as few clothes as possible."

NEGLECTED FARMING INTERESTS

We see in the high cost of living, in the matter of farm products; in lessened crop production; in farmless farms and in general agricultural interests floundering in a rut, ploughed by Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture in the Whitney government, evidence of defective administration.

This condition is not only fatal to the success of the farming industry, but reacts powerfully upon us in towns and cities. The retail merchants' prosperity is bound up in the success and prosperity of the farmer. The farmers' crop at harvest time becomes the keynote of bankers and financial men. It follows logically that the most brilliant statesmen of the province, the most alert, capable, most informed man available should be at the head of the Department of Agriculture in the province of Ontario.

Hon. James Stoddart Duff, Minister of Agriculture, has been asleep at the plough since he succeeded Hon. Nelson Monteith in October 1908. This is no partizan jibe, because it is a reflection of sentiments expressed by Mr. Duff's own political friends and natural sympathizers. How he has "fallen down on the job" is testified by J. W. Flavelle, one of the leading Conservatives in Ontario. In an open letter to Mr. Duff, he said:

"You (Mr. Duff) have permitted, you are now permitting, thousands of Ontario young farmers, the cream of our agricultural people to leave their own province, while by your inertia you show you are not cognizant of the advantages of continued residence in this province, if full advantage is taken of the opportunities which open in response to intelligent effort."

That Mr. Duff has not employed "intelligent effort," is shown by the opinion of more of his political friends. On July 15th, 1913, the Mail and Empire, which cannot be described as a "Grit sore head," says:

"It is true that the Agricultural Department has not kept pace with other branches of industry."

Another Conservative journal, the Toronto World, sums up the results, the crop, the harvest of incapacity, and "inertia," as Mr Flavelle calls it, of Mr. Duff. Minister of Agriculture, in these words—the World said February 14, 1914:

"Ontario is in need of something being done to rescue the agricultural interests of the country from the rut into which they have fallen and which becomes deeper every year."

The Examiner has no desire to be hard on Mr. Duff, but he can't complain of the criticisms of his friends. We content ourselves with publishing these, and their importance is emphasized by the results of the conditions condemned by these Conservative authorities.

The World's condemnation was made in reference to a resolution introduced into the Legislature last session, calling for the appointment of "a non-partizan commission" to "inquire into the condition of agricultural and rural life in the province, and report to the House the facts, with their recommendations as to steps which can and should be taken to improve existing conditions." The evidence of the Conservatives, quoted is sufficient to show that there is need for such a commission, if, for no other purpose, than as a starting point for the "intelligent effort" which Mr. Flavelle says Mr. Duff has failed to use. Yet Mr. Duff and the other members of the government ordered this reasonable resolution voted down, and Mr. Duff is still asleep at the plow.

Results show that something should be one. Ontario is the richest, largest province in the Dominion and should be the most productive. In the ten years between 1901 and 1911, including the six years the Whitney government was in power, the rural population — farmers, faremrs' sons and daughters—of Ontario declined 97,124, equal to the wiping off the map, of nearly three counties of the size of the county of Peterborough with their population. There has been a startling decline in crop production, in stock breeding and in cheese production. There are fewer milch cows, sheep and swine.

The work done by the Agricultural College is excellent, yet it only touches the edge of the farm life of the province. C. C. James, the late Deputy Minister of Agriculture, said that Ontario was only producing half of what it could be made to grow. It was to find out how to do better, how to bring the knowledge imparted at the Agricultural College within reach of the individual farmer, that Mr. Rowell proposed the commission of inquiry which Mr. Duff and his government had voted down. It was in regard to this that the Toronto World, Conservative, said:

"We believe the government will be well advised to pay some attention to Mr. Rowell's proposal (for a commission), not because it is Mr. Rowell's proposal or some English statesman's proposal, but because Ontario is in need, and in bad need of something being done to rescue the agricultural interests from the rut into which they they have fallen, and which grows deeper every year."

We shall leave the condemnation of Mr. Duff's system of neglecting agricultural interests to his Conservative friends as quoted. The prosperity of the farmer and the retail merchant are closely related. Both appreciate it. The "Dollar Day" of our merchants was a means of making the bond closer, and if Mr. Duff will kindly wake up and get the agricultural interests out of the rut, he will be doing what he has been neglecting since he was sworn in Minister of Agriculture six years—and six years too many—years ago. If the farmers are made more prosperous, helped grow better crops and more of them, the retail merchant will feel the effects as a parched crop feels the effect of a plentiful rain.

THE DECLINE OF FARMING UNDER DUFF REGIME

Record of Scandalous Inefficiency and Neglect—Decrease of Farm Products—Farm Population and Farming Efficiency.

If there is any one branch of the Whitney Administration that by its own record is self-condemnatory it is the one presided over by the Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture. When any department of Government is so notoriously maladministered that its very name becomes a by-word for inefficiency, even among supporters of the Government in question, it is high time that public opinion find expression against those responsible. When a man is given the portfolio of Agriculture simply as his share of the spoils in the game of political opportunism, and when he is allowed to man his department with men who are as innocent as children regarding the fundamentals of the industry over which they assume contro, the tents of civic and public decency are being ruthlessly outraged. For some years past, under the nominal regime of Hon. Mr. Duff, there has been perpetrated in the name of agricultural administration a farce that at this moment brings a smirk to the faces of those Conservatives who are in touch with the inner workings of the department, and a blush of shame to those of the same party who had been led to hope for better things.

No Initiative Shown.

Briefly, some of the more glaring instances of incapability and inefficiency may be referred to. The entire work of the department has been characterized by an utter lack of dynamic force—neither the Minister nor his deputy has shown the slightest initiative. This is due largely to the absence from the department of Mr. C. C. James and the appointment in his place of a young man with absolutely no practical or technical knowledge of farming.

How the Country is Depopulated.

The Dominion census shows that from 1901 to 1911 th rural population of old Ontario declined by 97,124.

Even taking into consideration New Ontario, where the population has been on the increase, the total decline in rural population in the ten years was 52,184.

The following examples will illustrate the seriousness in this decline in important counties:

	1901.	1911.	Dec..
Bruce	42,624	34,702	7,922
Grey	53,698	42,862	10,836
Huron	44,877	37,190	7,607
Simcoe	54,754	47,155	7,599
Lambton	36,873	31,077	5,796
Perth	31,192	27,400	3,792

Not only does the comparison between the population in 1901 and 1911 show a decline, but the population of rural Ontario to-day is over 110,000 less than it was even 40 years ago. The figures are as follows:

Rural population, 1871	1,306,405
Rural population, 1911	1,194,785
Loss in 40 years	111,620

The city population of Ontario, on the other hand, has increased by 1,000,000:

City population, 1871	313,446
City population, 1911	1,328,489
Increase in 40 years	1,015,043

Decline in Production.

There has been, in consequence of this decrease in rural population, a startling falling off in production. Since the year 1900 there has been a steady decline in the number of bushels produced annually of each of the following crops: Fall and spring wheat, peas, rye, corn for husking, potatoes and turnips. Since 1907, to this have been added carrots, mangel wurtzels and turnips. Live stock breeding has steadily declined. In 1913 there were in Ontario 20,000 fewer milch cows than there were six years previous. In the same six years our production of sheep declined by 110,000, our production of swine by 262,000, and our production of beef cattle by 178,000 head. Is this steady decrease indicative of the splendid rural progress of which Mr. Duff is wont to talk?

Exports Nearly Ceased.

The retrogression is not confined solely to the farm, but extends to those allied interests dependent upon agriculture for existence and prosperity. A few years ago Ontario was exporting butter and cheese. To-day we are not meeting our home demand. In 1907 our factories exported to the extent of 157,000,000 pounds; by 1913 this export had fallen to about 129,500,000 pounds, a decrease of 28,000,000 in six years. During the past year in Ontario scores of factories closed down because of the impossibility of securing milk for manufacture.

At the last session of the Legislature the Government, following upon a bombastic speech of evasion by Hon. Mr Duff, voted down a Liberal amendment calling for the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture to inquire into the conditions of agriculture and rural life in this Province, and to suggest steps that would tend to arrest rural depopulation and the decline of production of food products, with all their attendand and manifest accompaniments. The Conservative members voted down the amendment, in spite of the fact that there appeared in the press at the time such comments as the following from The Toronto World (Conservative):—

"Ontario is in need, and in bad need, of something being done to rescue the agriculture interests of the country from the rut into which they have fallen, and which grows deeper every year."

Hon. Mr. Duff says that there is no rural decadence; that all is healthy and serene in rural Ontario. Do the statistics prove it? Do the signs of the times suggest it? Do intelligent voters, Liberal and Conservative, accept his say-so with satisfaction?

BEAVERS HAND THE PETES A BAD TRIMMING TO CLOSE THE SERIES

Lee's Bunch Scored Eight Runs in the First Four Innings and the Homesters Are Beaten by 8 Runs to 1--Bunched Hits and Good Base Running Enabled the Visitors to Nail the Decision.

Just when we had visions of a clean sweep over Knotty Lee's bunch, the Beavers turned on the homesters yesterday and hnaded the Petes an 8 to 1 jolt. The local Athletes never had a chance. The Little Leafs smeared hte ball with regularity, ran bases cleverly and in the first four innings piled up eight runs. Bob Sterling was the first victim. He got by in the opening innings, but the Beavers bagged two runs in the second and three in the third off his delivery. Nearly all their safeties were smashed through the infield, the hit and run play being pulled off successfully on two or three occasions. On top of this the Beavers showed something on the base paths, Killilea capping the climax by a clever steal of home. Sterling was wild and was always in the hole. Tracey succeeded him in the fourth, and the visitors added three runs to their total in that session. For the balance of the game, however, the relief pitcher stopped the invaders. Meanwhile Bobby Auld had the Petes well in hand, and the few times the homesters did threaten the Beavers came through with some sparkling fielding.

Mosely had the fireworks play of the day, when he ran back to the running track in right field and pulled down Stewart's hard smash. There were two on bases at the time and it looked like a sure triple. The baserunners were tearing for home and didn't have a chance to get back, Moseley doubling Welsh at first. The throw was low and got by Schultz, but Auld backing up the base, recovered the ball in time to retire Welsh, giving the unusual exhibition of an outfielder and a pitcher combining for a double play.

Killilea had a pretty catch of a fly to short left, and Stewart pulled down half a dozen flies in good style.

The trouble started in the second innings. With two balls and a strike on him, Killilea drove one on a line to deep left, sliding into third ahead of a Blount-Fox relay. Schultz cut one to right for a single, scoring Killilea. Isaac popped to King, but Loud singled to right, and both moved moved up on a wild pitch. Mosely singled past third, sending Schultz home. Auld hit to Sterling, who nipped Loud at the plate and Trout ended the innings by cracking one which Stewart grabbed.

The gloom deepened in the third. Sterling walked Burrill, and after Ort had singled through short, Killilea also drew a pass, filling the bases. Schultz fanned. Isaac hit to King, who nailed Burrill at the plate. Kelly's peg to Gorman to complete the double arrived too late and Ort scored from second on the play. Isaac stole second, and he and Killilea pulled off a double steal, the little shortstop stealing home. Loud singled to centre to score Isaac and stole second, but Sterling ended the anguish by whiffing Mosely.

With Tracey pitching, the Beavers put over three more in the fourth. With one down, Trout singled to left and went to third on the hit and run play when Burrill singled past Gorman. Burrill stole second, and both scored on Killilea's smash to right. Gorman cut off Stewart's throw to the plate and had Killilea at second, but Fox dropped the ball. Schultz hit a roller which Tracey deflected to Fox, who fumbled and Killilea scored from second. Schultz died stealing.

From then on Tracey had the Beavers well in hand, only two men reaching first in the last five innings.

The Petes' first good chance to score came in the second with two out, when Fox doubled to second and Kelly was passed. Sterling, however, forced Kelly at second.

In the third Blount led off with a single to right, but the next three were easy.

A pass to Fox and Kelly's single to short put two on with two out in the fourth, but Tracey's best was a tap to Killilea, who forced Kelly at second.

With one gone in the fifth, Byrne singled through short and Welsh walked. Chances for a run or two looked good. Stewart poled a beauty to right, but Mosely made a grand catch and doubled Welsh at first, Auld completing the play.

Another double play extinguished a chance in the sixth. King singled to start, but Gorman hit to Killilea, and through the Ort-Schultz route, a tandem killing was pulled off.

In the eighth Byrne was safe on Killilea's wide throw to first. Welsh flied to Killilea and Stewart forced Byrne at second on a grounder to Auld. King singled over second and Gorman beat out a slow one along the third base line, filling the bases. It was up to Fox, but Frankie fanned, the third strike being called.

The Petes' only run came through in the ninth. With one down, Miller, batting for Tracey, scratched a hit on a slow roller past Auld. Blount singled to right and Byrne was passed, filling the bases. Welsh's fly to Loud scored Miller, but Stewart fanned. The score:

Swartling Off To Consult The Bone-setter

Hugh Swartling, the big first-baseman secured by the Petes two weeks ago, and who has been unable to get into the game on account of a bad arm, left yesterday for Youngstown to have Bonesetter Reese doctor the injured salary whip. If it does not soon round into shape the big fellow will have to be dropped. So far his salary-earning efforts have been confined to three pinch-hitting appearances, on one of which he came through.

GOLF

In the last round of the Stratton Trophy, played yesterday, Mr. A. H. Stratton defeated Mr. N. H. Campbell.

Mr. R. M. Hamilton and Mr. A. H. Stratton will play off for the Stratton Trophy next week.

The following players will play against Lindsay to-morrow (Friday), in Lindsay:

W. C. Ackerman, E. B. Boswell, P. Campbell, C. Pennefather, W. G. Murrow, N. H. Campbell, A. F. Le Fevre, C. R. Cameron, Dr. Gordan, R. Neill, F. M. Dela Fosse, S. Ray, W. Stratton, E. H. D. Hall, Dr. Frederick.

Players are reminded that the C. P. R. train leaves at 10.50. Owing to change of time-table it will be advisable for those not going by motor car to take the G. T. R. on the return trip.

LACROSSE TEAM WON FROM HASTINGS WITH A DASHING SECOND HALF

Score Was 3-1 at Half Time in Favour of the Trent Team---Final Figures Were 4-3 in Favour of Peterborough --- Complete Reversal of Form.

THE TEAM LOOKS GOOD

With the score 3 to 1 against them at half time in yesterday's game on the Hastings grounds the Peterborough Lacrosse team let loose a class of combination that netted three goals while the Trent boys frothed in an effort to score. The game ended 4-3 in favour of Peterborough, and it was one grand little surprise to Dodd-Scriver & Co. who at half time regarded the rest of the passage as easy travelling. All they had to do was to walk in and cinch the contest, to hear them tell it. But it was a poor day for cinches, and besides the presence of Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., and Jas. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, trotted the Conservative jinx into the village and a victory should not have been hoped for with that handicap.

The Hastings team played a nice game, but, to begin with, their overconfidence lubricated the way to their undoing. They had the advantage of playing on their home grounds, which would not pass as a decent pasture land. They had their regular lineup, and they were confident of taking the game, but the Peterborough ten found their footing and ran in the necessary three in a row.

A Slow Beginning.

The game opened slowly and for practically the whole first quarter it was a rather tattered brand of lacrosse. The grounds militated against the work of the Peterborough team, and they did not easily hit their stride. But as they settled down to the going they showed a nice combination and took every advantage of Hastings' loose checking. During the last half their play was splendid in spots, and the home quartette shot the ball generally bounding straight for the nets. The play, however, may be summed up in saying that the form of the two teams was directly opposite to that displayed in their Peterborough game. Here the locals opened strong and finished weak. Yesterday, Hastings seemed to have the game on ice when the Petes took the upper hand and the Trent attack fell to pieces.

The Hastings Team.

Bert Dodd was easily the pick of the Hastings team. He is fast on his feet, is a fair stick handler and plays the game all the time. Clapper, Nesbitt and Armstrong played a steady defence and fed the home generously. But something went wrong with the "air tight compartments" of the Trent home players, and it was a case of all hands to the lifeboats. Doonan's shooting was away below par, and Ernie Taite was not much better. Harry Dodd played his usual good game, but the defence held him at a safe distance in critical moments.

Peterborough Stronger.

The Blue and White made an impression on the natives when they warmed up. Fleming was an eleventh hour selection for goal, and he certainly made good. He booted out a bunch of them, and one of the counters looked from the crowd to have gone through a hole in the side of the net. Dillon stopped a number of dangerous shots, and generally speaking, had a busy afternoon. George Mein got in the way of many a combination and forced shots from outside the defence line. With Jack Crough he fed the home and at times travelled down to help out on the firing line. Grover Halpin showed many signs of progress, but his game was not as finished as that played in Peterborough. He was doubtless hampered by the grounds. He is not only handling the ball well, but he has a nifty check. Harry Donovan played a fine game on the home and with Fred Kelly, they fitted in perfectly with McCoy and Robertson.

A Nice Combination.

The last three goals scored started from Dillon or Mein to Crough or Halpin, to Donovan, and then right in on the nets, Robertson, McCoy and Kelly handling the ball with clean snappy passes that made Lobbing look sick. The present home will just about do. "Kel" has a fast shot, is a strong check, and has more than the average lacrosse intelligence. Geo. Robertson and Galley McCoy worked hard and with good results. McCoy notched two goals and Robertson and Kelly got one each.

Some of the Peterborough old fans should have seen the last twenty-five minutes. The Hastings people regarded the visitors as the small boy looks upon an ice cream cone.

Go to it and eat it up. But at six o'clock they went home with lead on their necks, and iron balls on their feet. The Peterborough combination when they were scoring, was a delight, and if they can show that stuff at home here the lacrosse lovers will get something to cheer for.

Athletics Will Meet Petes To-day

The Hamilton team arrived in Town at noon to-day for a three-game series with the Petes. Jack White, "Red" Fisher, Harry Corns and other old favourites are with the Athletics, as well as a host of new players. The pitching staff includes Manager Yates, himself, Donahue, Dougherty, Dolan and Starke, the latter until a few days ago being with the Erie team. Dolan is slated to work this afternoon and in all probability Schetler will be Manager Blount's choice. Jack White, former Peterborough player, was presented with a gold watch yesterday for making the first home run of the season, just to show that hitting is his middle name. Jack came through with four safeties against the Senators. "Doc." Yeates, Hamilton's manager, and Chester King, the local second baseman, will need no introduction. Five years ago Yates, pitching for Uniontown, defeated Fairmount with King pitching in the deciding game of a series that settled the West Virginia championship.

PHONETIC SPELLING.

Willie was struggling through the story in his reading lesson. "No, it was not a sloop. It was a larger vessel. By its rig I judged it to be a——" The word was new to him.

"Barque," supplied the teacher.

Still Willie hesitated, and looked bewildered.

"Barque! Barque," repeated the teacher, this time sharply.

Willie looked as though he had not heard aright. Then, with an apprehensive look around the class, he shouted "Bow-wow."

Man Slips On Banana Peel Once Too Often---Same Old Story

Same Witness Appears for Every Disaster---Railway Pays Claim in Marked Money and Arrest Follows

BUFFALO, June 9.—Lorenz M. Renzi has slipped on many banana skins in various parts of the United the same witness in every damage action.

Detective-Sergeants Flynn and Holmlund arrested Renzi yesterday at the Iroquois, where, it is claimed, $250 in marked money was handed him by J. M. Guild, claim agent for the Union Pacific Railway Company, one of the complainants.

Renzi and his partner, Antone Pirrone, twenty-six years old, are at the police headquarters charged with obtaining money under false pretences.

Collects Damages Twice.

According to Assistant District Attorney Clifford McLaughlin, to whom both prisoners made statements, claims for injuries alleged to have been sustained by Renzi, and witnessed by Pirrone, have been filed against the Union Pacific, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, and two Buffalo theatre companies, and in all but one Renzi says he slipped on a banana peel and in the other case he changed the variety of fruit to an orange.

In two cses he has collected damages. One was for $80, paid by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company for one slip claimed to have occurred in Chicago, and in the other from Main Street theatre company he got $10.

The other afternoon J. M. Guild and a lawyer representing the railroad company called on District Attorney Dudley regarding claims for what appeared to be the same accident. There was an unpaid claim against the Union Pacific for $250, and it was "framed up" to have Renzi and Pirrone meet the claim agent at the Iroquois. The $250 had been marked and numbers of the bills recorded.

Claim Agent Guild quietly smoked a cigar in the lobby with a roll of bills tucked away in his hip pocket. Detective-Sergeants Flynn and Holmlund were talking with the girl at the magazine counter when Renzi and Pirrone strolled in and began talking with Guild. The money was passed and the arrests made.

At the district attorney's office Renzi said he left his wife here early in February and went west looking for work. At Denver, he said, he slipped on a banana peel in a car and injured his chest. After being in a hospital two weeks he started on his way west after filing a claim for $250. On his way home he met another banana peel in a train, he says, in Chicago and sustained a bike injury. There, he said, he got $80 for his injury.

Slips in Buffalo.

When Renzi got back to Buffalo he slipped on another banana peel in a Main Street theatre, filed his claim, and got $10. A few days later he had another slip in another Main Street theatre on an orange peel. Then came the complaint to the district attorney.

"I am a graduate from a university in Italy," said Renzi. "I came to Buffalo six years ago and went to Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks for my lungs. When I recovered I went west for a job and I slipped there and opened up an old wound. I wanted to get money enough to go back to Italy and so filed these claims. Pirrone was a witness for me."

"But you intended to fall off a street car and file a claim against the street railway company, didn't you?" was asked.

"Yes," replied Renzi, "but I changed my mind."

Pirrone, who claims to be an opera singer, says his stage name is Anthony Roman. When asked to prove his vocal claims he burst into song in the district attorney's office to the tune of "There's a pretty spot in Ireland."

"Sing the rest of it," suggested Dennis Flynn, who had arrested the prisoner. "I like that song."

"No," replied Pirrone. "I'll sing 'Snitzelbank' for you—you're German."

And he sang a part of the song while waiting to make his statement to Assistant District Attorney McLaughlin.

PUBLIC ATTITUDE TO CITY BEAUTIFICATION

"Citizen" Emphasizes Some Instances of Neglect of Authorities

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Your article in Saturday's issue dealing with the City Beautiful, deserves the careful consideration of all citizens. You truly describe the situation when you say the public is not yet ready for the city beautiful.

Experience shows that little may be expected from movements beginning with banquets and stirring speeches, except perhaps a too ready consent to waste public funds. A more practical demonstration of public spiritedness is needed. To prove their seriousness the civic bodies who met at the banquet might have begun by directing their energies to the preservation of our patriarch trees, destroying caterpillars and preserving Jackson Park in its natural beauty and usefulness. These are the most urgent considerations in the matter of the "city beautiful" and need cost little or no money.

You truly say that the right places to begin reforms are in the homes, the schools and the churches, and the first thing to be taught is not to destroy the beauty of our public and semi-public places. Experience has shown that children can easily be taught to cherish and not destroy flowers and also to respect the property of others. This is not difficult to teach in the homes if attention is given to the matter.

Next comes the example and teaching of the schools. Take, for instance, the attitude of the teaching profession and the Board of Education toward the preservation of Jackson Park in its natural beauty and usefulness. Normal school students who are shortly to become teachers use the park for Botany and Nature study purposes, yet the very objects they study are being destroyed yearly before their eyes. Last year when the students were expected to pay their usual visit, the park was a ruin from the scythe and fire. Can we expect these young teachers to have aesthetic tastes or to feel any interest in or responsibility for, the preservation of the beautiful and useful when they are accustomed to see such delicate works of Nature thus needlessly destroyed?

If the homes and schools did succeed in instilling into the minds of the young a love for the beautiful and respect for other people's property, this good work would, in a measure, be counteracted by the neglect of the civic authorities in some of the essentials of the city beautiful. It seems absurd to talk of a city driveway, while caterpillars are allowed to breed unmolested, to multiply and crawl all over the city.

The clergy, who are striving to rearouse an interest in the Boy Scout movement, might more usefully take the boys out in the proper season to burn caterpillars. In this way they would be instructing the boys in the city beautiful idea and at the same time demonstrating the boasted merits of the Scout movement.

Some children seem to have no notion of what respect for the property of others means. I had my own lawn trampled and flowers broken, requiring half an hour of hard work to repair. I talked kindly to the two boys (not children) guilty of the vandalism, but they seemed totally devoid of understanding that the property of others should be respected. They sat by and did not even offer to help me repair the damage. These boys belonged to parents whose names would not look well in print in this connection.

The Examiner is to be commended for its valiant efforts to arouse the public to an interest in the city beautiful. It puts the matter truthfully by saying, "When we get this condition of destroying things cured, we can then, with reasonable prospect of permanent results, have encouragement, individually and collectively, as citizens, to contribute our share to city beautification."

ANOTHER ORATORIO WILL BE STUDIED

By the Peterboro' Choral Society--Mendelssohn's St. Paul

At the first meeting of the Executive Committee held on Tuesday evening, it was decided that the Peterborough Choral Society would continue to study Oratorio next season. The work chosen is "Mendelssohn's" St. Paul.

All who are familiar with this oratorio will welcome the opportunity of hearing it in Peterborough. The society will run a Moonlight excursion on Friday, July 10th. This will afford an opportunity for old and new members and friends to meet at least once during the summer months.

Accident at Omemee Car Turned Turtle

Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock an automobile with three male occupants dashed through the Village at Omemee at a somewhat reckless speed and later on came to grief a few miles out, when the machine turned turtle and threw the driver and his friends high sky.

Very few details of the accident are to hand, but it is understood that the car was running under the license number of 7372. The mishap took place on the level, and it could be seen that the car pursued a zig-zag course before turning over.

Dr. Earl, of Omemee, was summoned and administered medical assistance, but the injuries were few, the occupants escaping with a few minor brtuises and scratches. — Lindsay Warder.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Senior Y War Canoe crew will have a practice to-night, leaving Rye's boathouse at 7:30, and a good turn-out is asked for.

The first round of the Y Tennis Tournament for the business men and Seniors must be played by Saturday, June 13th, and as few of the games have been played the players had better get busy.

The Employed Boys had their first trip in the war canoe last night.

Mr. Carson, the new physical director for the Y. M. C. A., who is coming from Winnipeg, will be here next week.

It is the intention of the Y.M.C.A. to run a big aquatic meet in July, some time, under the direction of Mr. Carson. The particulars will be announced later.

To-night there will be a supper at the Y.M.C.A. at 6.30 for the men who have taken part in the financial canvas to raise funds for the Association. A full report of the campaign will be given, after which the Board of Directors will meet.

BRITISH MAILS.

Mail for transmission to Europe, is despatched from this city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and matter is received until midnight. Four mails a day are closed out at the Post Office, for transhipment to Great Britain. d-tf.

FAITHFUL AND LONG SERVICE RECOGNIZED

Mr. Wm. Cowie Object of Address and Presentation by Examiner Employees

Faithful service of thirty years in one capacity, and his retirement, were the case of Mr. William Cowie, foreman of the Bindery Department of The Examiner, being honoured by the employees of The Examiner. He was presented by the employees with the following address, which tells in part what Mr. Cowie's services have been and how his retirement is regretted. The address was accompanied with the gift of a club bag and a set of amber-mounted pipes. Mr. Cowie made a suitable reply to the following address:

Dear Mr. Cowie:

The employees of The Examiner are sorry on our own account to hear that you intend retiring from the employment of The Examiner after a faithful service of thirty years. Not only we ourselves, but thousands of the patrons of The Examiner know how faithful and effective that service has been as expressed in the splendid work that has passed through your hands to theirs.

In one sense yours has been a service to literature — possibly no man in Canada has made more books than you have done and certainly no man has made them better.

Your business as a binder has not only made strong the ties between The Examiner and the public, but added to your professional work, your personal relations to your fellow employees have made binding ties between us that we now see severed with the greatest regret and we hope that you will also share this regret.

We have learned to esteem and respect you and it is more mere form of politeness to say that we are deeply sorry to have you go from amongst us. We are glad to know that you are to remain a citizen of Peterborough, where we hope you will spend many happy years of well earned rest.

In token of our good wishes, and in memory of old delightful associations, we ask your acceptance of this gift, which carries with it our best wishes for your future happiness.

Signed on behalf of the Examiner Employees.

In Jealous Rage Disfigures Wife

ROCHESTER, June 10. — Enraged because his wife, from whom he had been separated, refused to return and live with him, Tony Troeta, 23 years old, of 15 Concord Street, slashed the young woman four times about the face yesterday morning, so that she is now at the Homeopathic Hospital in a serious condition.

Troeta himself was arrested at 7.10 o'clock yesterday morning by Motorcycle Patrolman Otto, of the Franklin Street station, and arraigned in Police Court upon a charge of assault with intent to kill. He at first said that he did not understand the charge, but when it was explained to him by Interpreter Casolare, pleaded guilty. Judge Gillette ordered him held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Mrs. Troeta, who goes by her maiden name of Josephine Panzica, and lived at 9 Wait Street, boarded a Clinton Avenue car shortly before 7 o'clock yesterday morning to go to the Clark Preserving Company's factory in Hollenbeck Street, where she was employed. Her husband, who had been waiting for her, also took the car, and sat across the aisle from her.

The young woman became frightened, and did not leave the car until the end of the line was reached, at Norton street. Her husband followed her as she did so, and before anyone could intervene drew a razor and slashed her four times. Two of the cuts were across the cheeks, one over the eye, and one across the nose.

Patrolman Otto, who heard about the affair, arrived as the crowd was pursuing Troeta, who had thrown away his razor after the cutting.

Although the charge was assault in the first degree, the young woman being seriously, but not fatally injured, it is not likely that her husband intended to kill her. The slashing across the face is frequent in affairs of this sort, the intention being to destroy the good looks of the woman who has aroused jealousy.

Asks $5000 For Loss Of Teeth

ROCHESTER, N.Y., JUNE 10 — A claim for $5,000 against the City of Rochester was filed in the City Clerk's office yesterday morning by Amilie Bruno, of 118 Electric Avenue. The claimant says that she tripped over a piece of wire netting which was fastened to the ground in Park Avenue, near Westminster Road and fell to the pavement.

Two upper front teeth were knocked out, two upper front teeth were loosened, two gold crowns on two lower teeth were knocked off, one upper tooth penetrated the upper lip, causing a laceration, her back and arms were wrenched and bruised and will be permanently disfigured, declares the claimant. She says the City was negligent in permitting the wire netting to be in the street.

WHAT IS SUBSTANCE?

"The Substance of Things Hoped For, the Evidence of Things Not Seen"

Substance (substare) means that which stands under, or underlies, the underlying quality of essence of things. The world considers "matter" as the real essence of things, and this "substantial," to most persons, conveys the thought of something solid and tangible to the material senses. Substance and things material have become almost synonymous terms.

In the text-book of Christian Science, Mrs. Eddy has returned to the correct use of the word in declaring that "God is substance." God is also Spirit, Mind and Truth. It is to the realm of the spiritual and mental that we must look to find the underlying essence of the whole universe. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews knew this when he said, "The worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." Cause is not perceived by the so-called physical senses. Substance may be discerned by the understanding; it cannot be grasped by the hand.

The sculptor sees the completed work in thought before it is imaged forth in clay. The statue pre-exists as an idea before it can take on form. The substance or that which underlies the completed beauty of the work of art is a thought. Every fact of true being, to which man may look, for which man may hope, already exists in the divine Mind which is Truth. It is for man to reflect in understanding and bring out in experience these qualities of being which partake of the divine substance of Spirit.

To many this positing of all things in the mental seems difficult to understand simply because they have been trained to look to a so-called "substance-matter." Poincare, the great French mathematician and philosopher, upheld the claims of idealism in the following terms: "All that is not thought is pure nothingness; since we can think only thought and all the words we use to speak of things can express only thoughts; to say there is something other than thought is therefore to make an affirmation that can have no meaning." This is no new idea, for many of the world's greatest thinkers have perceived that only in the mental can a rational explanation of existence be found. But the statement that all is mental is but the beginning. Next comes the question, "What are you going to do about it?" If Mind is substance this fact must have some immediate and practical effect on the conduct of life, and it is here that Christian Science stands out from all other statements of idealism in that it demonstrates the truth of its statement. It makes the life of the Christian Scientist his laboratory in which he proves the great thesis that Mind, Spirit, is substance.

Christian Science declares that all the activity of men and women is the expression of embodiment of a state of consciousness. Consequently it becomes of the highest importance to oversee of what the content of consciousness shall consist. Experience shows that the nearer consciousness approaches to the nature of God, the source of all being, the more merely bring out the harmony that God has decreed for His children. "God's thoughts are perfect and eternal, are substance and Life." God is Truth. To reflect Truth in consciousness is to partake of spiritual and true being.

Jesus illustrated this throughout the three years of his ministry. His repeated affirmation of man's oneness with God was a cause for offence to those who allowed man no source of being but matter, but the vindication of his claim lay in his healing acts which were the revelation of present good to those whose false point of view had plunged them into trouble. Since substance is Mind, Spirit, he employed mental means to restore the broken lives, rousing the sufferers to a vivid consciousness of the power of God, good. To the sick man at the Pool of Bethesda he hinted that it was sinful thought that had brought him to an evil pass, and that purer thinking would be his safeguard in the future. His own consciousness was so filled with the truth that he never met a situation too difficult for him to surmount.

It is this forgotten, practical import of Jesus' teaching concerning the true substance of man's being that Mrs. Eddy has restored to humanity in Christian Science. Since the right understanding of the underlying qualities of being brought with it such mighty power in Jesus' case, it must bring in proportion to spiritual growth the same power for good to each one who strives for a like understanding. The history of Christian Science is the history of such a carrying on of the healing work initiated by Jesus. Every such demonstration of good is a bringing into actual, present manifestation the divine substance of God, who is also Love.

This being the mighty result of a changed viewpoint from so-called substance-matter to the understanding of the true substance of Spirit, proof (the present demonstration) going hand in hand with more harmonious living, it seems strange that any should hesitate to declare themselves on the side of Spirit. But if false education is tenacious, it is not immortal. The ever-increasing body of proof presented by Christian Science must gain a proportionately augmented attention on the part of society. In Proverbs, understanding puts forth her voice and cries, "I lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment; that I may cause those that love me to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures."—Boston Monitor.

HOLIDAYS AHEAD!

You will soon be collecting the impediments for the annual jaunt to the lakes. May we suggest that you this year discard the old, smoking, smouldering, heart-breaking, second-hand stove, and replace it with the modern, efficient, always ready

INSPIRATIONAL SUCCESS

Price McKinney, Iron Ore Millionaire, Was Ready as Opportunity Knocked at His Door

(By Herbert Corey.)

Price McKinney offered to bet $2,500,000 in gold against $100,000,000 in prospect. It was the greatest gambling proposition made in this generation. McKinney began as a $7 a week stenographer in Cleveland, Ohio.

Three months ago Villa, the bandit general of Mexico, seized the properties of the Terrazas family, the land barons of Chihuahua. The value of these properties has only been roughly estimated. Those who who travelled over the fertile leagues of the Terrazas believe that $100,000,000 would not be too great a valuation. The Mexican rebels announced their intention of confiscating all the Terrazas properties, inasmuch as the Terrazas had secured these properties in high handed fashion.

"I will pay to the Constitutionalist government of Mexico $2,500,000 for a quit claim to the Terrazas estate," offered McKinney, "and take my chance of getting it."

It was a long shot he asked for. It involved primarily the complete success of the Constitutionalist cause, because no constitutionalist bargain would be ratified if the Huertistas were in power. It involved, secondarily, a ratification of that bargain by the Mexican congress, and finally an acceptance of that ratification by the courts. And McKinney would be under suspicion from the beginning of acting for the Terrazas family rather than as a free agent, although no one questioned that he offered his own gold.

Know Him on the Lakes.

McKinney is the head of the Corrigan-McKinney Company, the greatest independent ore producers on the Great Lakes. That company owned the first great fleet of ore carriers ever built. Its vessels may be seen wherever on the lakes there is a dock and a clam-shell crane for ore handling. The company's interests in the Gogebic and Mesaba ranges in Michigan and Minnesota are enormous. At one time it was all McKinney could do to hold his $7-a-week job.

His father was a well known resident of Cincinnati. Conservative enough in dealing in real estate, he was a high-rolling speculator in other lines. When the boy grew old enough to need tailoriest clothes and spending money his father suggested that he arrange to get these luxuries for himself. He took a four months' course in a business college and launched himself confidently upon a world of toil. Judge John F. Nielan of Hamilton, Ohio, was his first employer. At this time, the young Mr. McKinney was entirely certain that he was a first-rate stenographer.

"He was a good stenographer, too," Judge Nielan used to say. "I never saw a boy that could write shorthand faster than Price could. He had a good memory, too. Lots of times he could remember almost every word he had written.

Necessity made McKinney over into a good stenographer. He needed the $7. When he could take Nielan's dictation accurately, sprinkled as it was with legal terms, and had assured himself that the future held only $7 a week for him he determined to emigrate. He was a slender, brown-eyed, black-haired youth, confident in fact, but rather diffident in manner. He dressed as well as financial conditions would permit and thoroughly enjoyed himself. There is no record that he had saved more than enough money than was needed for his fare to Cleveland. He found employment as a stenographer in the offices of the Corrigan Iron Company.

His imagination was aroused in the new environment. Bounded by a county court house, a Sunday evening parlour, a row of law books, and a pair of dancing slippers, he had never troubled himself to think or to plan while in Hamilton. In the larger city opportunity danced before his eyes. He saw the possibilities of the ore-carrying business, then developing on the great lakes. Because he was interested he crammed himself with facts. One day he sat at Judge Corrigan's elbow taking letters.

When He Started Up.

"Who," said the great man, fretfully, "can tell me whether there is an ore dock at Wind City?"

"I can," said McKinney, respectfully. "There is."

"How do you know?" roared Corrigan.

"Because I've looked it up," was the reply.

Corrigan began to rely on his information. McKinney didn't know any law, and Corrigan was a great lawyer. But McKinney did know certain purely physical facts. He was just cluttered up with them. He was knew rates and the names of captains, and the qualities of anchorages, and the chemical constituents of this ore and that. He was the One Thousand Things You Ought to Know in shoe leather. And he was always right. He saved the great man hours of time each day. So that he was admitted to a minor—a very minor—partnership.

Then came romance. Judge Corrigan invited his most minor partner to dine with him one day, and Miss Corrigan came into the room. From that moment important facts upon the iron ore industry and cargo-carrying by steam took a position in the rear of Mr. McKinney's mind. By and by they were married. In course of time the company became the Corrigan-McKinney company, and with the sudden expansion of the iron and steel industry in the Carnegie period that company flourished beyond all hope. To-day McKinney's interests in mines and ranches in Mexico are as great as those of any other American individual. He looks forward to the time when the Mexican ore deposits will be called on to supplant the more easily reached ore of the north.

McKinney was successful because—when he had finally awakened from that $7-a-week lethargy—he took advantage of the chance that lay nearest. Every other clerk in the Corrigan offices might have foreseen, as he did, what the ore carrying business on the lakes would grow into. But no clerk did.

Threw Wreath on Water Where The Empress Sank

A report in another column of the paper refers to Bandmaster Perryer, of the Peterborough Salvation Army Corps Band. In passing the scene of the sinking of the Empress he dropped a wreath on the water. His mother was one of those who went down with the vessel and her body was not recovered.

LIVELY SCRAP ON CHARLOTTE ST R T

A scrap on Charlotte Street this morning between a G.T.R. employee and a foreman on the street paving work provided a merry mill for quite a little audience. The G. T. R. man seemed to be getting the better of the struggle, when a labourer jumped in to help his boss, grabbed the G.T.R. man's leg and began running around the street with it. Naturally, this attack disconcerted the railway representative and the decision went in favour of the combined Foley and Gleason forces, as represented by this particular foreman and concrete spreader.

He Got His Price.

Tody Hamilton had an experience with an editor of a weekly paper in Michigan when he was a general press representative with the Barnum & Bailey show that gave him a new view of finance.

The big show was billed to appear at Owosso, Mich., and the contract agent with the No. 1 advertising car had failed to come to terms with the editor of a weekly at a little junction about 20 miles distant. Hamilton went to the little town, sought out the editor and prepared copy for a double column display advertisement.

"I'll give you $10 and 20 tickets for two weeks' service in your paper, two columns, mostly cuts," said Hamilton to the editor.

"Oh, no, you won't! You'll give me $63. The advertisement won't go!" replied the editor coolly.

"Sixty-three dollars! Great Scott!" roared Hamilton. "That's more than your infernal paper is worth. I never give more than $10 and 20 tickets for our stuff in any country weekly. Man' you're crazy, stark mad!"

All efforts at persuasion failed. The editor remained obdurate. It was $63 or nothing. Finally in despair Hamilton explained:

"Why do you make it $63? You might as well make it $163. It's just as unreasonable."

"I'll tell you, my friend," replied the editor calmly. "I have a note coming due shortly for just that amount. And you have got to pay it."

Hamilton did for he needed the advertisement in that particular weekly. And the editor knew it.

SUFFS BLEW UP STONE ON WHICH JACOB DREAMED

No Respect for Anything—Put Bomb Under the Coronation-Chair in the Abbey

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 11.—Suffragettes today exploded a bomb under the famous coronation chair in Westminster Abbey. The Scone stone, which is a historical relic, and part of the chair was broken by the explosion and considerable damage done to the interior of the sacred abbey. Nobody was hurt. The explosion was heard in the Parliament Buildings not far away and caused great excitement. No arrests have yet been made. At the time of the explosion this afternoon, Hon. Reginald McKenna was making a speech in the Commons on the suffragette question.

Business Man Made Sad By Sight of Caterpillars

A prominent business man spoke regretfully to-day of the condition of some of the finest trees in the west end of the city under hundreds of caterpillars. It seems useless to say anything now. The City Fathers and the ratepayers were urged to get busy before the tents formed, and it seems useless to mention the present condition. About the only salutary lesson would be a widespread destruction of the trees by the caterpillars in order that they may be appreciated in future years as a destructive agent that needs the most careful attention.

ASKS FOR INFORMATION

Editor Daily Examiner:

Dear Sir,—There are two things which I should like to get some light upon. You have certainly given us some information about the Duke and his late visit to Peterborough, but I, and I expect a great many others now living, saw his brother, the late King Edward then, in 1860, I believe, Prince of Wales. He came, I believe, direct from Cobourg here across Rice Lake. One of the attractions here then was a huge pile of lumber, or, rather, two—one on each side of the street arched over, and perhaps other attractions which you can recall. Fifty-four years has made a change—then, all horses in procession; now autos only. Perhaps many changes which you can recall.

The other event which I should like light upon is this party gathering here, with all the trouble involved, to take a trip on Sabbath first, June 14th. Do we forget the words, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy?" Did not God's ancient people suffer for neglecting those commands? Do we not still suffer when we fail to obey? Is there not a promise in our favour if we keep the command? Read Isa., 58: 13-14.

Since coming to this city I have been convinced many times that I was with a Bible-loving, God-fearing people. Being on the executive, I am glad to be able to say every meeting, with the exception at the convention when G. A. Gillespie was brought out, was opened with prayer. Who is it that dare call those young people to gather on the Sabbath day. Kindly explain!

ADDITION TO THE FIRE EQUIPMENT

A new fire waggon has been added to the quipment of the local Fire Department. The new waggon was just completed last night and made its maiden trip this morning, when its quality was demonstrated to the satisfaction of Chief Howard. The waggon was built at Fitzgerald's and is to be used for exercising the horses every day. It is strong in construction and handsome in appearance and is a much more presentable and serviceable piece of apparatus than the waggon formerly used for this purpose.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MOSSOM BOYD

The remains of the late Mossom Boyd, of Philadelphia, who passed away a few days ago in that city, arrived in Peterborough at noon, today and were taken to St. John's Anglican Church. The funeral was held this afternoon, and the large number of prominent men who attended gave evidence of the high respect in which the deceased gentleman was held, and of his influence upon the community.

The funeral was held from St. John's Church to the Little Lake cemetery, shortly after noon to-day. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Canon Davidson, the Rev. Dr. Symonds, of Montreal, and the Rev. Mr. Greaves, of Bobcaygeon. The pall-bearers were Mr. J. G. Edwards, of Lindsay, and Messrs. W. T. Comber, A. E. Bottum, J. R. Moyle, W. Hickson, W. C. Moore, of Bobcaygeon.

Mrs. Boyd, widow of the deceased gentleman, and her four children, Miss Mildred Boyd, Messrs. Cust, Laurie and W. W. Boyd, were in the city for the funeral, as well as Mr. W. T. Boyd, brother of the late Mossom Boyd, and his three sons, Thornton, Herbert and Gardner.

ICE CREAM RECIPES

Would you kindly insert in your valuable paper recipes for making ice cream in small quantities at home?—E. G Hocheiaga Co., Que.

When pure cream is used for making ice cream half the number of quarts that the can will hold will be sufficient as the beater will make it light and spongy so that it will nearly fill the can. When using milk the can may be three-fourths filled:

To make ice cream from pure cream dissolve in two quarts of pure fresh cream, 12 to 14 ounces of best white sugar, flavor with whatever flavoring you desire, strain into the freezing can and freeze. Another method is to take one pint milk, yolks of two eggs, six ounces sugar, one tablespoon of corn starch; scald until it thickens. Add to this when cool, one pint whipped cream and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Sweeten, flavor and freeze.

If one desires to make ice cream without using cream take two quarts of rich milk, bring to the boiling point, stir in two tablespoons of arrowroot or corn starch previously rubbed smooth in a cupful of cold milk. Remove from the fire, add four eggs and three-quarters of a pound of sugar well beaten together. Stir all well together and then set aside to cool. Flavor and freeze.

The income from the farm cannot be used to better advantage than in making home life comfortable and pleasant. Indeed, money has little utility if it does not bring those higher things of life that make us better citizens and more efficient workers in the earthly vineyard.

There is no more desirable improvement in our country homes than water under pressure for culinary, lavatory and bath. The expense is so small when compared to the advantages to be had in securing it, that the wonder is why more homes are not supplied. It must be that we are not as much interested in the comfort and convenience of the home as we are about the crops and the live stock.

When the weather is warm and dry, the demand for home water works is more urgent. The tired housewife finds her strength failing, but she is forced to carry water into the kitchen, often drawing it from a deep well with rope and pulley. The laundry work is a problem because water is inconvenient and the bath has been neglected. The farm hands also neglect their personal appearance and comfort, since bathing facilities are inadequate.

A system of waterworks not only relieves the overworked mother of drudgery, but it affords an opportunity for teaching the children cleanliness and care in their personal appearance and the principles of economic household administration.

The reservoir, power, pipes and fixtures for the installation of waterworks in the country home are not expensive and most of the necessary labor can often be performed by the farm hands. The work of plumbing may be done in wet weather when the ordinary work in the fields can not be done.

Times have changed and the standard of living increased. Every mother has an ambition to rear her children under healthful environment and she should have the cooperation of her husband in making home life elevating. To get the most out of farm life and to enjoy the comforts of the home, nothing contributes more to this end than a home waterworks system.—Maritime Farmer.

Beauty as well as utility should mark the home improvements.

BREAKFAST MOST IMPORTANT MEAL

"A well-known physician once told me," said a housekeeper, "that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. He explained that the system had been longest without food at this time and therefore more care must be taken to eat the proper things and in the right quantities than at other meals.

"Now I don't know whether this is right from the medical standpoint or not," she continued, "but I suppose it is, because he was a famous doctor, but I do know that it pays a housekeeper to be very careful of the appearance of her breakfast table. I have found that in the mornings most persons who are at all temperamental have very 'finicky' appetites, and dishes that are not spotless, or food untidily served, no matter how wholesome or how well cooked, or, worst of all, a soiled tablecloth, will add to this unfortunate state.

"I now make it a special point to see that all the linen used at breakfast is fresh and snowy white; that the tea, coffee, or cocoa is nicely made; that the whole meal is neatly served, and that some flowers, or if this is impossible, a dish of fruit, is set in the centre of the table."

The experience of this housekeeper is by no means an uncommon one. A nicely laid, appetising breakfast is usually heartily partaken of, and the system well nourished at the beginning of the day is a decided promoter of good temper and harmony with one's surroundings throughout the entire day. And if the business day proves to be a hard one this cheerfulness gives to person the qualities necessary to meet trials and rebuffs without too great a drain upon the nervous system. On the other hand, a soiled tablecloth, tough, cold toast, weak tea, bitter coffee, or any of the other common breakfast ills, are sufficient to derange both temper and digestion and leave one but illy prepared to meet the exigencies of a business day.

No matter how much help a housekeeper has, or how competent she esteems them, it is a wise thing for her to go to the dining-room before the family is summoned to the meal and run her eye over the table to see that everything is in order. By doing this she may some day perform a much greater service for some member than she dreams of, because a good breakfast will do more than anything else in her power to enable them to go forth to their daily toil well equipped and ready.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

For grit in the eye apply a drop or two of castor oil; it relieves the irritation.

When ironing it is a very good plan to get a clean brick, a white one if possible, as a stand. The iron will retain heat much longer than if an open iron stand be used.

Corks may be made airtight and watertight by keeping them immersed in oil for five minutes.

Pickles may be kept from becoming mouldy by laying a little bag of mustard on the top of the pickle-jar.

A little vinegar placed in the rinsing water on washing day will prevent the hands from becoming rough and chapped.

WEDDING BELLS

WILKINSON—DUNCAN.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon at four o'clock when Miss Francis Rebecca Duncan was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Marshall Wilkinson, of Fair Springs, Cavan. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray Street Baptist Church, in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives, and the bride, who was unattended, was given away by Mr. T. G. Gillespie.

After the wedding the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip, and on their return will reside at Fair Springs, Cavan. The bride was the recipient of a large number of useful and costly gifts, and was remembered not only by friends in the city, but by those in Hamilton, Toronto, Lindsay, and other outside places.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Prof. W. W. Swanson, of Queen's writes as follows in the Journal of Commerce, Montreal:

Alfred D. Woodruff, food expert of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, delivered recently an able address before the New York Academy of Medicine, pointing out some of the causes for the high cost of living. He had some facts and figures, bearing upon the slip-shod methods of doing business on the part of the consumer, which he presented with effect.

He began his address with the remark that most investigations of the problem of the high cost of living were of the "paste and scissors" kind. Voluminous reports had been written on the question, until we have had nothing but reports and reports, which have ultimately reached the scrap heap.

Mr. Woodruff did not claim to possess the knowledge that would ultimately solve this all-important subject, but he did claim that it was possible for the consumer to so materially cut the high cost of living that at least a long step will have been taken in the right direction. He maintained that it was largely a matter of education; and that, until the consumer was willing to give the same thought and attention to this matter the high cost of living would continue to increase rather than decrease, notwithstanding the possibility of having lower wholesale costs.

Perhaps we have been giving entirely too much attention to, and laying too much stress upon the importance of remedying the great evils that exist between the producer and the wholesaler, and which need to be righted—such matters as related to transportation, storage, the commission merchant and so forth. But there yet remains a great work for the consumer to do himself.

The retailer at present, Mr. Woodruff pointed out, is able to purchase granulated sugar at $3.80 per hundred pounds; fresh laid eggs at 22c per dozen; full cream cheese at 14 cents per pound; New York State sea beans at $3.62 per one hundred pounds; rolled oats at $2.12 per 90-pound bag; teas of a good grade at 18 cents per pound; coffee at 16 cents per pound—and so on through a long list of staple commodities. Why does the retailer add to these costs 40 to 60 per cent. profit? Because the consumer forces the retailer to do so.

First the consumer make unusual demands on the retailer in relation to delivery. The same may be said as to the number of clerks which he is obliged to keep; the credit system; goods in season and out of season, and in some cases, trading stamps, premiums, etc. The retailer has a right to a legitimate profit, but, in most cases, not less than 25 per cent could be deducted from his gross profits.

If the housewife would only become as familiar with this all-important subject as she is with matters of much less importance—such as dress, teas, tango parties, etc.—much could be done to reduce the cost of living. She will then be competent to judge of the quality of the foodstuffs she is using; second, she will provide adequate facilities for testing for short weights and measures; third, she will not use the hit and miss system of buying, that is making purchases of articles when they are needed, and in quantities sufficient for immediate needs alone. Some families lose more in a month through the payment of exorbitant prices for food products in vest-pocket quantities, than they would have to pay in rent for enough larger space to live in to enable them to buy food supplies in quantities sufficient to last them a few days or even weeks.

Then the housewife must learn to pay cash. The credit system is responsible for more failures than in any other thing. Mr. Woodruff figures out that in New York City 30 per cent. pay their bills promptly in 30 days; 28 per cent. take from one to three months to pay; 40 per cent never pay in full, and 2 per cent never pay at all. The consumer should also realize that trading stamps and other systems of so-called prizes add from 2½ to 3 per cent to the retail cost.

The consumer must also be able to go to the market and select such cuts of meat as are flourishing, and which taste as well, and cost considerably less than the dearer cuts. With proper thought and planning the housewife will eliminate from her ordinary stores, the extremely high-priced prepared, or semi-prepared foods which are of doubtful nutritive value.

In other words the housewife must begin to practice those reasonable economics that are now open to her. She must join the thrifty. This possible reduction in food prices is exceedingly more important to the masses than lower street car fares, or reduced rates for gas, water or electric light. And what is more important, it already lies within the grasp of the consumer. A saving of 20 per cent. may mean to the consumer the difference between deficit and surplus in the total family account at the end of the year. The proposals put forth by Mr. Woodruff are very valuable, and well merit the earnest thought and earnest investigation of both the consumer and the student of the problem.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SERVICE

RAISING FOWL

By S. E. Wallace

Young turkeys are harder to raise than chicks or ducklings, and in order to succeed with them more pains must be taken to study their nature and habits.

The natural tendency of the turkey is to roost where night overtakes it, and in time the wild animals are apt to diminish the flock.

This can be avoided by an inexpensively constructed roosting place, which can be made with woven-wire netting, a few posts and a roof of tarred paper, where the birds can be housed at night.

The young birds can be trained to come up regularly at about four o'clock to be fed, when they can easily be driven into the roosting-place for the night.

An earthen floor can be laid in this pen, but it must be kept clean. The majority of failures are, no doubt, due to lack of proper knowledge or to carelessness.

In many instances, where the young are hatched by chicken hens, the foster-mother is cooped and the little ones deprived of their liberty, and fed almost entirely on wheat or grain of some sort, which alone is enough to cause the poults to die.

They must have more of a vegetable diet, and even in this case judgment must be exercised.

Turn the hen loose with the little ones, and let them pick what they most relish, giving them a little meal or wheat to coax them home and also to quicken their growth.

In picking stock from which to start, make your calculation that some are wild and some are tame.

The Bronze variety is very desirable for the market on account of its size and the sweet flavor of its meat. But on account of its wild, roving disposition this variety is hard to raise. The birds nearly always hide their nests, and perhaps will not be seen for a month or two at hatching season.

The White Hollands are more domesticated, and are more apt to make their nests about the barn and outbuildings, as chickens do. They are also good layers, having a record of as high as ten eggs each at one clutch. They are probably a little harder to raise than the Bourbon Reds, which, by the way, are handsome birds, but do not become quite so tame. All turkeys are peculiar about their nests, and when they once select the location they must not be disturbed.

"If The Teeth Are Bad The Boy Is Bad" Says Juvenile Asylum Head

Blames Defective Teeth for Abnormality and Declares Dentist is Greatest Influence for Good.

SO-CALLED BADNESS

NEW YORK, June 10—Charles D. Hilles, President of the New York Juvenile Association, says he believes that much of the so-called badness in boys is due primarily to decayed teeth and the consequent inability to masticate properly their food. He bases his conclusions on observations of boys sent as delinquents to the Children's Village at Dobbs Ferry, where an average of 350 youngsters are getting a chance to become self-respecting citizens.

Mr. Hilles declares that 91 per cent of the boys recived suffer from bad teeth and that after two years of care with a dentist, together with practice in the gentle art of using a tooth brush the boys are turned out 90 per cent. good instead of 90 per cent. bad. Therefore, Mr. Hilles, who has long devoted himself to the reformation of children who haven't had half a show in life, says he is convinced that the dentist is, after all, the real kind of doctor that the great majority of "delinquent" boys need in the straightening out of tummy tangles and other physical disorders that have a tendency ot start them on the wrong mora slant.

"Acting upon the premise that the bad by is generally a sick boy" Mr. Hiles said yesterday: "we determined some time ago to mintain a thorough physical study of the youngsters sent ot us. We found our boys to be sick and sixtyfive of them were anaemic —the result of poor food and irregular habits of living. To this half-starved condition could be attributed the waywardness and apparent viciousness of the boys.

Bad Teeth Cause Trouble.

Mr. Hilles said the first investigation dealt with 634 boys, of whom fifty-two—a little more than 9 per cent. —were free from some kind of physical abnormality. The examinations proved that most of the troubles from which the boys suffered came from defective teeth.

"Immediately upon admission to the Children's Village," he continued, "the boy is sent to the dentist, who makes a searching examination of his teeth. All possible repairs are made; hopelessly decayed teeth are extracted; those less seriously diseased are filled and crowned. Finally there is a thorough cleaning of the teeth. Then the boy is sent to his room with a tooth brush and with paste. He experiences so much relief and experiences it so quickly that always the boy is glad to give to his mouth and to his teeth the necessary attention.

"Regularly every six months each boy in the village visits the dentist. Never again as long as he is with us is he permitted to suffer because his teeth lack attention.

Dentist Greatest Aid.

"By the time the boy has completed his two years in the Children's Village—that is the average length of his stay—he has approached the average for his years in size and weight. Every spring the village sends a squad of boys into the West, where amid new surroundings and forgetting the stigma of the past they begin a useful life in the open country. Remembering that about 91 per cent. of the boys are sub-normal when they come to us, that they are moral delinquents, physical degenerates and mental defectives, it is a thorough demonstration, I believe, that the dentist is the greatest influence for good known to us, the more than 90 per cent. of our boys make good and are successful after they leave us."

Mr. Hilles told of one boy of whom the management is justly proud. When the boy entered the village three years ago he had been stamped as a thorough delinquent. He had had teeth and for years had been unable to masticate his food without pain. The dentist corrected his teeth, he began to improve at once and last year he took first prize in the village school for general excellence in his work. He has been discharged as an employee, drawing a fair salary. Twice a week he comes to New York to attend night school.

"That boy is going to make his mark in the world," Mr. Hilles said. "He is in his line a thoroughly competent workman—he is better than a workman—he is a student and is making a profession of what another boy would regard as a trade. It is impossible to estimate the good accomplished in that boy's case by the dentist.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

Rash on Legs and Back, Scratching Irritated Breaking Out. Used Cuticura Ointment. Disease Vanished.

Kentville, N. S.—"For about five years I was bothered with a light rash which would appear most heavily on my legs and back. This troubled me most in the spring of the year. They said it was eczema. The eczema itched and burned and my scratching irritated the breaking out. After it broke out I could not obtain more than three hours' sleep each night it pained me so. My legs and back were a solid mass of itching sores.

"I was given some salve and after using this preparation about a week the disease became worse and I could not obtain any rest at night. I used all the patent preparations on the market but they only seemed to increase the suffering and afforded me no relief whatever. About this time a friend recommended Cuticura Ointment to me. However, I had lost faith in all remedies and told him so, but he insisted that I try Cuticura Ointment so I purchased a box. The first application gave relief and in about a week the sores were healing and I was able to obtain a good night's rest, the first I had enjoyed for many months. I continued the treatment for another month and by that time all signs of the disease had vanished." (Signed) Willard F. Allen, May 16, 1913.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp that torture, itch, burn, scale, and destroy sleep. Sold everywhere. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

IN ANSWER TO A LOCAL OPTION POEM.

A Local Option Poem of mirth
Condemns good men upon the earth.
Except the Local Option class,
Other good men are only trash.
Liquor drinking is bad, I'm sure.
That Local Option may not cure;
The marriage feast must have been fine,
Christ turneth water into wine.

God made the Devil, and made hell.
So that all men would fear him well.
And ministers to preach His word,
Not politics that is absurd.
At Christ's last supper, He did dine,
His Body was both bread and wine;
The license law leaves all men free,
To drink liquor or leave it be.

Make liquor one dollar a glass,
Then working men might let it pass.
All churches well might pay double,
That stir political trouble;
Politicians will make bubble.
To catch votes, they twist and wobble.
A temperance measure without gain
Makes men that are wise seem insane.

Total abstainers are good
That don't use liquor in their food,
Or steal or sneak behind the bar,
Or stir up political war.
Church politics, church politics,
That puts your churches in a fix,
Church politics, church politics,
That makes men's conscience full of pricks.

Tax tobacco and liquor high,
And all nuisance under the sky.
Tobacco smoke is gaining ground
Upon the streets and all around.
Such taxes would bring revenue
To pay for schools and teachers too.
All churches should preach God's good word,
Not politics that is absurd.

June 11th, 1914.

The above poem is some of my views at this juncture.

Don't Swat That Fly
Mashing flies is unsanitary and dangerous because it always leaves the disease germs to be distributed through the house when dry.
WILSON'S FLY PADS kill both flies and disease germs, and they kill them all.
Just think of it! One ten-cent packet of WILSON'S FLY PADS has actually killed a bushel of flies.
No other fly killer gives results at all approaching this.
All druggists and grocers sell WILSON'S FLY PADS.

Review of The Grocery Market

The grocery market situation is reviewed as follows in this week's issue of Canadian Grocer:—

Office of Publication,
Toronto, June 11, 1914.

From this time forward until the threshers are through, a big factor in business will be the crops, and particularly the crops of Western Canada, for that country is so linked up with the general interests of the Dominion, both in the wholesale and the manufacturing lines, that improved conditions will have the same influence for the better as the falling off in demand had to the contrary some time ago. The present outlook could hardly be more favourable, according to reports from reliable sources, and the heavy rains last week had a wonderful effect. That there is now little fear but the hail storms is the tenor of the advices, and in the markets the estimates are put at 200,000,000 bushels.

Favourable reports from the West and a bullish summary on United States conditions, have had their effect. Millers are finding trade quiet, but export business may now pick up, although with stocks on hand there appears to be a disinclination on the part of foreign buyers to raise the bids to an even line.

In sugar there have been a reaction following several weeks of what one dealer describes as the heaviest buying, both by wholesale and retailers in the history of Toronto. Speculators are now reported to be taking profits, and with the summer weather demand, renewed strength may be looked for when this supply is exhausted. In British Columbia there is reported to be some competition on between the local and Chinese refiners with the result that there has been a reduction of 50c.

The improvement in the quality of butter and cheese has led to competition on the part of packers with the result that prices have gone up to such an extent that there is little interest in export business. It is reported, however, that some smuggling has been done to the American markets.

The outlook for the fruit and vegetable crop and the extent of the acreage are the factors of interest now in the canned goods trade. Although there is no definite information, it is understood that there has been a big reduction in the acreage. A continuance of hot, dry weather would mean quick ripening and a short season for strawberries and some of the vegetables.

There have been reports of damage to the broom corn crop in the south, but it is too early to predict the effect of this as yet.

DOCTORS NO LUXURY THERE.

Costs Only 60 Cents in Prague, Austria, to Have Physician Call.

The doctor's bill is not such a thing to dread in Austria, as in some parts of the world, as a report from United States Consul Frank Deedmeyer, stationed at Prague, shows.

The city of Prague, with a population in city and suburbs of about 600,000, has only about 800 physicians, or one for every 7,500 persons. A doctor charges for a daytime call in a middle-class family only 60 cents, or 10 cents more than if the patient calls on him in his office. For a night call the doctor receives $1.20 to $2, according to the distance. Only professors attached to the clinics of the two local universities charge more, receiving $2 to $4 for a house call and $2 for an office visit. As in this country, the physicians, except those of the homeopathic school, do not supply medical remedies.

"At most of the hospitals under the control of the Roman Catholic associations," continues Mr. Deedmeyer, "treatment and care are entirely free. Nurses at hospitals are paid 80 cents a day for the first year, with an annual increase of 20 cents per month; at sanatoria from $6 to $8 per week; at private houses, from 80 cents to $1 per day, board being always included for all nurses.

"About 100 dentists practice in this city. The average charges are: Drawing one tooth, 40 cents to 80 cents; cement filling, 60 cents to $1; amalgam filling, 80 cents to $2; gold filling, $2 to $4; bridgework, $10 to $20.

"The annual incomes of these professional men are estimated as follows: Head professor in charge of clinics, salary paid by the Government, $1,440 to $1,800, and $5,000 to $13,000 from private practice; other professors at clinics, salary paid by the Government, $1,000, and from private practice, $4,000 to $10,000; general medical practitioner, not attached to any clinic, $3,000 to $3,500; the average income of a dentist is $5,000."

YANKEES ARE NOT EXTOLLED IN SOUTH AMERICA

On Other Hand Englishmen Are Honoured in Chili, Bolivia and Peru

The American's chief difficulty in South America is that he is not understood, writes J. A Hammerton, in Harper's Weekly. Everywhere throughout the spacious lands of these republics the Englishman is known and honoured. When two natives are making a bargain and one of them wishes to exact from the other the utmost pledge of honour, he says, shaking hands on it, "Palabra Inglesa!" That is to say, the word of with Latin solemnity: "Palabra inglesa." That is to say, the word of an Englishman." But they are not Englishmen who are bargaining and the result may be different.

Again, when one wants a friend to meet him punctually, he adds the words hora Inglesa (literally "English time," or "at such-and-such an hour prompt"). But, again, as they are not Englishmen who are making the assignment it is safe betting the one will be half-an-hour late and the other three-quarters. Still, the fact remains that English honour and English punctuality are universally recognized by people who are dimly struggling toward these ideals.

On the other hand, when the matter in question is one of suspicion, when there is reason to suspect trickery, what is the phrase we find on the lips of the South Americans, what comes readiest to the pen of the journalist? Often have I heard, frequently have I read, some such sentence as this: En fin, estamos convencido que el asunto no es mas que un "Yanqui bluff." (In short, we are convinced the matter is nothing more than a Yankee bluff.")

Yes, it is rather a painful reflection to the American that Yanqui bluff (pronounced "Yankee bluff") should have become the stereotyped phrase for any sort of swindle. But it is a fact, and of course, it must arise from some due cause.

There is more than one reason for this slur. At least, I think I can advance several. In the first place the American is badly represented in the South. Outside of Bolivia, Peru, and parts of Chili, where the great mineral wealth has attracted many American prospectors, one sees few evidences of American activity, but finds in the Argentine and in the populous centres of Chili frequent traces of some 'get-rich-quick" faker who has passed that way.

Nor are the American employees one encounters representative of the best. There may be a natural explanation of this in the fact that the United States, offering so many opportunities to its wealthiest citizens within the broad lands of the "old flag," has had to spare for South America only a lower grade of worker. At all events, there is a general feeling in those countries that since most able Americans can do well enough at home it is a fair supposition that those who have come to South America are not of the best.

The same feeling does not obtain in respect to the English nor the German, for the obvious reason that their countries are spilling over with competent men for use in foreign fields. I do not submit this as my own opinion, but I must confess that the North American type in South America is not calculated to inspire the native with any exalted idea of the Americans at home.

HE'S BORN, NOT MADE

The Perfect Bystander as Much of a Genius as a Poet

Amid the hurryings and scufflings of a hard-travelling generation there remains still one mortal to whom the world revolves comfortably upon its appointed axis. He can be found balancing himself upon the curbstone or propping up a lamp post, or resting a hand with ruminative aspect upon a hydrant, or reclining softly against a building.

Upon his face is the bland, far-away epression of a deaf box and his spirit communes within itself, while he chews the end of reflection and tobacco simultaneously. He will watch a solitary individual placing bricks in regular order upon a wall, following each turn of the bricklayer's hand, motion after motion, repetition after repetition, absorbed to the gills, enwrapt, body and soul, in the operation for an hour or more. Or he will concentrate his mental activities upon a boy cleaning windows, and never leave his post until the wash leather has been given its last flick. Or he will take up an independent position in front of a baseball score board and watch with unflagging vigilance for something to happen, even though no game is being played.

He never looks hurried, never looks impatient, just a trifle weary, perhaps, as a man who has been through much and has learned that the world has nothing to offer worth the striving for. There are men who will watch a building from the digging of the basement to the placing of the door mat, know every brick in it by its first name, and have personal conversation with each and every pane of glass that goes into the windows. For the most part those are persons of accumulated wisdom; what they think about no one knows. They just watch and watch, head a little to one side, moving an arm or a shoulder every twenty minutes or so, but never unriveting their gaze. So as all great wisdom comes from reflection, these great minds turn over the world's problems and solve the mysteries of their age and time.

Most of us cannot attain this perfection of idleness at all: some can, with patient application, but in those that have arrived, so to speak, may be seen the men who, having finished all things, have arrived at the ultimate of existence, an dare content just to exist in meditative, if unremunerative, silence while others toil.

THE "HURT LOOK"

A wife who practices what is commonly known among the fraternity of husbands as "the hurt look," indicating that a tear shower is about ready to fall because her beloved has not acquiesced wholly in her desires and plans, the other morning said at the breakfast table after her husband had declined firmly but surely to buy an automobile of a certain type, "John, don't you love me any more?"

"Oh-huh—I guess so, but not $3,000 worth."

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

He was on board within the hour, and remained in his cabin until the engines started. Then he went on deck, and bade farewell to a land where he had worked, and dreamed, and endured, during the full years of his lost youth. Practically his last intimate glimpse of the West, save for distant views of the California coast, and a fleeting call at San Diego, was obtained when the vessel passed through the Golden Gate. Bittersweet recollections warred in heart and brain as he watched the beautiful and well-loved panorama. Every bold promontory and sequestered bay of the miles of narrow straits were familiar to his eyes. If there was aught of weakness in his composition, it must have made its presence felt then; but that there could be any turning back did not even occur to his vague thoughts. He might be moving swiftly into unfathomable night; his action might be deemed either stubborn or irresponsible; he might be regarded as the victim of deep delusion; but at least it must be said of him that he never flinched from the barren outlook or admitted the possibility of retreat. Hitherto love for his mother had exercised the most lasting and salutary influence on his life. The depth and intensity of that love was the gauge of his horror when he discovered that he had caused her death. His emotions were incapable of logical analysis. She was dead. His forbidden passion for another woman had killed her. She might have lived seven years. For seven years he would placate her spirit "in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness."

His strength was that of the mind. He was of the order of chivalry. His renunciation would have been well understood by a few men who lived and had their being a thousand years ago. In the America of the early '90', had his undertaking been known, which it was not, nor ever has been till this writing, the heedless majority must have wagged sappient noddles, and cried in chorus. "He is mad!"

A discriminating purser allotted him to the captain's itable and at dinner that evening he found himself next to a Chilian merchant. This man sat on his left. On the right was an empty chair, which adjoined the commander's position at the head of the table.

The captain greeted him with the ready camaraderie of the sea.

"My ward has not put in an appearance," he said, nodding toward the vacant place. "She can't be ill yet, anyhow; but, like most women, I suppose, she is unpunctual."

"Is lack of punctuality a feminine failing?" said Power, seeing that he was expected to answer.

The sailor laughed. "It is evident you are not a married man, Mr. Power, or you wouldn't need to ask," he said.

"How true!" piped the Chilian, in a singularly high-pitched voice. The people at that end of the table grinned, and the Chilian instantly won a reputation as a humourist. Some days passed before they discovered that he had brought off his only joke thus early in the voyage. He possessed a fund of information about nitrate and guano; but these topics were not popular, so his conversational talent exhausted itself in that one comment. On this occasion it happened to be appropriate.

Power, who had summed him up as a bull dog at a glance, was surveying him with a degree of surprise when he became aware that the missing lady had arrived. She had slipped into her chair quietly, and was apologising for being late.

"I am usually a most methodical person," she said; "but I mislaid a key——"

She broke off, in smiling embarrassment, because of the general laughter, and the captain had to explain that the wretched males present had been villifying her sex.

"There was one exception, though," he rattled on. "Our friend on the left seemed to think otherwise. Mr. Power, let me introduce you to Miss Marguerite Sinclair."

Yielding to convention—most potent of human ties—Power turned with a polite bow; but not even his preoccupied mind was proof against the feeling of stupefaction caused by his first impression of the captain's "ward." She certainly owned a girlish and graceful figure, and her brown hair was glossy and abundant; but her skin was withered, and that side of her face which was visible bore a number of livid scars. It was impossible to determine her age. The slim, willowy body and really beautiful hair apparently indicated youth; but the appalling disfigurement of the face, which extended from the top of the cheek to the slender column of the neck, simply forbade any accurate estimate. The pity of it was that her profile was faultless, and a little pink shell of an ear was almost fantastically opposed to the shrivelled and scar-seamed features adjoining it. Yet, in some indescribable way, she reminded him of Nancy, and the notion was so grotesque and abhorrent that he shuddered.

Luckily, her attention was drawn for a moment by a steward, and he had recovered his wits before she looked at him. Then he found that her eyes were peculiarly brilliant. He noted, with positive relief, that they were not blue, like Nancy's, but brown. They had a curiously penetrative quality, too, which seemed to dispel the repugnant effect of the accident. He saw now that she must have sustained some grave injury, which marred her good looks.

"Thank you," she said composedly. "Usually, I have to fight my own battles. It will be quite a relief to count on an ally so valiant that he draws the sword without waiting to see the person whose cause he espouses."

Her voice was cultured and incisive. It seemed to offer a challenge to all the world; yet it had an arresting note of cheerful irony that betokened an equable temperament. After the first shock of surprise, almost of dismay, had passed, Power fancied that she carried herself thus bravely as a protest against the brutality of fate.

They spoke but little during the progress of the meal, and he avoided looking at her. Somehow, he was aware that she would resent such delicacy; but the alternative of a too curious inspection was distasteful. Of two evils he chose the less; though the fact that any choice was called for in the matter was embarrassing.

He gathered that the captain and Miss Sinclair were old acquaintances. There were illusions to relatives and friends. She was addressed as "Meg." It was to be inferred that her mother was dead, that she had been attending a session of the Los Angeles University, and that she was now on the way to rejoin her father.

Some men at the table spoke of the pending Presidential campaign, and the "sixteen to one" currency ratio started a lively argument. An advocate of a gold basis snorted derisively that silver could be mined profitably at eighteen cents an ounce.

"How true!" said the Chilian, and again he scored.

Power escaped to the deck. He lit a cigar, and leaned on the starboard rail, gazing at a magnificent sunset which glorified the infinity of waters. He wished now he had avoided a mail steamer, with its elaborate elegancies. Had he not acted so precipitately he could have sought the rough hospitality of some grimy tramp, whence woman was barred, and whose skipper would leave him in peace.

Suddenly he was disturbed by Miss Sinclair, who joined him at the rail with a quiet confidence of demeanour that spoke volumes for her self-possession.

"Though I appeared to make light of it at the moment, I was glad to hear that you defended me," she said, smiling at him with lustrous, deep-seeing eyes.

He was rendered nearly tongue-tied by confusion; but managed to blurt out, awkwardly enough, that his championship had been involuntary. She laughed quite pleasantly.

"Does that mean that, now you have seen me, you deem me capable of any inquity?" she said.

"You give me credit for a faculty of divination which I do not possess," he retorted, wondering if she was really alluding to her own unsightliness.

"Ah, I think I shall like you," she said. "Most people whom I meet for the first time try to show their pity by being sympathetic. They simply daren't say. 'Good gracious! what has happened to your face?' so the put on their best hospital-ward-visitor air, and feel so sorry for me that I want to smack them. Now, you admit candidly that I may be as villainous as I look, and such honesty is a positive relief.

"Even to earn your good opinion I refuse to accept that unfair reading of my words," he said.

"Then what do you mean?"

"I'm afraid I was talking at random."

"You don't look that sort of person. Really, Mr. Power, you and I will get on famously together if we tell each other the real truth. Are we to be fellow-passengers as far as Valparaiso?"

"Yes."

"There, you see! Those Philistines would have smirked and said, 'I hope so.' I shall enjoy this trip. Generally, a sea-voyage bores me."

"Are you much travelled, then?"

"I live in Patagonia."

"Does that statement answer my question?"

"Patagonia for amusement, and some among those who are compelled to reside there get away as often as their means permit. Patagonian boarding houses don't advertise 'young and musical society.' I assure you. Our population is something under one to the square mile."

"My knowledge of the Patagonian is limited; but I have always understood that he requires just about that amount of space."

"Ah, no! Our poor giants are nearly extinct. There is hardly a hundred of them, all told."

"My! Who, or what, cleared them out?"

"Measles. Just imagine a Brobdingnagian measle!"

"Are you, then, a type of the present inhabitants?"

"No. My ailment was due to being knocked insensible during a fire."

Power reddened. "You are an adept in twisting the sense of the most commonplace remarks, to say the least," he said, careless whether or not he annoyed her.

She parried this thrust with sublime unconcern: "I know. It's horrid. But I had to tell you. Now, I'll be good, and take myself off. You'll be heartily sick of my company after five thousand miles of it."

Certainly Miss Marguerite Sinclair's unusual methods of expressing herself struck a jarring note, and, whether by chance or by the exercise of rare intuition, the one note able to penetrate Power's armour of indifference. Her somewhat bizarre personality was vivid in his mind long after she had left him; but night and the stars brought other thoughts, and blurred the sharp lines of the vignette.

Next morning he breakfasted early, and alone. After a long tramp on the upper deck, he asked a steward where a deck-chair ordered overnight had been placed. The man inquired his name, consulted a list, and led him through the music-room to the port side. The chair stood aft of the companionway, and it was irritating to find the neighbouring chair occupied by a young and remarkably pretty woman, who seemed to be deeply engrossed in a book.

"I prefer the starboard side," he said sharply. "Bring it along, and I'll show you where to put it."

The lady lifted her eyes to his in an amused, side-long glance."

"Good morning, Mr. Power," she said. "You are pardoned for thinking there is a conspiracy floating around; but there isn't."

Po[illegible] was staggered; but he did not [illegible] to provide a permanent tar[illegible] the shafts of Miss Marguerite Sinclair's wit. At present she was treating him as though she were "rotting" some small schoolboy.

Sale of Remedies for Headache!

There are more ZUTOO tablets for headache sold in this country than all other remedies combined. Think how good these tablets must be to have such an immense sale.

Dealers could not sell them nor would people buy ZUTOO tablets in such large quantities, were they not what all users say they are, that is, a perfectly harmless and reliable cure for headache.

Do YOU use these tablets which so many people have chosen as best? If you do not, it is your next move. 25c at dealers

Had to Go and Climb a Tree.

The Countess of Desmond died in 1604 at the age of 140. In his "History of the World" Sir Walter Raleigh states: "I myself knew the old Countess of Desmond, who was married in Edward IV.'s time and held her jointure from all the earls of Desmond since then; and that this is true all the noblemen and gentlemen in Munster can witness." She retained all her faculties to the last, walked ten miles in a day only a week before her death, and, according to the inscription on the back of her portrait at Muckross abbey, "in no course of her long Pilgrimage renewed her teeth twice." The countess looked like living another fifty years, when, as Lord Leicester told Sir William Temple, "she must needs climb a nut tree to gather nuts; so, falling down, she hurt her thigh, which brought a fever, and that brought death."

Shamrock Diet For Athletes.

Has any modern athlete thought of trying the shamrock as training diet? Most of the writers of former times who credited the Irish with eating their national plant spoke of this as evidence of the poverty of the people, though some said it was eaten to make the breath sweet. But Mundy, an Oxford vegetarian, at the end of the seventeenth century observed, with satisfaction, that "the Irish that nourish themselves with their shamrock (which is the purple clover) are swift of foot and of nimble strength." And Linnaeus wrote, "The swift and agile Irishmen nourish themselves with their shamrock, which is the purple trefoil, for they make from the flowers of this plant, breathing a honeyed odor, a bread which is more pleasant than that made from other materials.—London Chronicle.

A Memory of Burns.

Writing of a visit to Dumfries, "T. P." in his London weekly tells of seeing the spot where Burns caught his fatal chill:

"I had pictured a cross or a tablet or something of the kind. What I saw were two or three brick steps decayed, gaping, with the mortar half worn away; just three brick steps; that and nothing more. It did not make the spot less tragic, less impressive, because it stood thus in all its common nakedness. It was indeed far more impressive in its suggestion, that of utter simplicity and merest commonplaceness, which so often are the narrow and squalid theater on which the resounding and immortal tragedies of life are played."

Favorites of the Gods.

Abyssinia is one of the countries to which foreigners and their own people have given different names. "Abyssinia" is derived from an Arabic word meaning mixture or confusion, in allusion to the mixed character of the inhabitants. They prefer to call themselves Ethiopians, and it certainly is a fine old name, which makes even Menelik's alleged descent from Solomon and the Queen of Sheba seem a modern detail for the Ethiopians, according to the Greeks, were the first inhabitants of the earth, or at any rate, the first who worshiped the gods. According to Homer, they were the favorites of the gods and the justest of all men.—London Chronicle.

Her Qualifications.

Mistress (to prospective cook)—Your virtues all seem of a negative quality. Haven't you anything else to offer?

The Candidate—Well, yes, ma'am, I have. You see, I worked a year fer them high an' mighty Van Dams, an' I know their silverware is plate, an' their cut glass isn't cut, an' their imported gowns is from Chicago, an' th' old man comes home at 2 in th' mornin', an' th' young Frinchman who is goin' to marry Clytie Dam—she's twenty-nine and losin' her hair—is no more a baron than I am a queen. Aw, I know all about 'em.

The Mistress (highly interested)—On second thoughts I'll engage you.

Dancing at Berlin's Zoo.

What would one of the largest of the cities of the United States think of going out to the zoo and dancing there until 3 o'clock in the morning? Yet this is nothing unusual in Berlin. There one goes to the zoo to see the animals if one chooses, but also to dine and to dance. The zoo is really a very delightful rendezvous for dining, especially in summer; the music there is notably good.—Spur.

The One Best Sugar for Preserving is

Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar

When you pay a good price for your strawberries, and spend a lot of time preparing, cooking and bottling them, isn't it too bad only to get after all, preserves that "might have been better"?

Yet that is what you do get, unless you use the very best sugar as well as the finest fruit.

Every trace of impurity in the sugar has a bad effect on the flavor and the keeping qualities of the preserves.

Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar is refined to absolute purity, and put up, without being touched by human hand, in 2 and 5 pound Sealed Cartons and in 10, 20 and 100 pound bags.

Buy Redpath Sugar in these original packages and you get Canada's finest sugar, at its best. Make your preserves, jellies and jams with Redpath Extra Granulated and you'll get the most gratifying returns from your time, skill and money.

Try this way of preserving Strawberries —it works splendidly.

Hull and clean the strawberries and put them into jars which have been sterilized with boiling water. Fill each jar, but do not pack the fruit down.

Make a thin syrup by boiling for ten minutes 3 parts of REDPATH Extra Granulated Sugar in 5 parts of water. You will need nearly as many pints of syrup as of fruit.

Pour the syrup over the fruit, filling the jars. Screw on the covers, without the rubbers, stand the jars on strips of wood in a wash-boiler, and cover them to within an inch of the tops with cold water. Bring this water to a boil and cook for from 15 to 20 minutes, according to the ripeness of the berries. Watch closely after they have boiled 15 minutes, and when cooked remove at once.

Have the syrup, which was left over, very hot. With a fork gently stir the fruit so as to get out all the air bubbles, then fill each jar up with the hot syrup and seal, being careful no leave no air inside.

Strawberries, raspberries or any other fruit preserved in this way keep their shape and size, and retain much more of the fresh fruit flavor than if they are cooked up in the ordinary way

The Canada Sugar Refining Co. Limited, Montreal.

RHUBARB AND APPLE PIE.

Use equal quantities of tart apples and rhubarb, and a good pie crust. Cut the fruit and fill an earthen dish heaping; then cover thickly with sugar, letting it sift through the fruit. Wet the edges [illegible] with cold water. Roll a quarter of an inch thick, and cover the pie with it, being careful not to press the edges of the paste. Cut two or three little slices in the pastry and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a moderately hot oven, or until the fruit is quite done. Sift the powdered sugar over the top of the pie and serve hot as a pudding, or cold.

Yes, they are neat!

And they're just as comfortable as they look. I have worn this kind for years and I never knew what hose satisfaction was until I got them. You should try Penmans Hosiery—they retain their shapeliness—set snug to foot and limb and wear much longer than ordinary hose.

Penmans Hosiery is made for men, women and children, in cotton, cashmere, silk and lisle—in any weight and all popular colors.

A PAGE OF THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

A well-known hostess who, on the advice of a futurist, had her drawing room enamelled and furnished in dead white, except the doors, which were jet black, is said to have been so disappointed with the effect that she bade the decorator never darken her doors again.

Didn't Want the Earth

Officer: "What's the matter with that soup you're turning up your nose at?"

Private: "It's full of sand and grit, sir."

Officer: "Now look here, my man, did you come to camp to grumble or to serve your country?"

Private: "Well, I did come to serve my country, sir; but not to eat it."

Complimented

"G-g-good evening," said the young man who had come to speak to the young girl's father.

"Good evening," said the father. "You look a little nervous; how do you feel?"

"Flattered," said the young man. "I was afraid I looked scared to death."

Not His Fault

"Now look here, Johnny, I'm getting tired of catching you stealing pie between meals."

"Then why don't you stop hangin' around th' pantry?"

She (musical): "Do you like Grieg?"

He (unmusical): "Don't think I've ever tasted it."

"What does she mean by 'Poetic Licence'?"

"I'm not entirely sure, but it can't be any worse than some recent prose."

Condemned Even as Food

A cannibal king recently sent post haste for his doctor.

"Good gracious, man," the doctor said, "you're in a dreadful state. What have you been eating?"

"Nothing," groaned the sick man, "except a slice of that multi-millionaire whose yacht was wrecked on Cocoanut Reef."

"Merciful powers!" the doctor cried. "And I told you under no circumstances to eat anything rich. George, get the saws and axes. We must operate at once."

The Last Word

Mame: How do you like me new dress?"

Her Fiance (who has worked at fashionable functions): "Some stuff, kid! You couldn't be more immodest if you was well-bred."

Modern Education

"So your son could stay home only a couple of days, I suppose he is busy at college?"

"Yes. He's got to get back from the hockey team's western trip in time to pack his duds for the baseball team's southern trip."

No Complaint

"Some day," cried the outraged poet, "you editors will fight for my work."

"All right," sighed the editor, resignedly. "I'll be a good sport if I get licked."

Too Effeminate by Far

A.: "Percival Pifflepash used to wear high heeled shoes."

B.: "And I have seen him with a feather in the back of his hat band."

"And he always displayed about three inches of turbulant socks."

"I believe he also used to put his hair in curl papers at night."

"You ought to see him now."

"Changed?"

"I should say so. Wears heavy shoes, rough shirts, manly hats and generally carries a corncob pipe in his mouth."

"How do you account for the transformation?"

"In a car one evening a workingman looked him all over and then got up and offered him his seat."

THE PACIFICIST.

"Take my gloves off, Walter."

"Waffor?"

"I ain't goin' to fight 'im—I'm goin' to kiss 'im."

Good Reason

Indignant Politician: "Why didn't you print all of my speech?"

Country Editor: "Well, to tell the truth, boss, we ran clean out of capital I's."

Her Reason

"Why did she break her engagement?"

"Why, he sent her typewritten love-letters, 'dictated but not read.'"

HAVING NONE.

"I am an income tax inspector, sir. I called——"

"I am an artist."

"Oh, I beg your pardon" (withdraws).

He Meant Well

A man who had married his cook was giving a dinner party, and between the courses the good lady sat with her hands spread on the tablecloth.

Suddenly the burr of conversation ceased and in the silence that followed a young man on the right of his hostess said, pleasantly:

"Awful pause."

"Yes, they may be," said the old-time cook, with heightened color; "and yours would be like them if you had done half my work."

No Cause for Worry.

Father Waybuck had just returned from a visit to his son in New York. His wife was anxious to learn if the boy was withstanding the temptations of city life.

"Hiram," said she, "it worries me to have William there alone in that big city. There is no one to remind him about walking in the straight and narrow path."

"Don't you worry about that, mother," was the cheerful response. "Everywhere you go, they're hollerin' out, 'Watch your step!'"

Tasteful Mourning.

"Smith is the most romantic and sentimental man I have ever heard of."

"How so?"

"His first wife was a blonde, and a week after she died he married a brunette."

Real Love Scene.

He—How d'ye do?

She—How are you?

(Long pause.)

She—We're having lovely weather.

He—Uh-huh.

(Long pause.)

He—Well, I must be going.

She—So soon?

He—Uh-huh.

(Long pause.)

He—Well, good-night.

She—Good-night.

(Curtain.)

A Plain Prescription.

Mandy (rushing into the drug-store)—Doc, Ah wants somethin' to put muh man asleep.

Doc.—Gentleman of color?

Mandy—Yessah.

Doc.—Use a flatiron.

Dem's Harsh Words, Nell!

Myrtle—I can't understand why Bob doesn't propose to me.

Lucille—Perhaps he knows you would accept him.

Nothing on Her.

Miss De Vere: My portrait was painted by Sargent.

Claribel Calcium: Huh! I was featured three years in the moving pictures.

The straight and narrow path seems to be used mostly for purposes of parade.

A reporter was interviewing Thomas A. Edison.

"And you, sir," he said to the inventor, "made the first talking machine?"

"No," Mr. Edison replied; "the first one was made long before my time—out of a rib."

All She Got Was Sympathy.

Charity Worker—Will you do something for a poor woman whose husband comes out of jail today?

Algy—Here's a quarter. Wire her my condolences.

A Shrunken Fortune.

Hattie—You knew my face was my fortune before you married me.

Mattie—Yes; but it looked bigger to me then.

Made a Difference.

Mrs. Skids—I'm disappointed in my pedometer. It only registered five miles yesterday.

Mr. Skids—But, then, it doesn't count when you were wandering in your mind.

WHAT WOULD "UNDER-DRESSED" BE LIKE?

The Lady in the Background (to her mystified male companion): "Really, I daresay; but I hate to see a young girl over-dressed like that."

A Temporary Impediment.

The girl appeared to be such a plump, jolly little soul that the old lady felt prompted to address her.

"Hello, little girl! Do you live near here?"

"Eh am."

"What?"

"I hed eh am."

"Does your mother know where you are?"

"I hink ho."

"I don't understand you."

"I haid I hink he os here I am."

"My dear child," finally said the kindly old lady, "what in the world is the matter with your speech?"

Adjusting her face with what seemed to be something of an effort, the child replied,

"I had a big tooth pulled this morning, and I just can't keep my tongue out of the hole."

Particularly Applicable.

Dancing master (explaining new figure)—Now, for every step forward, you take two backward——

Diogenes (blowing out lantern)—By gad! I've found him at last!

Admitted.

"How about Jones, who didn't have money to get a season ticket? How did he get in?"

"Oh, there was a banana peel at the gateway, and he went in on his face."

Railroad Amenities.

Passenger: "That last station was my destination, sah. Why, sah, didn't you stop thar?"

Conductor: "We don't stop there any more. The engineer's mad at the station agent."

"A great many people come here Sunday."

"Yes," answered the keeper in the zoo. "And I'm glad of it. It seems to sort of cheer the animals up to see a crowd."

They Would Not.

Miss Ouida Spraggins, buxom, bucolically beautiful and excessively shy, sidled into the new store at the crossroads to do some trading. She brought three chickens with her, legs (these were real dominickers with feathers on them) tied together. She placed them on the counter, and the romantic-looking young clerk, lately of Wheeler Centre, carelessly brushed back his hyacinthine locks and fascinated Ouida with his smile.

"Will they lay there?" he asked, viewing the fowls apprehensively. He did not see the strings on the fowls' feet.

Like a startled fawn Ouida trembled, blushed and began to nervously chew a bonnet string. From her lips came the awful confession:

"N-no, sir; they're all roosters!"

He Has It.

Teacher: "Tommie, use the word 'Eureka' in a sentence."

Tommie: "When pa comes home, ma says, 'Eureka the ale house.'"

Was It For Him?

Blithers and Smithers were neighbors. They were friends before they became neighbors. The enmity started by Blithers' boy pushing Smither's kid off a fence and nearly breaking his young neck. Then Smithers killed four of Blithers' chickens. After that they glared at each other like a couple of horse thieves.

Blithers hired a colored man to mow his lawn. 'Rastus threw the grass over the fence into Smithers' yard.

"Hey, you!" yelled Smithers. "What in thunder are you doing?"

'Rastus blinked.

"Ah foh yo' mool, mister," he smiled.

"Mule!" roared Smithers. "I ain't got no mule!"

'Rastus stared.

"Ah'tcha?" he gasped. Then he scratched his head. "Das funny," he added. "De gemman what lib here say de grass foh de jackass nex' doh!"

Visitor: "You will be sure to tell your mistress that I called while she was out."

Maid: "Oh, yes; she'll be delighted to hear it."

Owner of Race-horse (looking closely at scales): "Williams, you are a trifle over weight. Can't you lighten yourself a little?"

Williams (the jockey): "Got on my lightest suit, sir. Ain't had a bite today, and 'ave just trimmed my finger-nails."

Owner: "Well, go and get shaved."

"Now," said the professor in the medical college, "if a person in good health, but who imagined himself sick, should send for you, what would you do?"

"I," said a student, "would give him something to make him sick, and then administer an antidote."

"Don't waste any more time here, young man," said the teacher, "but begin practice at once."

She was rich but uneducated and had a cottage for the summer at the seaside. Her one problem was how to secure as her house guest the "recognised leader of society" in her home town. The invitation was being verbally extended, and as a last inducement, Mrs. Malaprop ended:

"And as you sit on the front porch it's charming to watch the little white-sailed boats flit pro and con."

A little while ago Jones managed to get a good record of his parrot's cries on a cylinder. By way of experiment he set it going whilst Poll was in the room.

"Pretty Poll! Scratch a Poll! Give me a bit of sugar, uncle!" whirled the machine.

The parrot looked scared. "I want some sugar, some sugar!" came from the gramophone.

"Great Scot!" screeched Polly, as she looked down the trumpet. "What a beak for sweetstuff!"

In these days we don't care whether we love our neighbors or not, so long as we can keep up with them.

Lady of the House (just returned)—Poor Polly! Have you been terribly lonesome?

Parrot (feverishly)—Gimme a stack o' blues!

A young preacher was recently called upon to officiate at a funeral in the absence of the pastor of the church. He knew it was customary for the minister to announce after the sermon that those who wished should step up to view the remains, but he thought this was too hackneyed a phrase, so he solemnly said:

"The congregation will now pass round the bier."

And on the faces of all the men present chaste resignation gave place to mild expectation.

Applicant for Position: "I have here a letter of recommendation from my minister."

Head of Firm: "That's very good as far as it goes, but we won't need your services on Sundays. Have you any references from anybody who knows you the other six days of the week?"

"Where," said the land agent, addressing an audience of possible purchasers, "where else on the face of the globe will you find in one place copper, tin, iron, cotton, hemp, grain, game——"

And a voice from the crowd replied:—

"In the pocket of my youngest son."

A certain type of story—that having the sudden conclusion such as, "William Jones fired a gun yesterday, and the funeral will be tomorrow"—has been claimed as purely American in origin. But as a matter of fact [illegible] kind of story is old in America itself. If you will turn to II. Chronicles [illegible] 12, 13, you will find these words:

"And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: yet in his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians. And Asa slept with his fathers."

It is not often in these days that we find any real humor in the interjections of political meetings. There are exceptions, however.

"A man is soon forgotten after he's dead," said a Socialist speaker at Stratford on an evening last week.

"Not if you marry his widow, guv'nor," cried a voice from the crowd.

Black Stage.

First Actor: "What sort of part have they given Fish?"

Second Actor: "A very trying one. He has to refuse a drink."

Accepted.

"You shall not sin hotel leave until your bill you have paid 'im."

"You are too kind; then this, I take it, is my permanent home."

Mr. Hogenheimer: "Now look here, Dook, would you marry my gal if she had no money?"

Duke: "Well, er—yes, of course."

Mr. H.: "That settles it! I don't want any blooming idiots in my family."

She was very literary, and he was not. He had spent a harrowing evening discussing authors of whom he knew little, and their works of which he knew less. Presently the maiden said, archly:—

"Of course, you've read 'Romeo and Juliet'?"

He floundered for a moment and then made a brilliant plunge:—

"Well, I've read 'Romeo,'" he said.

It was a concert. The eminent pianist was embarked upon an ambitious classical program. The single individual present who had paid for his ticket turned to his right-hand neighbor, obviously by his bored and superior air a person whose business it was to attend concerts—a musical critic.

"Beg pardon," said the individual, "but isn't that something of Chopin's—that last number?"

"It is," replied the critic, morosely, "when somebody else plays it."

A witty Londoner, going to Ascot with a lady, was met by her with a face of apology.

"I could not get another man," she said, "and we are four women, and you will have to take us all in to dinner."

"Forewarned is four-armed," said he, with a bow.

PARDUS TREMENS.

The Festive One (to total stranger): Shcuse me, Sir, but can you see that, too?

Shortly after the return of the fleet two naval officers were talking about their wives. Naturally they used nautical terms.

"What a dear little craft your wife is!" said the first.

"Dear and little," did you say? She is dear all right, but there's nothing little about her. Why, she is the biggest revenue cutter I have ever seen."

A POSER.

"Dad, does a cannibal go to Heaven?"

"No, sonny."

"But suppose he ate a missionary?"

Exchanging a Compliment.

College Widow—You displayed some marvelous curves this afternoon, Mr. Yalevard.

Pitcher Yalevard (who had observed her standing between the diamond and the sun)—And so did you.

"You say you are your wife's third husband?" said one man to another during a talk.

"No, I am her fourth husband," was the reply.

"Heavens, man!" said the first man, "you are not a husband—you're a habit."

What's in a Name.

The auctioneer's hammer had just fallen, and the little man whose bid had been accepted smiled tearfully.

"What name, please?" asked the clerk.

And a small voice replied, "It's me."

"Quite so!" said the smart clerk; "we are aware of that. But what is 'me's' name?"

"It's me," said the same apologetic voice.

"Oh, is it?" said the clerk, a fine scorn in his tones. "Well, even supposing you're a foundling, I s'pose some sort of name was given you—Brown, Jones, or Robinson, eh?"

"No, it's me!" said the sad, weary little voice.

"You're wasting valuable time, sir," said the auctioneer, sharply. "If you won't give your name the article must be put up again."

"Hard lines!" said the little man, with a sigh. "Just because my name isn't Jones or Robinson I lose a good, cheap table. Perhaps if I spell my name you'll like it better: M-o-e—Mee."

And the smart clerk felt small enough to crawl thru a keyhole of his desk as he booked the purchase.

Rather Too Clever.

The clever young man was wandering up and down the platform of the railway station, intent on finding an empty carriage in the express, which was almost due to start. But in vain.

Assuming an official air, he stalked up to the last carriage and cried in a stentorian voice:

"All change here; this carriage isn't going."

There were exclamations low but deep from the occupants of the crowded compartment; but, nevertheless, they hurried out of the carriage and packed in other parts of the train.

The smile on the face of the young man was childlike as he settled himself comfortably.

"Ah!" he murmured. "It's a grand thing for me that I was born clever! I wish they'd hurry up and start."

By and by the station-master put his head in the window and said:

"I suppose you're the smart young man who told the people this carriage wasn't going?"

"Yes," said the clever one. And he smiled.

"Well," said the station-master, with a grin, "it isn't. The porter heard you telling the people, and so he uncoupled it. He thought you were a director!"

"Do you and your neighbors still quarrel about that dog of his which used to scratch your flowers up?"

"No; never now."

"Buried the hatchet, eh?"

"No, I buried the blessed dog!"

PORCHES FURNISHED AS LIVING ROOMS

The furnishing of a country or suburban home has been greatly simplified of late years by the architects who supply commodious porches. The inside of the house is used only for sleeping and in case of rain. At all other times the family lives on the porch, and in cities where houses are built with any verandah room at all the porches are turned into summer living rooms. This custom is responsible for some specialties in verandah furniture.

Where the verandah is deep and well screened from storms the vogue in furniture shows mission frames, with upholstery in the softest and most supple of Japanese matting. The colours of Japanese mattings are effective on the porch, and the flower designs are particularly popular. Next to the mission furniture, rush, rattan and wicker ware are popular.

The tea cart, once supposed to be for the very rich people, is quite common this summer in rush ware, highly glazed. It rolls on wheels, and has a tray protected by a ledge. The cart, with two tiers can be bought at a slight advance in price. It is not used exclusively for afternoon tea, but when the family desires to eat the evening meal on the porch it is used to wheel the service and the viands from the dining room to the verandah.

An accompaniment to the tea cart is a small three-tiered table, with the shelves growing smaller, one beneath the other, and the largest is no more than eight or nine inches in diameter. It is used for holding plates and sandwiches and fruit. and the largest is no more than eight or nine inches in diameter. It is used for holding plates of sandwiches and fruit.

The fancy of the hour which will appeal to the owner of a well-cared for dog, is a porch kennel built of rush ware to match the furniture. This sits flat on the floor, without any bottom, and has a hole just large enough for the dog to creep in.

For the large ferns, rubber plants and oleanders, dear to the housewife, the pale blue majolica jardiniere in a conventional pattern, is particularly popular. It comes with a tabourette to match.

Japanese matting and Algerian rugs are used for porch floors, and the former makes fine porch cushions. The newest thing in a porch screen that will keep out the rain is heavy denim verandah roof. This is like a hammock, match or tone with the paint of the house.

When the porch is turned into a sleeping room, as often happens on warm nights when extra guests arrive, the swinging berth is attached by four chains from hooks or staples in the veranda roof. This is like a hammock, large enough for a grown person to lie full length, and it is built from heavy canvas, with stout boards instead of slats. Over this is stretched a comfortable mattress, and the canvas encloses the berth all the way round with net ventilators, so as to admit air and also keep out mosquitoes. At the top and bottom ends are deep pockets like those on a sleeping car berth for clothes.

SOME SCENERY.

He was enraptured with the scenery. His fair companion at the country resort sat upon the stone wall beside him.

"Behold the exquisite sunset!" he exclaimed. "Note the delicate flesh tints, the cream shades, the long ashes of vermillion and the almost living fire that leaps up from the sinking sun as from a fountain. Behold the frame work of darkening skies and of deep green. Isn't it wonderful?"

"You just bet it is!" she exclaimed. "It looks just like a great big lobster salad."

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

TALK WITH THE YOUNG MEN.

Accidental greatness dies young, and it knows no resurrection. It is excited, boasting, egotistical and tyrannical. All the littleness of its common childhood is lost in the shadow of its present brief loftiness. It assassinates poverty, courts Godliness under the sun and stabs it under the moon, flatters knowledge to keep secret its own ignorance.

Character never dies; it is born to live. It is never beyond improvement. Man makes his character and his character preserves him. Little promises, little debts, little words and little acts are small in themselves, but they are the very weights we throw in the balance over against a man's reputation. One noble deed doesn't establish true nobility. No man can be trusted with the cares of a high station until he has proved himself capable and honest in lower ones. Better see him swim the brook before you bid him try the river.

And yet, some men begin to rise only when Fate seeks to pull them down. Difficulties awake them; and what to others seems certain defeat, is all that nerves them to win the battle. True bravery and true nobility are shy, unassuming. It is the traitor who boasts of his loyalty, and the villain who modifies his honesty! Honor "vaunteth not itself," looks every man in the face, fearing none; asking no advertising and cannot be flattered.

Boys, remember these little things and don't boast of your honesty. Boast not at all! And we think it poor philosophy to lend a man four dollars by way of enticing him to pay the one he already owes you. Weigh our promises well, and when you have made, keep them, no matter what it costs. Judge others by what they have done, not by what they are going to do.

Don't keep your eyes on the stars and stumble over nuggets.

Woman is the most patient of all mortals. She will toil and moil, spin, sew and cook. She will nurse sick children, and wait on her husband. She will sacrifice all, surrender all, forego all the ordinary pleasures and pastimes of life, and obey implicitly the call of duty. In return she asks and must have her husband's sympathy and love; without it the world appears a blank. A few words of encouragement and sympathy from the husband to the tired and discouraged wife will rest and encourage her more than anything else.

YOU CANNOT PURCHASE HAPPINESS.

One cannot buy love for paltry gold; neither can happiness be purchased, as if it were a pleasant beverage. You cannot put it on and lay it off, as if it were a garment of brocade, decked with glittering gew gaws and costly jewels. You cannot take it on your plate at the banquet table and eat it. Midnight revelry and dissipation say, "Happiness does not dwell with me." Neither is it found in excitment, exhilaration and in worldly frivolity. Everything has its price. Wealth comes only by toil, but people are miserably unhappy, because gold dollars will not roll into their coffers without their earning the gold. The vile and unworthy pant for the respect of the virtuous when they do not deserve it. The indolent invalid wants health without strict temperance in all things. What a happy world this might be if every one were willing to pay a quid pro quo—a fair equivalent—for every good thing received. People do have all they pay for. For this reason nothing but bitter complaints and murmerings bubble up from unhappy hearts. People pay the price of unhappiness. And they receive a full equivalent.

AN ELOQUENT PASSAGE.

Probably of all the beautiful and eloquent passages ever written by the inimitable George D. Prentice, the following is the finest:

"It can not be that earth is man's only abiding place. It can not be that our life is a bubble cast by eternity to float a moment upon its waves and sink into nothingness. Else why is it that the high and glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts are forever wandering unsatisfied? Why it is that the rainbow and cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off to leave us to mourn on their loveliness? Why is it that the stars which 'hold their festival around the midnight throne' are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And, finally why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and taken from us; leaving the thousand streams of our affection to flow back in an Alpine torrent upon our hearts? There is a realm where the rainbow never fades; where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber on the ocean, and where the beautiful beings which pass before us like shadows will stay forever in our presence."

SAVE THE CHILDREN

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets cure these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the new-born babe. They are especially good in the summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IN THE SICK ROOM

Any one who has been ill, and very few of us escape the invalid stage at one time or another, knows how often the would-be kindnesses of friends and relatives may drive the sick person to the verge of madness, says the New York Telegram.

One of the most aggravating things anybody can do is to stand behind a patient's bed and talk in whispers; no one should ever whisper in a sick room, nor sit out of sight. If you must talk at all, talk in a low tone and within the full view of the patient.

Another common practice is to sit on the side of the bed, shaking it all the time while talking to the occupant, quite regardless of the fact that besides making him feel sick, you have, in sitting down, drawn the clothes so tight as to make them bear heavily upon some tender part.

Do not creep about on tiptoe, and never enter a sick room in noisy and creaking shoes; move about the room quietly, but to all appearances as if you were not trying to be quiet.

Before going into the sick room to sit by the patient collect everything you are likely to want while paying your visit—books, work, writing materials, whatever it may be—so that there is no occasion to jump up and down, which is very irritating and unrestful to those who are ill. Remember to place your chair near enough to the bed to catch any request which may be made in a weak voice, and sit so that you are plainly visible to the patient.

The feeling that you have come to stay and will not be moving away is very restful to those who are ill, and will often woo a refreshing sleep

It is not wise to ask sick persons what they would like to eat. Take to them what you think they will like and are allowed to have. If they do not eat it, do not make any fuss nor appear disappointed. Send it away, and after a while try again with something fresh. Do not stand over the sick person with the food or fruit offered. If he is well enough to help himself, put the dish down and go on talking or reading aloud, not appearing to notice whether the patient is eating or not.

It is unwise to thwart those who are ill. When a sick person has a great longing for anything forbidden, such as to sit up when told to lie still, to read when told not to exert himself, and so on, it is best to explain why it is not advisable and what will probably be the result, he can decide for himself. Either patients of their own accord give up the idea, or put it into execution, finding in a very short time their arms are too weak to hold a paper or a book, and their eyes too tired and they give in.

Seasonable Recipes

Baked Corn.

Open one can of nice corn, put it in a baking dish, add one well-beaten egg, a teaspoon of sugar, a tablespoon of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Mix all together and bake in a moderate oven one-half hour.

Potatoes au Gratin.

Hash eight cold boiled potatoes and place them in a sautoire; add half a cup of cream and half an ounce of butter; season with half a pinch each of salt and pepper and just a suggestion of nutmeg; sprinkle over with two tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese and two tablespoonfuls of fresh bread crumbs; spread well over them a piece of butter the size of a nut; then place the dish in the oven. After 10 minutes, when a good golden colour, serve.

LIFE THREATENED BY KIDNEY DISEASE

His Health Is A Terrible State Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives."

B. A. KELLY, Esq.

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 29th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work, and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

"My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and the skin as well as the Kidneys and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Whereupon the judge said: "I haven't told you everything I know yet."—National Monthly.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine — double strength — is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength — from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

The Undistracted Critic.

Last autumn, in a village inn parlor in central New England, I picked up a work of fiction and found, carefully noted in a copper plate chirography on one of the blank fly leaves of the book, a list of the things which had presumably most impressed its owner in reading the story. The list ran as follows:

"Page 114, line 3, split infinitive.

"Page 268, line 17, should be whom.

"Page 301, line 12, is this construction allowable?"

"Great heavens!" I thought as I laid the volume reverently back on the center table (the slipshod critic in me recognizing the master spirit in the unknown commentator). "What poise, what self possession, what splendidly insulated steadfastness of purpose! Just think of standing unstirred and undistracted amid a spectacle of foundering faiths and sundering systems with a tremorless, micrometric and sacrosanct finger upon a split infinitive!"—Life.

Mustard in Ancient Times.

Mustard is one of the most ancient of medicines. Pythagoras, who flourished between 500 and 600 years before Christ, mentions it. Hippocrates, who was born in 460 B. C., employed it. Pliny the elder, writing in 77 A. D., describes three different kinds of mustard and says the seeds were imported to Italy from Egypt originally.

The Romans used it as a stimulant after a cold bath. They mixed mustard oil and olive oil in equal parts and used this as a liniment for stiffness of the muscles. They knew the virtues of mustard poultices and of mustard as an emetic. As a remedy for the stings of scorpions and serpents they pounded it, mixed it with vinegar and applied it to the wound.

They also made a drink out of it, fermenting the seed in a fiery spirit. The liquor thus produced they called mustum ardens, which means burning wine. The word mustard is probably derived from this.—New York World.

Flying Fish.

Interesting are the habits of the flying fish, that queer denizen of the sea found principally in the region of the trade winds. "Does it rise from the sea like a bird?" you ask. No. It shoots out of the waves like an arrow and with outspreading wings sails on the wind in graceful curves, rising sometimes, one might say, to the height of fifteen feet, but not often so high, and then, lowering, it again touches the crest of a wave and renews its flight. This operation may be repeated till it covers a distance, say, of 500 yards in the case of the stoutest on the wing, though very often not half that distance is covered. A ship sailing through the trade winds will often be visited on dark nights by flying fish, which hit the sails or rigging and fall on deck, where, of course, they soon give up life.—St. Nicholas.

The Inconsolable Widower.

"There is only one inconsolable widower and that is the ostrich," said the zoo keeper. "The ostrich, if his mate dies, never remarries.

"He is also the most faithful of husbands, a sequence not always inevitable. He waits on his wife like a chevalier. He digs the nest for her. Of the forty days' setting he does the hardest share; he does the night work, covering the eggs from sunset till late the next morning.

"Sometimes, naturally, domestic complications occur, and the ostrich kicks. He kicks, in fact, his wife to death.

"But what a consolation it must be to her as she passes away to think that he will remain true and constant to her memory and never, never seek another mate."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Easiest Way.

Two little fellows were exchanging confidences one afternoon on the front steps.

"Gee," said one, "I hate to have bedtime come. My mother wants me to take a bath every night."

"So does mine," remarked the other little boy, "but I don't mind it. My father is a doctor, and ma always gets him to chloroform me, so I never know a thing about it until it's all over."—Detroit Free Press.

Bark of the Dog.

Wild dogs do not bark—that is to say, the explosive sound so familiar to us as the "bark" of our dogs is never heard from any species of wild dog. Wild dogs growl, snarl, howl, but they never give a real bark. The true bark of the domesticated dog is the result of his long association with man and of his attempt to "speak" in answer to his master's voice.—New York American.

Locating a Quarrel.

"And when you were abroad on your honeymoon trip did you visit the palace of peace at The Hague?" asked the girl friend of the bride just home from abroad.

"Oh, yes," was the reply. "We had our first quarrel there."—Yonkers Statesman.

How It Worked.

Madge—Have you really found that absence makes the heart grow fonder? Marjorie—Indeed I have! Since Charlie went away I've learned to love Jack ever so much more.—Lippincott's.

I'm very kind to cooks, but still it rile a man, you know,
To figure from the kitchen's smell she's burning up his dough.

"Did you see how the tango has got into the silk trade?"

"That so? Now we'll have even the silkworms doing the proper wriggle."—Baltimore American.

He had a grievance, figure indeed.
He said, as he stated it,
"If I am going to succeed
I'll surely have to hide it!"

Turn and Turn About.

It was sometimes the custom of professors in former times to give free tickets for their courses—a kindness that was sometimes abused. In "The Book of Edinburgh Anecdotes" Francis Watt tells how the famous Dr. John Barclay, extramural lecturer on anatomy at the University of Edinburgh between 1797 and 1825, once applied a humorous corrective to an imposition of this kind.

He received a note from Dr. Laing, the well known antiquary, requesting a free ticket for a young medical student. Barclay professed himself delighted to confer the favor, but invited the pupil to accompany him to Dr. Laing's bookshop, where he selected books on anatomy to the exact value of a ticket for his course of lectures. Then, sagely remarking that without textbooks his lectures were useless, he presented the books to the astonished youth as a gift from Dr. Laing. He would not listen to the young man's expostulation, but bundled him and the books out of the shop. He did not find it necessary to repeat the lesson.

Work of the Inventors.

Manufacturers are almost daily in receipt of communications from inventors inclosing patent specifications covering an invention aimed to improve their product. It is a mistake on the part of manufacturers to view such inventors as impostors. The position that "an outsider cannot know more about our own business than ourselves" is a fallacy that has no place in modern industrial management. If it were necessary to prove that such a position is a fallacy thousands of inventions could be cited whereby improvements, many revolutionary, in industrial processes and products were first conceived in the minds of men not even remotely connected with the industries most vitally affected and benefited thereby.—American Machinist.

In the Balance.

"Give me two seats in the balance," said a man, stepping up to the box office window the other afternoon.

"In the what?" asked the ticket seller, fearing that she had misunderstood.

"I said I wanted two seats in the balance," said the man.

The ticket seller racked her brain trying to solve the puzzle, and, finally giving it up, she asked the man to explain just what he wanted.

"On this sign out here it says balcony 25 cents for the first three rows. It says, balance 15 cents. I want two in the balance."

Then the ticket seller understood.—Exchange.

Nerves Were So Bad

THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Followed Suit.

On the day of the admission of M. Rostand to the French academy the author of "Cyrano" and "L'Aiglon" gave a breakfast to a few of his friends, the guest of honor being Mme. Bernhardt. The actress was dressed in a handsome gown, which had been made expressly for the occasion. At the end of the breakfast she arose and in an impressive manner took a glass, held it high and said, "I drink to the greatest of French dramatists, M. Rostand, and I drink after the Greek manner!" She then poured the contents of her glass over her head and gown.

Two of Rostand's small sons were sitting at a side table wearing new velvet suits, also made for the occasion. In the silence which followed Bernhardt's dramatic tribute the elder of the boys arose and, imitating her manner, said, "I drink to the greatest of poets, my papa, and I also drink in the Greek fashion!" and straightway deluged himself and his small brother with the contents of his glass.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

Making Montenegro.

The peasants of Montenegro have a quaint legend to account for the rock strewn appearance of their country. They will tell you that when the world was being created the Creator and the angel of creation were flying over chaos. The angel was carrying in a sacks the rocks which were to make the mountains of the world when suddenly the sack burst, the rocks fell down, and—that is Montenegro!

Not Strange at All.

Mrs. Wheeler's family and the new baby were being freely discussed by their next door neighbor.

"Isn't it strange they didn't name the baby after her rich uncle?" said one.

"No; he looked at it and said he'd give them $15,000 not to."—Lippincott's.

Needed Airing.

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Borem hotly, "I've got a right to air my opinions, haven't I?"

"Oh, of course," replied Brightly. "They're so stale and musty they certainly need something of that sort."—Philadelphia Press.

Told All He Knew.

Pett Ridge, the English humorist, told a story of two American ladies who boarded one of the old horse omnibuses in London and, having settled down on the front seat on top, proceeded to bombard the unfortunate driver with questions about the places they were passing.

The driver reached the limit of his patience in Trafalgar square.

"Look here, ladies," he exclaimed as he started his horses up the hill toward Charing Cross road, "that's the monument to Nelson on the left. St. Martin's church is 'ere on the right. Further on we pass the Garrick and Wyndham's, the back entrance to the Alhambra and the 'Ippodrome; a bit 'igher up, if all goes well, the Palace; further on we reach the Oxford and the 'Orseshoe. Halfway up Tott'nham Court road, if Providence is good to us, we shall see Whitefield's tabernacle and not much then till we get to the Cobden statue, 'igher up still the Britannia and eventually the Adelaide, where we stop and go no further.

"And," with a flick of his whip, "this is the bus, them's the 'orses, and I'm the poor bloomin' driver, and now you know pretty nigh as much about it all as I do!"

Japanese Limburger.

Perhaps the most conspicuous among the Japanese vegetables are the long white radishes, called daikon (referred to by foreigners as the Japanese limburger) highly esteemed and eaten by all classes. When boiled they are not unlike turnips, but when pickled the odor of putrefaction is singularly offensive to foreigners. Slices of the pickled product are served as a relish with every native meal. The beautiful dark violet fruit of the eggplant (nasu) partly cooked fresh in soup or salted and used instead of daikon is also much esteemed. Several varieties of mushrooms (take) are popular. The decline of Buddhism and the adoption of western customs has wrought a marked change in Japanese diet. Milk, cheese, butter, eggs, bread, flour, fowls, wild game, fish in limitless quantities and the like are consumed by whosoever (outside the priesthood) can afford them—Kansas City Star.

The First Carpet.

The first carpet ever seen in East Hampton, N. Y., was in Parson Lyman Beecher's house. One day a little money came from Uncle Lot Benton, the good angel of the Beecher family. With it young Lyman bought the cotton; his wife, Roxana, spun it, had it woven and painted it over in all colors, with a gay border round the edge and groups of flowers in the center.

When the new carpet was laid down the people were astounded at the magnificence of the pastor's parlor. Good old Deacon Talmadge, coming one day, stopped at the door, afraid to enter.

"Walk in, deacon," said the pastor.

"I can't," he answered, "'thout steppin' on't. D'ye think," he added, in wondering admiration, "ye can have all that and heaven too?" — Youth's Companion.

Fitting Homes to Salaries.

"Buy your house according to your salary."

Larger employers of labor in smaller communities where it can be done successfully are quite generally urging their workmen to buy and not rent homes. In one such plan I notice that no workman is permitted to buy a house under the company's plan which will cost over one-fifth of his monthly wages. The company builds a house for $1,500. It sells this to an employee upon payment of $15 for 100 consecutive months, or an $1,500 house for 100 monthly payments of $18. But the employer will not sell a $1,500 house to a man whose wages are less than $75 a month, or five times the required payment.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Head of the Maltese Woman.

In his book "The Odd Man in Malta" John Wignacourt describes the ancient faldetta worn by the beautiful Maltese women—a black hood arched over the head with a strip of whalebone and held in place by a hand carrying all the jewelry that is available: "It is worn by the rich when they go to church and by the poor always. * * * Its appearance is somewhat somber and depressing, and the efforts to look around the corner cause a great number of the women to be cross eyed. Still, it is a thoroughly inerradicable fashion and has great possibilities, since it is difficult to tell who is underneath it."

Rye Grass.

Rye grass is believed to be the oldest grass specially raised for forage, having been thus cultivated in England more than two centuries ago.

Even Fiction Fails.

"Truth is stranger than fiction."

"That is why I give my wife fiction. She'll barely believe that."—Kansas City Journal.

Bill's Terrible Condition.

There was only a thin partition between the bar parlor and the taproom of the suburban hostelry, writes "H." in the Manchester Guardian, so that I could not help hearing what was perhaps a confidence about a certain Bill's terrible condition the previous afternoon. "Well, to cut a long story short," said the voice, which was husky, probably with emotion, "I had to set 'im on a doorstep and leave 'im there. 'E must 'a' fell asleep, and 'is 'at dropped on to t' footpath, an', would yer believe it, when 'e woke up there was 11 pence in it."

THE GIRLS THEY LEFT BEHIND

The two women were alone in the car—the little bobtail car drawn by a couple of pokey little mules that once every hour crept drowsily from the heart of the southern town to the cemetery on its outskirts.

One woman was white-hajred and wrinkled, with an old-fashioned bonnet with strings tied under her chin, old-fashioned full skirts billowing out from under a queer sort of dolman, and in her black-mitted hands a bunch of old-fashioned garden flowers—dahlias, paeonies, pansies, sweet william, pinks—the whole heavily spiked with stiff sprigs of mignonette and thickly fringed in bleeding-hearts.

The other woman still had a girlish prettiness about her — a young fluffiness of soft brown hair, young pink and white skin, and, although severely plain, her mourning was strictly up-to-date—the date of the year following the Spanish War—while in her hands she held a dozen long-stemmed American Beauty roses.

It was a whiff of fragrance from the American Beauty roses that had brought that sudden choking lump to her throat. For it had been American Beauties that Dick had sent her for the last dance that he had taken her to. A whole glorious box full. She had selected the biggest and loveliest to wear at her belt. It went so well with her dress—a creamy organdie sprigged in pink made over green silk; went so well, Dick declared, with the bright glow on her cheeks.

The rest of the roses had decorated her room as long as they lasted; then been thrown out, as is the brief, sweet fashion of roses. But the one rose she had kept; put it away with all the memories of that evening's girlish happiness—the dances that she and Dick danced together, the dances that they sat out, the walk home in the moonlight, the little intimate talk at the gate.

It seemed such a little while ago—as though the dance had been only the week before. Yet so many things had happened since.

The roses suddenly blurred, and with a young girl's horror at showing emotion she fiercely bit her twitching lips. But, try as she would, she could not push back the thoughts of the past that swept over her in a rush of pain.

Dick's enlistment. The first leave-taking, when he went to Tampa. His jolly letters from the temporary camp. The telegram that his regiment had been ordered to Cuba. The hurried trip South with her aunt. The bittersweet last day she and Dick spent together. The excitement and the thrill of the morning, when "the boys" marched to the transport. The flying flags; the bands playing their patriotic medleys; the line upon line of eager, marching feet; the line upon line of eager, boyish faces. And the blank days of separation—with radiant flashes when dear, long, scrawly letters came. The glad news at last that the was was over—that Dick was on his way home.

Again she caught a whiff of fragrance from the roses—a whiff of fragrance that stabbed like a knife. For it had been an American Beauty rose that she slipped into his hand at the hospital at Tampa—and he had opened his eyes and seen it and smiled.

The twitching lips gave way. She could no longer blink back the tears. They streamed down her cheeks in an abandon of grief.

The other woman in the car, who had been stealthily watching, turned away her head, hesitated, then quickly rose, crossed over, and impulsively put an arm about the sobbing girl.

"I know all about it, dear," she said tenderly.

The younger woman did not repel the older woman's advances — did not draw away from the gentle pressure of the encircling arm. The stranger's sympathy was too genuine—too straight-from-the-heart to be resented as an impertinence. But the words held no comfort. The older woman did not know all about it. It was hard to lose a son—perhaps an only son. But at least the other woman had had a son to lose. Had been a bride, a wife, a mother, while sh—oh, it was a very different thing to have your whole future stripped from you when you were only on the threshold of life—when you had not yet entered into living!

"These were his favourite flowers?" asked the older woman, gently touching an unfolding bud.

The girl nodded. "He always insisted," she answered, with a catch in her voice, "that they reminded him of me."

A shy pink softly spread over the older woman's faded cheeks as she looked down at the old-fashioned garden flowers in her own hand.

"He used to say the same of this sort of bouquet."

The girl wanly smiled. It was a dear thing for a boy to say of his mother.

"It was a bouquet like this," the older woman went quietly on, "that he gathered and gave me the last time we went to a party together."

The girl started and stared. The stranger had talked so quietly—so sanely she had not guessed that anything was wrong with her mind.

"The party," the quiet voice continued, "was at Judge Thorndyke's. We played croquet in the afternoon. Then came supper—a fried chicken and strawberry shortcake supper. And after that we danced."

The girl listened indulgently. "That must have been many years ago?"

"A whole lifetime ago," said the older woman in the same quiet voice. "When I was a girl like you. That is the reason I understand. Because I've been through it all. The saying good-bye. The watching and the waiting. The hopes and the fears. The ache of emptiness afterward. You are young and will get over it—the first shock, the first overwhelming grief of it—you would be selfish, cowardly, if you buried yourself in sorrow for the rest of your days. But always there will be something gone from you—something that you 'have missed, lost for ever.' It is the way a woman lays down her life—her gift of sacrifice to her country, a cause."

"But I do not understand," cried the girl. "I thought—The one whom you speak of—The one who used to say that a bouquet like you're carrying made him think of you—"

"Dick?" said the older woman in the same quiet tone. "He and I were girl and boy sweethearts — engaged to be married. Then the war came and he enlisted—and was killed at Antetam."

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind. — "My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know." — Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

They're Non-Skid

These bicycle tires have the well-known All-Weather tread, the same tread, only in reduced size, as the famous Goodyear Automobile Tires.

The diamond shaped blocks hug and grip the road. The sharp edges prevent slipping—give greater traction—greater safety.

And Goodyear Bicycle Tires add to the appearance of the bicycle. They are made of finest white rubber. Both rubber and fabric are laboratory tested for unusual service.

GOODYEAR TORONTO
Bicycle Tires

These tires are made in the same great Bowmanville plant with Goodyear Automobile Tires.

All Goodyear experience and quality are centered on each tire.

It is comforting to know that the tires you ride are so well made

Greater Mileage

All this means greater mileage—longer lived tires—least trouble, greatest satisfaction all 'round.

Then why take a chance with others when Goodyears give you such fine service at the same price?

You don't have to insist on Goodyears. All dealers like to sell them. They mean satisfied customers.

NERVOUS CHILDREN

The Trouble is Often Really St. Vitus Dance — Do Not Neglect It

Many a child has been called awkward, has been punished in school for not keeping still or for dropping things, when the trouble was really St. Vitus dance. This disease may appear at any age, but is most common between the ages of six and fourteen years. It is caused by thin blood which fails to carry sufficient nourishment to the nerves, and the child becomes restless and twitching of the muscles and jerking of the limbs and body follow. In severe cases the child is unable to hold anything or feed itself. St. Vitus dance is cured by building up the blood. The most successful treatment is to remove the child from all mental excitement, stop school work and give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills renew the blood supply, strengthen the nerves, and restore the child to perfect health. Here is proof of their power to cure. Mrs. Geo. A. MacDonald, Harrington, N.S., says: "My son was attacked by St. Vitus dance; at the outset his muscles would twitch and his step was weak and jerky. We called in a doctor who treated him, but notwithstanding he continued to grow worse and at last grew so bad that he could not hold a cup of tea in his hand, while his head constantly twitched, and his speech became rather indistinct. At this juncture I saw in a paper the cure of a boy from similar trouble through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We at once sent for a supply and in a few weeks after he began their use there was considerable improvement and it was not long after this before he was completely cured, and has never had a symptom of the trouble since. I am convinced that there is no medicine like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the cure of St. Vitus dance.

If your dealer does not keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Nice Discrimination.

The subtleties of the Paris furniture dealers, to whom American millionaires bid for ancient patterns, were illustrated in a case before a civil court. In this case the plaintiff was a Frenchman, M. Balbo, who at a sale bought for $100 a mahogany desk which was described to him as an "empire" desk. It proved, however, to be of modern make, and M. Balbo sued the seller for giving a false trade description. The defense was illuminating. It was set out that there are three ways of describing such furniture: "Empire style" means modern furniture imitated from old models; "empire furniture" indicates there is a doubt as to its origin, and "empire epoque" is the only guaranty for authentic furniture of the empire period.—Indianapolis News.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeaon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DAILY FASHION HINT.

No. 6,696, Lady's Kimono.

Even in the kimono we find the new sleeves, which, while cut in one with the body, have a seam down the outer arm in the prevailing mode. In this model the closing is diagonal and there is a handsome collar at the sides and back of the open neck. The sleeves may be full length or shorter.

The kimono pattern, No. 6,696, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5¼ yards of 40 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Greek Meets Greek.

A careful mother whose baby had fallen asleep in his carriage in the park found in seeking to make him comfortable that the sun was shining from one direction and a cold wind blowing from another. After careful consideration and numerous turnings she decided to risk his tightly closed eyes to a little sunshine rather than to expose him to the chilly breeze.

As she seated herself a stern voice spoke.

"I don't know who your mistress is," it said, "but I shall make it my business to find out and report you to her. The idea of your risking this baby's eyes in that sunshine! I am a doctor's wife."

Several times did the careful mother attempt vainly to interrupt and explain. Then "I am grateful for your interest, madam," she said, "and I happen to be this child's mother. Also I, too, am a doctor's wife and a nurse as well."

As the stern voice moved on she turned to another careful mother on the bench.

"I knew this coat was old," she said, "but do I look as bad as that?"—New York Post.

The Arms of Glasgow.

The explanation of the coat of arms of Glasgow is curious. On it are an oak tree with a bell hanging on one of its branches, a bird at the top of the tree and a salmon, with a ring in its mouth, at the base.

St. Kentigern, in the seventh century, took up his abode on the site of the present city of Glasgow. Upon an oak in the clearing he hung a bell to summon the savages to worship, hence the oak and bell.

A queen, having formed an attachment to a soldier, gave him a precious ring, which the king had given her. The king, aware of the fact, stole upon the soldier in sleep, abstracted the ring, threw it into the Clyde and then asked the queen for it. The queen, in alarm, applied to St. Kentigern, who went to the Clyde, caught a salmon with the ring in its mouth, handed it to the queen and was thus the means of restoring peace to the royal couple.—Pearson's Weekly.

Man's Possibilities.

Man is the crowning work of God on earth; but, though so nobly endowed, we must not forget that we are the lofty children of a race whose lowest forms lie prostrate within the water, having no higher aspiration than the desire for food. And we cannot understand the possible degradation and moral wretchedness of man without knowing that his physical nature is rooted in all the material characteristics that belong to his type and link him even with the fish. The moral and intellectual gifts that distinguish him from them are his to use or abuse. He may, if he will, abjure his better nature and be vertebrate more than man. He may sink as low as the lowest of his type, or he may rise to a spiritual height that will make that which distinguishes him from the rest far more the controlling element of his being than that which unites him with them. —Agassiz.

Valor.

Blowhard sat discoursing upon valor to his ragged cronies.

"I," he blew, "fear no man who lives."

"But thou fearest me," rasped a midget vixen. "Home with thee!"

Blue gilled, he followed his wife, the crowd loud jeering.

Within she turned to those who soon filled the doorway.

"Mark ye," she blew, "that it is I who fear no man"—

"But thou fearest me," squeaked the littlest mouse in the county.

With a shriek of mad terror Dame Blowhard leaped chairward.

Whereupon the merry beggars held their aching sides.—Lippincott's.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

This is the season when she who would have a lily-white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolised wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discoloured, freckled, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolised wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

Sirius the Mighty.

Writing in the London Times as to the effect upon the earth if the gigantic star Sirius were as near to us as is our own sun, Mr. Scriven Bolos says that the change that would ensue in land and sky would transcend everything hitherto dreamed of. In the heavens would be poised a brilliant globe twenty-five times larger than the sun appears to us, emitting for millions of miles into space gigantic fire rays and coronal streamers. Bombarded by terrible heat, the earth would become red hot, its atmosphere dissipated, its vegetal covering erased. Its ocean basins turned into barren wastes, while iron would flow like water. The distance from us of Sirius, the brightest of the fixed stars, is so great that its rays require eight and a half years to reach us, notwithstanding that light travels 186,300 miles a second. Sirius travels through space at 1,000 miles a minute.

Met of a Frenchman.

It is rather a cruel fact of history that a large proportion of the early settlers in Australia were convicts and men who had failed to make good at home. Australia was fixed upon by the British government as a suitable spot for its outcasts because of its extreme distance. Although it is now years since the arrival of the last convict ship, Australians are still sensitive about this objectionable use of their country. Apropos, C. H. Jacomb, in his book on Australia, tells of an Australian who, in conversation with a Frenchman, wound up a long and boastful harangue on the excellence of his countrymen by saying, "We are the best chosen race in the world." "True," murmured the Frenchman. "You were most carefully chosen by the best English judges."

They Got Their Answers.

When the ship owning millionaire Sir Donald Currie was asked by a heckler at a political meeting at Greenwich if his father had not been the local barber, he admitted promptly. "It is true—and if your father had been a barber you would have been the same."

When Mr. Lloyd-George, who is proud of his lowly birth and bringing up, was asked a similar question, he scored as swiftly and even more severely. The heckler unwisely inquired if he remembered that his grandfather used to drive a donkey and cart. "You will have to forgive me, ladies and gentlemen," Mr. Lloyd-George apologised; "the cart had quite escaped my memory, but I see the donkey is living yet."

Birds That Shine in Dark.

That certain birds of prey are sometimes luminous at night is a fact well known to observant naturalists. It is explained by the presence on their feathers of the phosphorescent spores of certain fungi that grow upon the trees in which they roost. But the Bulletin of the National Acclimatization Society of France records the observation of a white swan that was luminous all night from July to October of last year, while none of the other birds that inhabited the same lake could be seen after dark.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

UNSIGHTLY HAIR MADE BEAUTIFUL BY THE USE OF NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

Many ladies are, and many more should be, ashamed when they look in a glass and see their hair.

The condition of some is almost a disgrace. It simply shows that while they may be scrupulously neat in every other way, they are careless about their hair.

Thin, scraggy, wispy hair, generally indicates dandruff which is due to a germ. Newbro's Herpicide will remove the dandruff and keep the scalp clean and healthy. This permits the hair naturally and luxuriantly and to take on that gloss and beauty which always follows the intelligent use of Herpicide. That annoying itching of the scalp which always goes with dandruff stops almost with the first application.

You may sometimes be offered "something just as good" but you will be better satisfied if you insist upon having the original dandruff germ killer, Newbro's Herpicide. If you wish to try this scalp prophylactic send 10 cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Company, Dept. R., Detroit, Mich. You will receive a sample size bottle of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the care of the hair by return mail.

Newbro's Herpicide is sold in 50-cent and $1.00 sizes at all drug and department stores. Applications obtained at the better barber shops and beauty parlours.

But a trial isn't necessary. There is no guesswork about Newbro's Herpicide. Just buy a bottle and use it. The results are sure to be better than you expect. Furthermore, satisfaction is guaranteed and should it fail to produce the results claimed your dealer will return your money.

The Secret of Youth.

Youth is what we all love to have and to hold, and since Ponce de Leon's time many a way of conserving it has been prescribed—dosage, drinking sour milk, systems of exercise, bathing, rubbing. Any one of these things may help the individual, but not every individual. And let us not forget that youth is in great measure a gift of the spirit. Children are young because for them life abounds. They find springs of energy within and stores of refreshment without. Wonder, curiosity, the enjoyment of 10,000 trifles, a short memory for punishment and pain—all these things make for youth. Quarrels, resentfulness, suspicion, worry, grouchiness—these bring harder lines around the mouth, hardened arteries, old age. Nothing is too small to delight a child, given the right conditions; nothing too big to darken, for very long, the spangled sky. That is the secret of youth. Draw the curtain, Master Manager! On with the human comedy!—Collier's.

Curiously Absentminded.

Henri Poincare, the famous French physicist and mathematician, was remarkably absentminded. One evening he was looking in a closed bookcase for a manuscript. During the search he set the lamp on a shelf in the case and in a moment of abstraction closed the door of the cabinet and sat down in darkness. After he had pondered for a time on the disappearance of the light he came to the conclusion that he had suddenly become blind. That seemed to him quite possible since his eyes were weak anyway, and he groaned at the thought of his deplorable condition. Suddenly to his surprise a stream of light appeared, coming from the adjoining room, and he remarked, with much satisfaction, "My sight seems to have come back again." Not even then did he think of the lamp in the bookcase!

Made the Match.

During his first stay in Washington as Chinese minister, Wu Ting Fang attended the wedding of the daughter of the chief justice of the supreme court and said to one of the bridesmaids:

"When will it be your turn to become a bride?"

"I do not know," she answered. "I have not yet been asked."

So the amiable Chinese minister said to one of a group of young men standing near by: "This is a beautiful lady. Would you not like to marry her?"

He replied, "I shall be most delighted to."

Both the young woman and the young man naturally were somewhat embarrassed by Mr. Wu's pleasantry * * * but three months later they were married.—New York Times.

Street Traffic of London.

The control of London traffic by the police has been a matter of slow evolution. A century ago, when George IV. dined with the lord mayor soon after his succession, it took his escort five hours to force a way through the crowd which filled the streets from his palace to the Guildhall. And it was not until about thirty years ago that the existing system of regulating traffic at crossings was instituted. At the beginning it required four policemen at every important junction to do with difficulty what two constables and sometimes one now effect by a motion of the hand. But the men in blue stuck to their task and hung on to horses' heads and summoned rebellious drivers till the reign of law and order was established.

Argentina Humor.

On the prairies of Argentina, where the chief mode of travel is by horseback, the ranchers often make use of the Spanish expression, "comprar tierra." The literal translation of that phrase is "to buy ground." The South American rough riders think that when you fall off your horse you occupy the ground where you land almost as if you owned it, and if you make much of a hole in the earth where you strike, as you are very likely to do when you are riding a fiery Argentine mount, they say that you have bought the ground and begun to dig the cellar for a house.—Youth's Companion.

Runaways.

"This paper," said Languid Lewis, "tells about a horse runnin' away with a woman and she was laid up for six weeks."

"That ain't so worse," rejoined Boastful Benjamin. "A friend of mine once ran away with a horse, and he was laid up for six years."

Some Kind of Rock.

"Say, waiter," said the traveling man to the hotel waiter, "what kind of chicken do you call this?"

"That's a Plymouth Rock, I believe," replied the waiter.

"I'm glad it has some claim to historical mention," said the man. "I thought it was just an ordinary cobblestone."

Rules of the Game.

"Better shave, old man."

"Why?"

"I expect they will play kissing games, and if so, you may find yourself disqualified for roughness."

Doesn't Forget His Glasses Now.

The London Lancet publishes the following letter:

"I happened to go into a restaurant in Holborn in the evening for a meal and sat at table about three-quarters of an hour eating dinner and afterwards smoking while thinking out a little problem, during which my eyes probably became, unknown to me, fixed in more or less of a stare. That evening I did not happen to wear my spectacles and could not distinguish details of anything a few feet away. Just before I rose to go out of the restaurant a man crossed the floor and boxed my ears, much to my astonishment; and said, 'Take that, you impudent young bounder, for glaring at me like that.' I was too astonished to say anything for a moment, thinking the man had taken leave of his senses, but before I could jump up to expostulate he had run out, so the irate diner never knew the truth that I had not seen him at all. I have always been careful since to wear my spectacles in like circumstances for fear of innocently giving offense."

"The man who writes the prospectus," replied he who had been stung. —Birmingham Age-Herald.

The advantage of riches remains with him who procured them, not with the heir.—Emerson.

Found a Friend In Dr. Chase

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This Home.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighbouring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

Taking Time by the Forelock.

A peculiar phenomenon was observed in east end society circles recently. A certain college youth barely twenty years of age has been making himself very agreeable and popular with a crowd of little girls. Now, twenty is the age when boys usually shun the society of children and spruce themselves up for "fussing" with their own contemporaries. But this youth flirts not, neither does he dance. The debutantes sigh after him, but in vain. He buys candy for maidens nine and ten years old, but none for their elder and presumably more attractive sisters.

"You like little girls, don't you, Paul?" asked somebody, kidding him.

"Oh, not particularly," he signed. "You see," he went on seriously, "it will be at least ten years before I shall be able to marry. By that time this season's ten-year-olds will be twenty and just right. Don't you think it is well to a man to begin early to make acquaintances in his own set?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It takes more than hot air to kill the germ of suspicion.

A Curious Army Toast.

Of all the British regiments the Welsh fusiliers have the most curious army toast. It forms part of the ceremony of the grand dinner given annually on St. David's day. After the dinner the drum major, accompanied by the goat, the mascot of the fusiliers, bedecked with rosettes of red and blue ribbon, marches around the table, carrying a plate of leeks. Every officer or guest who has never eaten one before is obliged to do so, standing on his chair with one foot on the table, while the drummers beat a roll behind his chair. He is then considered a true Welshman. All the toasts are coupled with the name of St. David. It is in much this way that the toast with highland honors is drunk. Each guest stands with one foot on his chair and one on the table and the pipers, a-piping, parade the room.

"Inn" and "Hotel."

The Saxon word "inn," taken in its present sense, was probably in use before the conquest, whereas the purely French word "hotel," as generally applied to "an inn of style and pretension," dates only from about the time when officers of the British army of occupation returned from Paris with enthusiastic accounts of Meurice's and a dozen other hostelries of the Rue de Rivoli and the Rue St. Honore which quite threw the humbler accommodation offered by the average British inn of that period into the shade. At the commencement of the nineteenth century Frenchmen taught the London innkeeper the science of hotel keeping, before the beginning of the twentieth the Englishman had begun to return the compliment.—Country Life.

The Palm Tree of Capri.

I knew a palm tree upon Capri. It stood in select society of shining fig leaves and lustrous oleanders. It overhung the balcony and so looked, far overlooking, down upon the blue Mediterranean. Through the dream mists of southern Italian moons it looked up the broad bay of Naples and saw vague Vesuvius melting away, or at sunset the isles of the Sirens, or in the full May moonlight the oranges of Sorrento. And from the Sorrento where Tasso was born it looked across to pleasant Posilippe, where Vergil is buried, and to stately Ischia. The palm of Capri saw all that was fairest and most famous in the bay of Naples.—George William Curtis.

Burton's One Book.

Robert Burton, who was buried in Christchurch cathedral, Oxford, was an author of one book and one book only. His "Anatomy of Melancholy" has been a favorite of many celebrated authors. Milton, Byron and Lamb were impressed by it; Sterne was greatly indebted to it, and Dr. Johnson avowed that this was the only book that could tempt him out of bed two hours before his usual time of rising. Such praise, coming from so great a worthy, stimulated public interest in a deservedly valuable work which had been allowed to fall into obscurity.

Too Often.

George Ade in his quality of cynical bachelor said at the Chicago Athletic club:

"I was sitting with a little girl of eight the other afternoon. She looked up from her Hans Andersen and said:

"'Does m-i-s-s-i-s-s spell marriage, Mr. Ade?'

"'Yes, my child,' said I."—Exchange.

FOSSAL BALM

Goes Right to the Spot

If you have a cold in the head—if your nasal passages are inflamed, stuffed up, smarting—or if you suffer from chronic nasal catarrh—you can get quick relief by using Fossal Balm.

This is an antiseptic, healing salve put up in a collapsible tube so formed as to make it remarkably easy to use. When the elongated cap is removed it uncovers the nozzle-shaped end of the tube, about half an inch long. This is inserted in the nose and the tube squeezed gently, depositing a little of the Balm well up in the nasal passages. A little rubbing of the nose, and the indrawn breath, distribute the Fossal Balm throughout the passages, where it comes directly into contact with the inflamed membranes and the germs of disease. The latter it kills — the former it soothes and heals. The smarting irritation disappears — the nostrils are cleared, making breathing easy—and the catarrhal conditions, if they exist, are corrected.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist, or write for it direct to us. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal.

ULSTER OUTLOOK IS GROWING UNSATISFACTORY

Unionist Leaders Have Gone Back on the Advances Already Made and Are Welcoming Prospect of Hostilities.

VOLUNTEERS ACTIVE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 13—The Ulster outlook is growing unsatisfactory. There is no sign of agreement between the opposing sides. The Unionist leaders have gone back on the advances already made and the Ulster chiefs are increasingly welcoming the prospect of hostilities. The party of firmness has won the upper hand in the Cabinet and unless unexpected developments come the government will in the amending bill simply repeat its former offer of six years' exclusion by a County vote, expressing a willingness to consider the suggestions proposed by the other side, thus hoping to gain a tactical advantage by compelling Ulster to show what it will accept.

Numerous influential outsiders, such as the Archbishop of York, who are working for peace, seem powerless to effect anything. Too much stress must not be placed on the quiescence of Ulster. The calm is only surface deep. Military preparations continue unceasingly to advance. Every day makes the preparations of the Unionists' and Nationalists' volunteers more formidable. The "Nation," discussing the prospect, if the Lords throw out the amending bill, says: "If that happens the bit is in Ulster's mouth, and it is a matter for the law and the police. The British Government cannot face Europe and the country with rebellion unveiled in Ulster.

STREET RAILWAY SERVICE RESTORED

C. G. E. and Jackson Park Cars Covering the Usual Routes

ROADBED IS FIRM

The Street Railway system is complete again in the Jackson Park and C.G.E. sections. The track from George Street to Bethune Street has not been used during the street construction work, but the inconvenience of the past weeks is forgotten in the comfort of riding over a smooth, fine roadbed. The Antrim Street switch is completed, the turn-out on Romaine Street is nearly finished, and other incidentals will be added in a short time, making the system complete. Peterborough will have one of the best Street Railway systems in Canada for a city of this size. The utility of the turnout at the corner of George and Charlotte Streets is already manifesting itself. With the service at its best in the near future there will be no confusion or delay at this busy corner.

W.C.T.U. IS FOR ROWELL

Local Branch at a Special Meeting Yesterday Endorses the Policy of the Liberal Leader

WILL WORK FOR HIM

A special meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wilson Taylor, 780 Water Street, to consider a letter from the Provincial Union regarding the temperance situation

The unions of the province are asked "to cast aside all party affiliations and to aid by voice, pen and influence, the man who has come out boldly on our platform of abolishing the bar." "Let us feel that we have the right to ask the men who vote upon this supremely important question to cast their ballot this time in the interests of home, the women and the children."

The meeting was well attended and after an interesting discussion the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, that we, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Peterborough most heartily endorse Mr. Rowell's policy to abolish the bar, and that we will support by our influence the man who will vote to abolish the bar.

A stirring address on the needs of the hour was given by Miss Lucy Buod, a whiteribboner from England, who is visiting at the home of Judge Huycke, and has been taking part in the temperance campaign in Portland, Oregon.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting on June 25th instead of in September this year.

FIRE DRILL IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Chief Howard Conducted Annual Test at all Schools, and Party Who Accompanied Him Were Greatly Pleased at Showing

EXCELLENT TIME MADE

Fire Chief Howard conducted fire drills in all the Public and Separate schools yesterday. He was accompanied by His Worship Mayor Buller, Ald. G. Walter Green, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, and Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education. In addition to a party of visitors from Toronto, there were a number of ladies, Mrs. G. Walter Green, Mrs. W. Buller, Mrs. and Miss Morrison and Mrs. Howard. The party left the Fire Station in automobiles at 1.30 p.m. and were finished by 3.45 p.m. Fire drill in schools is very interesting and the ladies and gentlemen of the party thoroughly enjoyed the pretty features of the drill. It will be interesting to know that no notice was given about fire drill being conducted, the Fire Chief simply telephoned the gentlemen that he wished them to accompany him on the trip a few moments before starting, and requested them to invite the ladies. At each school the fire gong was sounded and the children marched out in a very orderly manner, without the slightest confusion. The time made at each school is given below, which will be interesting for the parents to note. In conversation with the Chief at the conclusion of the fire drills it was learned by reference to the records that some of the schools have made a great improvement in the time required to clear the building of all the children. In the year 1908 it required a minute and 43 seconds to clear one of the schools. On that occasion Mr. Harry Rush was Mayor. Since that time that particular school has been able to lop off several seconds each year and yesterday the time was made in 46 seconds.

The schools were visited in the following order:

School	No. Pupils.	Time.
Central	350	55 secs.
East Ward	270	32 secs.
Queen Alexandra	300	75 secs.
West Ward	425	94 secs.
St. Peter's	375	46 secs.
South Central	325	39 secs.
King Edward	440	46 secs.
St. Mary's	215	39 secs.
Sacred Heart	270	26 secs.

At the Sacred Heart school where all the classes had been removed to the second storey of the building for the purpose of taking a singing lesson, and at the King Edward school, which has the largest attendance of any school in the City, and a number of classes on the third storey at the time, the time made is considered excellent.

EIGHT NEW STORES ABOUT TO OPEN IN SECTIONS OF CITY

This Means That Each Must Pay $100 Under Transient Traders' By-law as a Guarantee of Faith—Money Returned in Form of Taxes

PROTECTION TO MERCHANTS

The average citizen may not know that a local by-law requires every person who is opening a new retail business in the City to pay $100 in the form of a fee. This matter has been emphasized of late by frequent mention to transient traders. In short everyone is regarded as a transient who opens a new business.

The clause of the City by-law is as follows :

"Every transient trader or other person whose name has not been entered on the Assessment Roll of the City of Peterborough in respect of income or business assessment for the then current year or whose name has been entered therefrom for the first time in respect to income or business assessment and who may offer goods, wares and merchandise for sale in any other manner shall before commencing to trade, take out a license authorising him to offer said goods, wares and merchandise for sale, for which said license the person obtaining the same shall pay a fee of $100, and the sum so paid shall be credited to the person paying it, on account of taxes thereafter payable by him in the City of Peterborough."

This is not the entire Act but it covers practically every case. Mr. N. C. Cameron states that he knows of at least eight businesses that are opening or about to open, which means that fees amounting to $800 will be received from them, but this money will be returned to the business men by crediting it against their taxes.

The bylaw applies to the small grocer on the outskirts and to everyone else opening a retail business of any kind. The fee is charged as a guarantee of good faith that the retailer intends to remain in the business. In this way a measure of protection is offered the other business men.

BIG OCEAN LINERS COLLIDED IN A FOG

American Liner New York and the Hamburg American Steamer in Difficulties off Long Island---The Damage Was Not Serious as Both Vessels Were Going Slowly

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 13—The American liner "New York" has wireleased that she collided during a dense fog, this morning, about 3.30, with the Hamburg-American liner "Pretoria," just off Long Island. The message states that the blow was just a glancing one and the damage was not serious. Both steamers proceeded. They were going very slowly when the collision occurred, and another "Empress" calamity was thus avoided.

BODY OF WRECK VICTIM FOUND 300 MILES AWAY

Examiner Special:

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., June 13.—The body of a girl clothed in night dress, supposed to be one of the victims of the Empress of Ireland, has been washed ashore on the north coast of P. E. Island three hundred miles from the scene of the disaster.

War Clouds Are All Gone

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, June 13. — The Army and Navy authorities who have been anticipating opportunities to distinguish themselves in Mexico are to-day resigning themselves to the realization that there is now practically no prospect of war. Intimations have been given that a protocol has been prepared by the mediators at Niagara Falls that will probably be acceptable to both the United States and Mexico. It will provide that the Government of Mexico will be placed temporarily, till the election ensues, in the hands of some power acceptable to the United States. The diplomacy of President Wilson and his unexampled patience, have apparently conquered the dogs of war.

INTERNATIONAL POLO GAME THIS AFTERNOON

Examiner Special:

MEADOW BROOK, Long Island, June 13—At four o'clock this afternoon the seventh battle for the International polo trophy between the teams of the leading Polo ists of Great Britain and the United States opened here. The best two out of three matches takes the cup. Both teams at this morning's practice, seemed perfectly fit. There will be a large crowd of spectators and the keenest contest on record this afternoon.

NEVER SAW BETTER CAMPING GROUNDS

Mr. Meserve, the new secretary of the Y.M.C.A., went up to Clear Lake yesterday to look over the camping ground, and reports that he never saw a better place for a boys' camp and a safer place for swimming.

Quite a number of men and boys are taking advantage of the baths and swimming tank this hot weather.

A special ticket is being issued for the summer months, which gives anybody all the privileges of the Association till Sept. 1st, for $2.00.

ARRANGING FOR FRATERNAL SUNDAY ON 28TH

Nearly all the Societies in Peterboro' Will Participate and the Event Will be the Biggest of the Kind Held Here

MEETING TO-MORROW

A meeting of all the delegates from the various fraternal societies will be held to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to complete arrangements in connection with Fraternal Sunday which will take place on June 28th. This is the last meeting that will be held and it is expected that all the arrangements will be finished. Any one who is a member of a fraternal society will be made welcome at the meeting, as it is desired to enlist the interest of every person concerned in the work.

The committee appointed from the delegates are receiving every encouragement and the progress made up to the present seems to indicate that Fraternal Sunday in Peterborough will be a memorable one. The Committee would be pleased if the clergy would give due notice from the pulpit by way of announcement from the pulpit, not only to-morrow but on following Sundays

Mr. Dawson Kennedy has been appointed President and Mr. W. A. Howard, Marshall. The fraternal societies that are taking part (the Oddfellows are still considering the matter of participating) are as follows:

Knights of Pythias.
Independent Order of Foresters.
Sons of England.
Five lodges of Orangemen.
The Ancient Order of United Workmen.
Protestant Benevolent Association,
The Woodmen of the World.

In western cities Fraternal Sunday has been commemorated with splendid success. If the success anticipated attends the efforts of those working for it this year the affair will probably become an annual one and a Fraternal Field Day of sports may also be held when fraternal societies from a radius of fifty miles around will be asked to take part.

MARKET QUESTION WILL BE DEALT WITH NEXT WEEK

The special committee appointed to deal with the market question and composed of merchants and members of the Property committee will hold a meeting next week, when the first considerations will be given the matter. The changes which the merchants advocate are as follows:

1st.—That a suitable building be erected for a butter market. The butter market to be on the main floor.

2nd.—That a strip on the inside of the market sidewalk be paved or laid with granolithic for rigs.

3rd.—That both sidewalk and strip be covered, protected from the rain.

4th—That weighing of fowl be not compulsory.

5th—That weight of butter be allowed when averaging 16 ozs. No piece being lighter than 15 ounces.

6th—That the privileges of the market be allowed only to producers. That no person be allowed to sell meat or anything else in any quantity on the market unless he has grown the same on his premises. That no person be allowed to sell fresh on the market in less quantity than qrs.

7th—That dealers and large buyers be allowed to buy on the market after nine o'clock a.m.

Cannot Fish Until the 16th

Mr. John Watt, Fishery Inspector, reminds the public that the fishing season does not open until June 16th. Many people have the impression that they may fish on the 15th, but this date is included in the close season, according to the Game and Fisheries Law. The legal catch this year is eight bass and four 'lunge a day. The bass must be 10 in. or more in length and the 'lunge at least 24 inches.

Typos Won From the Hams

The Typos defeated the Wm. Hamilton Company team in an interesting Mercantile League fixture at the Exhibition Grounds last night by 6 to 2. The Typos put the game on ice in the second innings when they scored four runs. The teams were as follows:

Typos—Neary lf, O'Connor p, Taylor c, Henry 1b, Rose m, Moore 2b, Curtis rf, Cook ss, Butcher 3b.

Wm. Hamilton's—O'Dette c, Murphy 2b, Newbigging 3b, Crane 1b, Giroux ss, O'Hern rf, Rose p, Condin m, Quartermaine lf.

MRS. STEVENS WILL SPEAK ON TEMPERANCE

Mrs. E. A. Stevens, provincial secretary of the Y.W.C.A. will address the ladies of Peterborough in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon on the temperance question. A large audience will undoubtedly hear Mrs. Stevens.

The Street Paving Contractors Will Soon Be Finished

The street paving contractors, Foley and Gleason, are on the last lap of their contract in Peterborough. All that remains to be completed is the laying of the asphalt topping on Charlotte street. Quite a section of the street has already been finished, and it is expected that next week the contractors should reach Bethune street. Some of the citizens have been enquiring about any additional work to be done this year. The Council will soon be ready to consider new tenders for the streets which have been suggested for paving, and it is likely that something will be done in the near future if the Council is really prepared to advance the work this summer. It is understood that the present contractors will leave the city on the completion of their work here.

Fire Totally Destroys Home

House of Mrs. John Smith, South Monaghan, Burned to Ground

The home of Mrs. John Smith, South Monaghan, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The fire was caused by a spark from a chimney on the summer kitchen, and the house being of frame, it was soon wiped out. Neighbours were called by telephone and quickly responded. The contents of the house were all saved, but the building which was a storey and a half, was completely burned to the ground. The loss is in the neighbourhood of $1,000, and is partly covered by insurance. The house was situated about nine miles from Peterborough.

To-morrow At Murray St. Church

The Murray Street Sunday School began its summer morning sessions last Sunday under the most encouraging auspices. To-morrow morning the school will meet at 10 o'clock, and at 11 the pastor will preach a sermon to the Sunday School and its friends. The teachers and officers are making an effort to have every pupil of the school present, as well as the parents and friends.

REGISTER! REGISTER!

The registration of those who are entitled to vote and are not on the voters' list, ends to-day. The qualifications for a registered voter are as follows: He must be a British subject 21 years, in the riding three months, and in Canada a year preceding the first day for registration. All those who are supporting Mr. Gillespie's candidature are kindly asked to see that their names are on the list. The information may be obtained from Gillespie's Committee Room, on Water Street. The registration now being held is for the City of Peterborough only and not for the entire riding.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1914

LOCAL OPTION CREDIT.

At the Opera House meeting on Thursday night, Hon. Mr. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, with others, claimed great merit for the Whitney Government's great work for the promotion of temperance. Among other things he claimed the triumphs of local option under his government, and exhibited a map intended to show the advance in local option. Mr Duff boasted of the amendment to this law which compelled municipalcouncils to submit a local option by-law, properly signed. That was an advance, but all its benefits were neutralized many times over by the passing of the vote-killing three-fifths' clause. In his manifesto to the electors Sir James Whitney "points with pride" to the fact that 1200 liquor licenses have been cut off the nine years he has been in power. This is not due to the Whitney Government, but to the Local Option Act passed by a Liberal Government and brought into operation by the friends of temperance. But if it had not been for the Whitney Government's three-fifths' clause, which destroyed the force of a simple majority and operated to retain 1573 licenses which a majority vote would have cut off the total number of licenses wiped out in the past nine years would have been 2,773 instead of the 1,200 Sir James boasts of—or, to be exact, 1,185. No more cleverly designed scheme, whether it were so intended or not, could have been devised to compel temperance people to retain licenses in the interests of the liquor traffic. And yet this is the government Mr Soden wants temperance people to trust to—if we "send to support advanced temperance legislation" men, which the Government won't have sent on any account; men it doesn't want. Mr. Doughty of Toronto, one of the men that asked to be sent to "support advanced legislation," has been steamrollered out of the candidature by the Government machine and a straight anti-banish-the-bar candidate substituted; and Mr Soden, another who asks to be sent, stands a good chance of being steam-rollered by honest electors who like to see a little show of consistency in a candidate seeking their suffrage on a vitally important national and moral issue.

ROWELL IS COMING.

The visit to Peterborough of Mr. W. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Liberal party, and leader of the new departure in moral aggression, will be an event that will attract the greatest interest, and excite the enhusiasm of those sincerely and honestly anxious for the triumph of advanced temperance principles and promotion of popular interests. Mr. Rowell is a man of courage, something that all men admire. In the true sense, in the right cause, he is bold enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold. He has pledged the prospects of his political advancement and his political fortunes to the triumph of a one-time unpopular cause; but one which his courage and moral aggressiveness, have converted into one of unprecedented popularity. Nothing in our political history has "caught on" within the space of the last month or less like Rowell and his advanced and radical temperance platform and his progressive general policy. His leadership was mocked at as hare-brained Quixotism; but even his keenest opponents have learned to respect and even fear the strength he and his cause have developed, even to the point of stealing Rowell's thunder—adopting his policy, with a view of gaining a popular acceptance of candidature that promises little success without falling into line with the policy of Mr. Rowell.

Mr. Rowell has figuratively fired the heather and it is certain that there will be a great rally at the Opera House next Thursday evening, June 18th—only eleven days before the election day, June 29th. Mr. Rowell's appearance here after a triumphant tour of the province will be a political event worth noting. His pronouncement will be illuminating and the people will be glad to hear a man whose person and policy are more the topic of public interest and discussion than those any man has been favoured with in recent years in the province.

The electors will have an opportunity of hearing Mr. Gillespie, the Liberal candidate, enunciate the claims of his appeal to the confidence of the electorate. He may not be an orator, but he will make an honest, straightforward statement, that can be depended upon. Mr. Gillespie in his past private and public career has shown that he is a safe man; and a man that can be trusted. One thing is certain, he will not attempt the equestrian feat of riding two horses each going in an opposite direction; he may not be able to stand upon two opposing platforms, but people will know where he stands.

ROWELL AND LABOUR.

The great point of difference betwee the Liberal policy of Mr. Rowell (which will be served by voting for Mr. Gillespie) and that of the Whitney Government is, that Mr. Rowell's policy is one of advance, and that of the Government is stationary. The Government takes its stand on its past achievements. A mill can't be run by the water that has passed the wheel; and a progressive province cannot be served except by a policy of advance. Mr. Rowell's policy is the policy of young manhood, the policy of popular rights, the policy of the people who work and keep things moving. If Labour consulted its own interests and that of the community it keeps alive—it would vote for Mr. Gillespie, the candidate of progress. The policy of his leader, Mr. Rowell is to help the cause of Labour; to give it full recognition. He advocated in the Legislature the creation of a Department of Labour—to study and promote, legislative action for the betterment of the conditions of workers; he believes that Labour and its interests were sufficiently important to have a department of it own, with a Minister of Labour; but Mr. Rowell's motion to this effect was rejected by the Government. It held in practice that the interests of Labour would be well enough served by being tacked on as a "side-show" to the Department of Agriculture. The Government also rejected Mr. Rowell's proposal to investigate the causes of unemployment; of means to secure employment and systematic relief of the unemployed willing to work; his proposal for a commission to inquire into the conditions and hours of labour, and minimum wage; his proposal for improvement of the Factory Act to secure better sanitary conditions of labour, etc.; and his proposal in connection with the Compensation Act to make provision for proper medical attendance in the case of all injured persons, commonly known as first aid and other important changes were rejected by the Government. There was no other reason why these and other proposals were rejected except indifference on the part of the stationary Government to the interests of Labour and failure to recognize its importance in the political economy and its claim to consideration. Mr. Rowell is a democratic leader and has a natural interest in the welfare of the people. His position in relation to the cause of Labour and his great policy, the abolition of the bar, of the first importance to the interest of the toilers of the land, entitles him to warm support. Labour can be better employed than in fighting an unsympathetic and standstill government for its rights.

HOW THE CHURCHES VIEW THE QUESTION

(Canada Persbyterian)

That the abolition of the bar, carrying with it the destruction of the treating system, would be a tremendous blow at the liquor trade and the liquor habit, cannot be seriously questioned. Mr. Rowell has been a consistent temperance man, and he has crowned an honourable record by risking his public career upon the temperance issue. The liquor trade, with its enormous money power, will be arrayed against him to a man, and he will lose anti-prohibitionists from the ranks of his own party. All the more should he receive the assistance of those who, in either party, have been identified with the prohibition movement. No candidate should be supported in the coming election who will not pledge himself, under all circumstances, to vote for the abolition of the bar.

Christian Guardian (Methodist).

"Mr. Rowell's policy with reference to the liquor question should appeal strongly to every temperance man, not because it is Mr. Rowell's policy, but because so far as it goes, it represents the temperance policy of Ontario for years past. To reprobate this policy now would seem to come dangerously near to declaring previous declarations insincere. We would not try to be a conscience for any man, but as the matter looks to us, in a straight contest between a Conservative who stands by his party policy on this issue, and a reformer who stands by his party policy on the same issue, the ardent and honest temperance voter does not seem to have much ground to hesitate."

"BUD" FISHER'S WIFE IS DYING AFTER AUTOMOBILE SMASH-UP

Noted Cartoonist Identifies Victim But Refuses to Comment on Merry Ride Through Suburbs of New York.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Her chest crushed, and suffering from internal injuries which are probably fatal, Mrs. "Bud" Fisher, wife of the famous cartoonist, was in Fordham hospital here yesterday, the victim of an early morning automobile crash.

Mrs. Fisher, 28, vivacious and pretty, was Pauline Welch, an actress, before she eloped with and married Fisher. She was hurt when the car in which she was riding with Lawrence E. Lamb, Fanny Barrows and Harry J. Feldman was struck and overturned at a dark corner of the Pelham Parkway road in New York's suburbs.

Harry J. Reiner with his wife were in the car which struck Lamb's machine. He says Lamb was speeding and his lights were unlit. This Lamb denies.

CAUGHT UNDER MACHINE.

When the cars crashed Lamb's machine turned turtle and Mrs. Fisher was caught under the overturned tonneau. Lamb, unaided, raised the car and dragged Mrs. Fisher from under it barely in time to prevent her being burned to death by flaming oil.

"It's my wife all right," said "Bud" Fisher, when he arrived at the hospital. "That's all I care to say."

The Wedding of the Week in Europe—On Wednesday, June 10th, Miss Belle Willard, daughter of the United States Minister to Spain, became the bride of Mr Kermit Roosevelt, son of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt

FAMOUS DANCER'S LOVE ROMANCE REVEALS SECRET

LONDON, Eng., June 12.—The "Express" received yesterday, for transmission to Mme. Ferrer, a remarkable letter from Mme. Carmelita Ferrer, the famous Spanish dancer, whose elopement with Mr. Juan Acosta, a Spaniard previously residing at Richmond, was recorded last week.

Seldom has such a genuine, fascinating romance been woven around a brilliant music hall star, and it furnishes another instance of the triumph of youth and love over all obstacles.

Mr. Acosta fell passionately in love with the beautiful Spanish dancer when she was appearing at the London Opera House. He abandoned his studies in London at the conclusion if her engagement, and followed her all over the Continent, despite her mother's opposition to a betrothal. Finally he persuaded Mlle. Ferrer to elope with him from Paris to London.

The letter reads as follows:

Dear Mother,—You must by this time be well acquainted with the cause of my flight with Juan. Therefore it would be a waste of time for me to explain to you what you know already.

If you had treated me as you should have done, and as I deserved to be treated by you, seeing that I am your only child, who gave up all to you, I think that these things would never have happened.

But you deemed it best to oppose yourself in every way to my marriage with Juan.

It is useless for you to try to find me through the papers or the police. Indeed, instead of improving matters by so doing, what you really succeed in bringing about, my dear mother, is to make them much worse.

Because, bear in mind, there is no law in the world that is capable of separating me from him, for I love him with my heart and soul, and he is my husband.

You, my dear mother, and my aunt, may be quite easy in your minds that your daughter and niece will never abandon you, for Juan, my husband, is rich beyond anything you can imagine.

To my mind, it appears that the best you can do is to return to Spain, where we will send you a remittance.

Receiving the loving kisses of your daughter, who adores you.

Mme. Ferrer said to the "Express representative: "Please publish this message to her: 'I am your broken-hearted mother, and I implore you to do me this favour, and come to me at once.'"

Mme. Ferrer is staying at a private hotel in Chilworth street, Paddington. She told the "Express" that, although for stage purposes, Carmelita Ferrer has been described as the niece of Francesco Ferrer, who was executed by the Spanish Government on a charge of conspiracy, she is really his daughter. Mme. Ferrer herself being Ferrer's widow.

This fact imparts additional drama to the dancer's refusal of a bouquet from the King of Spain, who was aware of her identity when she appeared at a Paris theatre after the execution of her father.

The Death of E. J. Adams.

KINGSTON, June 13.—After an extended illness the death occurred yesterday of Edward James Adams, 57. For many years he was connected with the Department of Justice at Ottawa, as penitentiary architect. Mr. Adams was born at Ottawa, and when nine years of age he came to Kingston with his father, the late James Adams, who at that time was architect for the provincial penitentiary. Some years later Edward James Adams became assistant to his father and in 1900 he became architect for all the penitentiaries in Canada.

Boys Act as Bandits.

PRESQUE ISLE, Maine, June 13.—Attacked by other boys while fishing Thursday, Victor Porter and Hartley Webb, 11 years of age, were stripped of their clothes and left bound with shoestrings tied tightly about their necks. Webb rolled into the edge of the stream and was drowned. Two boys named Cole were arrested.

Montmagny Safe.

QUEBEC, June 13.—Rumors that the Canadian Government steamer Montmagny was lost at sea through fire were killed outright yesterday when the vessel entered the port of North Sydney at five yesterday morning.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

I put the following question to 275 representative men:

"Upon general principles, would you advise a boy to enter his father's business?"

The consensus of opinion was:

"Yes," without qualification, 79; equivalent of "yes," 57; "yes, if the boy has a preference for it," 35; "yes, if his father was a success," 18; "no," without qualification, 30; equivalent to "no," 21; noncommittal, "Let the boy decide for himself," 45. Deducting the noncommittal answers, the "vote" stood: Unqualifiedly in favour of entering the father's business, 79; in favour, under conditions, 110; totally opposed, 30; somewhat opposed, 21.

The result rather surprised me, as I, in common with many others who had considered and discussed the subject, was of the opinion that the majority would not be in favour of the boy's entering his father's business. I selected the foregoing "voters" with care, being particular not to make the request of those who would be biased or prejudiced. Every man consulted was a pronounced success, either in business or in a profession, each one competent to weigh values.

With a large majority in favour of the boy's entering his father's business, it would seem that this action has large advantages, and that the boy would do well to consider his father's business first, but he should not enter it unless conditions are right.

Accurate statistics are impossible, consequently it is not known what proportion of boys begin their business career in their father's stores or offices, but the large number of firms like "John Smith & Son" would indicate that many young men begin their business life with their fathers and remain with them, eventually succeeding their parents.

It is obvious that the unsuccessful father is not only opposed to his son's entering his vocation but is prejudiced against his occupation while, on the other hand, the man who has obtained fame and fortune in the practice of his business or profession naturally favours it and would have his sons follow in his footsteps.

Being under or with a parent or other relative has its advantages and its disadvantages. The parent is naturally more interested in his son than would be a stranger, and usually will give him larger opportunities than he would extend to an outsider.

But, unfortunately, some parents are altogether too lenient and do not subject their offspring to the discipline necessary for accomplishment.

Many young men prefer to strike out for themselves, to meet the world as the world is, without the favourable interference of a relative. This independence may and may not be commended.

With this unbiased evidence before me, I cannot do other than advise the young man to give his father's business the preference and to consider favourably entering the store or office of his parent; but I should not advise him to do this, if there appeared to be better opportunity elsewhere. A general rule cannot be either made or enforced. Conditions must settle each individual case, and prejudice should not be allowed to interfere.

The right kind of young man will succeed with or without his parents. In many cases, with his father in business, he is likely to rise more rapidly; while, in other cases, he would be better off by himself, taking his chances with the world at large.

THE PLAY OF IDEAS

"An optimist," said Mr. J. L. Garvin, the brilliant editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette" and the 'Observer" is a man who sees every difficulty in his path, who is not daunted by them, who hopes for the best, who leaves as little as possible to chance, and who works like a tiger."

Mr. Garvin, who was unconsciously describing himself in these words, was the guest of the Optimists' Club, London, at their monthy dinner—a gathering of many business men, whose creed is that optimism is the secret of business sucess.

"Looking at life from my point of view," he said.

"One thing which is of much effect is imagination — the play of ideas. A man should strive to his utmost not to be a victim of routine, but see the world a fresh thing every morning. He must say "How is this thing done; how can it be improved?"

"The difference between men who do not count and men who do count is measured by the extent to which they embody the thoughts and actions of other men, or bring a fresh store of perception to reinforce the common stock. All success worth having is no more than ideas realized in action and the man who believes life is worth living, and puts both hands to the task he has undertaken is far more likely to have ideas if only from the necessity of having them, than the weary Willies of the moral world who think there is nothing new, and nothing true, and that it doesn't matter anyway."

"Optimism in action," he declared "is the secret of the 'Nelson touch."

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

Preserved Figs and Cream Cheese.

Take a package of fresh cream cheese and stir in enough thick cream to soften it; pile it in the centre of a plate and surround it with preserved whole figs and their juice.

The preserved figs are carried by almost any fancy grocer, and it is well to get the smallest ones on the market for this purpose.

To Keep Cheese Moist.

It is rather difficult to keep cheese from becoming too dry unless the household is in possession of a bell-glass to keep it under. A linen cloth or a bit of common cheesecloth wrapped about the cheese will help to keep it moist.

Cottage Cheese.

This is an old-fashioned recipe for cottage cheese. Set a gallon or more of clabbered milk in the oven after cooking a meal, being sure to leave the door open. Turn the cheese around frequently and cut the curd into squares with a knife. Stir gently now and then until it is as warm as the finger will bear, and the whey is in evidence all around the curd. Pour all of this into a coarse bag and hang to drain in a cool place for four hours or over night if it is made in the evening. When wanted, turn out of the bag, chop rather coarse with a knife and season and dress with salt, pepper and sweet cream. Some cooks dress the cheese with sugar, cream, and a little nutmeg, and still others chop it very fine, add salt, work in a very little cream or butter, and mould it into small balls.

WASHING FLUID.

Three pounds of sal soda, one pound potash (don't inhale.) Put in earthen dish and pour over four quarts of warm water. Use one cup to a boiler of clothes.

CRAB MEAT A LA CREOLE.

Cook 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion until tender in 2 tablespoons butter or drippings, blend in 2 tablespoons flour, add gradually 2 cups tomato puree or stock, season with salt and pepper. Stir until smooth and thick and cook 10 minutes over boiling water. Add 1 1-2 cups crab meat, cook until thoroughly heated, turn on to slices of hot buttered toast.

Veal Cutlet Stew.

Remove bone and skin from veal cutlets and cut in pieces for serving. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in gradually one and one-half cups stock slowly until well browned in sate pork, fat or butter. Remove to stewpan and pour over one and one-half cups brown sauce. Place on back of range and cook until tender. For the sauce, brown three tablespoonfuls butter, add three tablespoonfuls flour, stir until well browned, add gradually one and one-holf cups stock er water, or half stock and strained tomatoes. Season with sale, pepper and lemon juice.

For Those Who Like the Finest of

SUMMER LINGERIE

A MERE WISP OF MULL, a mere cloud of daintiness, a mere network of aity stitchery—this is what Lingerie amounts to in these days of clinging draperies and loose bodices. Not a gather, or a band remains, not a frill, not a flounce.

And for these who seek an ultra slimness—the combination garment and the Princess Slip dispense with any suspicion of bulk about the waist and hips.

The little Undermuslins that have just come in from New York answer this description to the letter. They are the embodiment of daintiness and of beauty, sewn and embroidered by hand, the material being that exquisitely fine American Nainsook which looks so delicate and wears so well.

PRICES FOR THESE GARMENTS ARE AS FOLLOWS:

INSPIRATIONAL SUCCESS

Capt. T. L. Huston, Richest Contractor in Spanish America, Created His Opportunity

(By Herbert Corey).

Tilinghast L'Hommedieu Huston is to-day the most important contractor in the Spanish-American countries. His company held the contract for the improving of the nine harbours of Cuba. He built most of the great sanitary works of Havana. He was the executive who cleaned up Havana under General Leonard Wood, at the time of the American occupation.

He made his opportunity after he had served for years as a $185 a month clerk in the waterworks department of Cincinnati. There wasn't a chance ahead of him for promotion. So he attacked fate in flank.

Huston's father was one of the greatest of the early railroad contractors of this country. He built 10 or 15 of the most important of the middle western roads. But he was always interested in doing his work well. He built railroads as an astronomer would study the stars, without [illegible] as to the profit to be secured. So that when he died his son was left with a good education in engineering—which had been made practical by carrying the rod and [illegible] under an exacting father—and nothing else. Because he was the son of his father he obtained that waterworks clerkship spoken of. The salary just paid living expenses for his wife and himself. Sometimes it was stretched mighty thin in the paying. The Spanish war broke out—or was pushed out. Volunteers were called for.

"I'm going to organize a company of engineers," said Huston. It will be the greatest company in the world."

Cincinnati fairly laid down and rolled when it heard this—or that part of Cincinnati which paid any attention to it. There were many fat old gentlemen who could drink a great deal of Scotch whiskey who were organizing companies. Their names were known. Huston was obscure and only a boy. Cincinnati didn't bother about his plans. Neither did the secretary of war of the minister of the First Episcopal Church or the governor of the State of Ohio. But Huston's friends did.

TO THE FRONT.

"My company is complete," Huston wired one day. "It is the best company of engineers in the world."

It was, too, as the secretary of war realised when he read Huston's prospectus. At a time when engineers and sappers and miners and signal corps men were needed worse than the heather needs clothes Huston had created a body of experts. In his company were telegraph operators and civil engineers and mining engineers and signal experts and sanitary engineers—and every other sort of engineers there was in those days. Lots of volunteers didn't get near enough Havana to learn to smoke cigars. Huston's company was hurried down there as soon as that became possible.

"We're going to clean up Havana," said General Wood one day. "This is a rotten posthole. Colonel Frederick Clarke shall do the cleaning—and he can pick his cleaners."

He picked Huston. Huston scrubbed that town until you could see your face in the asphalt anywhere on the Prado. His company had proved too valuable to keep in its original form. Its members had been made officers and responsible people generally. So Clarke gave Huston a company of immunes.

"Now," said he informally, "go to it."

Yellow fever was rampant. Huston's men were immune. Huston wasn't. But he led them in cleaning the yellow fever hospitals. He led them in cleaning the leper hospitals and the thousand and one special invitations to disease that Havana abounded in. By and by he began building hospitals and sanitary systems and other things. He has more initiative than a yellow jacket.

"We ought to do this," he would report to Colonel Clarke.

"It is so ordered," Colonel Clarke would reply.

The officer of volunteers became one of the marked men of Havana. The war department offered him a commission in the regular army. But Huston never had any ambition to carry a sword and say "hup" at a lot of comparative strangers. He consulted with his friends among the officers and regulars.

"I want to build," said he—"to do things. Will I be wise in accepting this commission?"

"We need you in the army," said the officers. "But don't take it. You are more seriously needed elsewhere."

When his time in the army ended he settled in Havana and began to do what he had wanted to do—to help build a city. He has been at it ever since.

Between times he comes to New York. He is the most absurd and emotional baseball fan in the world. He doesn't cry aloud—that is, not very loud—but he goes to the training camp at Merlin with the Giants, and he follows them about the country whenever he is able. People have believed that Huston is the mysterious stranger who stood in the financial background and made the recent round-the-world baseball tour possible. His tastes are as simple as when he earned $135 a month at the Cincinnati waterworks. So are his clothes.

And yet those who know him best say that this most successful man is essentially impractical. He has succeeded according to his theory—not because he is a good business man, but because he has an altogether absurd and laughable liking for doing things well. He is like his father in that respect. When he determined to go to the Spanish war at the head of a company of engineers he did not stop at the mere gathering of a company of engineers. He ransacked the lists of his friends for the men who knew the most and knew that most the best. He would not take a married man because domesticity does not teach one to sleep well in a trench. He cleaned house and built hospitals for the government. There wasn't a penny in it for the volunteer officer, but he gave his whole strength to the work. He is an enthusiast on efficiency.

His banking partners see to it that the profits are garnered.

A GOOD IDEA

Amateur Photographers to Help Boom Peterborough

A good idea has been conceived by the secretary of the Board of Trade, which should appeal to all amateur photographers who are alive to Peterborough's progress.

It has been suggested that efforts be made to secure the best snap shots obtainable of interesting views round Peterborough, with the object of having them reproduced in the Board of Trade's literature booming Peterborough.

There is so much printed matter sent out nowadays that only the unusual and striking stimulates the recipient's interest and gets his attention.

A clever folder or booklet coming along in a man's mail is bound to produce results. Illustrating the beauty spots of Peterborough, with snappy, striking pictures, will add 100 p.c. to a booklet's pulling power. Publicity is the barometer of success—and the more Peterborough is advertised the more business it means for all.

The Board of Trade is exerting itself in a practical manner with the view of reaching those looking for a place to locate, and are using every available piece of information to induce business to locate here. These amateur snap shot will help to turn amateur snap shot will help to turn favourable opportunities for locating here.

During the summer season, when motoring parties and the vacationists are being scattered all over the City and its environments, excellent opportunities are afforded of securing interesting snap shots which would become splendid illustrations in a well prepared booklet.

All amateur photographers are requested to co-operate with the Board of Trade in this matter and send their snap shots to Mr. A. N. Allison, secretary of the Board, 180 Charlotte Street

An "Elector" Asks Why Not Ministers As well as Mayors?

To he Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was at the Opera House meeting on Thursday night, and noted Hon. Mr. Duff's denunciation of the ministers of the Gospel who take part in politics. He spoke very strongly and received the hooting approval of the element present, which seemed to have the spirit, if not the spirits, of the environment natural to the cause of strong drink it so noisily championed.

I will not argue the question of the right of ministers to take part in a political campaign, turning vitally upon a moral question. But I submit that ministers have as much right to take an active part in politics as our worthy mayor, who not only was on the platform on Thursday night, but made a show of himself. He certainly didn't believe that ministers had any rights as citizens, and were his constituents. To my mind, the mayor insultingly silenced a minister to give himself a chance to blurt an entirely irrelevant and childish statement. The mayor as mayor represents all classes of the community, and it strikes me that he has no more right to take part in politics—and offensively too—than a minister of the Gospel.

I also noticed on the platform our worthy postmaster. Does the Borden Government denunciation and punishment of "offensive partizanship" apply only to Grits? But when a candidate shows such straddle-the-fence inconsistency his followers are consistent in following suit.

Yours truly,

Common Elector.

PLANING MILL AT 'CAYGEON WAS PREY OF FLAMES

BOBCAYGEON, June 13. — Once again the Village of Bobcaygeon has been paid a visit by the fire bug, and serious damage done. Thursday night about 12 o'clock the planing mill owned by Miss M. H. Orr, and managed by Mr. Peter Grant, was totally destroyed, the cause of the fire being unknown.

The Orr planing mill has been in existence for a number of years, and was a very useful and well patronized business, and the destruction by fire of the mill, contents and machinery, will be a serious loss to the village.

Quite a large quantity of lumber was destroyed, including $50 worth for Mr. E. Woollard's new store, in the shape of hardwood flooring. The Mossom M. Boyd Co. and others lost a quantity of logs which were on the skidway. Jas. Rich lost considerable lumber, as did Ed. Wood.

As everything was very dry the mill went up in smoke in a few minutes, and nothing could be done to save the contents.

Steamers of this Line Busy With Passengers, Freight, Towing and Excursion Business

Captain Frank Young of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company was seen yesterday and, during a short interview, it was learned that all the boats of this line had got well under way with their season's work. The steamer "Stoney Lake" was engaged with excursions from various points on the Kawartha Lake; the "Islinda" was taking the regular daily trips from Lakefield and Stony Lake; and the "Empress" was very busy, and has been for some time past, towing.

With the opening of this season the steamers have been carrying more freight than ever at the beginning of the season to Stony Lake points, a result of the large amount of building operations now going on all over the lake.

Captain Young remarked that the season gave promise of being the most active in the experience of his Company. Many excursions have already been booked and a still greater number were under negotiation.

Propose to Hold a Camp

All indications are favourable, and point to the fact that the Boy Scout movement in Peterborough will again be started, this time with an interest which it will be hard to subdue.

Last night at the Aromuries the district commissioner, and scout masters were highly delighted to be confronted by an attendance of nearly 70 boys.

Arrangements were completed for the Church parade to St. Luke's on Sunday evening. Some discussion was also made on a camp which it is proposed to hold on July 1st. In this matter, however, no definite action was taken.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED JEAN BAPTISTE TAPP.

Quebec Man Who Suffered From Kidney Disease for Years is Again a Robust, Healthy Man.

L'Anse-a-Valleau, Gaspe Co., Que., June 12.—(Special.)—"I am happy to tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well." So says Jean Baptiste Tapp, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. And so thankful is Mr. Tapp for the benefits he has received from Dodd's Kidney Pills that he wants the whole world to know it. He wants others who suffer as he did to know the cure.

"For many years I suffered from kidney disease," Mr. Tapp says. "It started from a cold, and gradually grew worse. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling, my appetite was fitful and I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I had flashes of light before my eyes and I was always tired and nervous.

"Finally rehumatism was added to my troubles, while attacks of sciatica and neuralgia followed. The doctor who attended me and the medicines I tried, failed to help me till I decided to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took four boxes in all, and to-day I am a robust man in excellent health."

All Mr. Tapp's troubles came from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them.

Conservative on On Question Of Patronage

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Although a Conservative I must congratulate your party upon the fairness with which they distribute the patronage among their old-time worthy supporters in contradistinction to our party who have the perversity of giving the offices to any interloper that may come along without regard to long and effective service or fitness for the position.

For instance we have seen of late how a stranger came in and with an utter disregard of the proprieties shoved himself in without anyone knowing anything of his antecedents or whither he came, and by some means not generally known, obtained one of the best offices going. Encouraged by his success another brother has cropped up and is apparently pursuing the same method. In this election they cannot lay the blame to the vagaries of Mr. Burnham, as was done before with the first brother. One person was heard to remark that it was hoped there were not many more brothers to provide for out of the public crib. Let that be as it may, Mr. Soden has had nothing to do with the formation of the committees or the government patronage.

Yours truly,

Citizen.

LIBERAL POLICIES THAT MEN FORCED ON THE GOV'T

The following are some of the Liberal policies that were forced upon the Whitney Government by persistent agitation appealing to popular opinion and inducing popular pressure:

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

The Government allowed the very important question of Workmen's Compensation to drag from 1907, year after year, and it was only after the continuous urging of the Opposition that action was finally taken, and a Bill put on the Statute Books in 1914.

HYDRO RADIALS.

In both the Sessions of 1913 and 1914, it was the Opposition which took the initiative in urging the construction of Hydro Radials by cooperation between the municipalities and the Hydro Electric Commission. Legislation to this effect was passed by the House. Hon. Adam Beck was from the beginning an ardent advocate of Hydro Radials, but apparently he was not able to convince his Colleagues, until the Government's hand was forced by the Opposition.

PROHIBITION OF CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

Opposition members in the session of 1913 introduced bills requiring the publication of campaign contributions, and prohibiting contributions from Corporations. These were withdrawn upon promises from the Government that the matter would be dealt with the following year, and action taken.

In the Session of 1914 a Liberal bill, prohibiting contributions from Corporations, Government Contractors, License Holders (including tavern, shop, brewers and distillers) and associations to further and protect the interests of the liquor traffic, was introduced. The Government, while not accepting this bill, introduced and carried, with the aid of the Liberals, one of their own, which was weaker and less definite than the Liberal bill.

The other Liberal proposal, calling for the publication, before a general election, of all campaign contributions, was not accepted by the Government.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Several of the amendments to the Liquor License Act made by the Government had been previously proposed by Liberals in the House, including the closing of the bars on Good Friday. The Liberal proposals, of course, went much further than this, including the complete abolition of all bar and club licenses and the treating system; and when the Government would not accept this, the closing of the bars on all holidays, and shortening the hours of sale in the evenings and on Saturday.

GOOD ROADS.

After motions from the Opposition in 1912 and 1913, calling for a comprehensive and adequate scheme for the construction of good roads in the Province, particularly those leading to market towns, the Government took action and appointed a Commission which brought in its report in 1914. No legislation, however, has so far followed this report.

EIGHT HOUR DAY.

Eight hour day for underground miners.

NEW ONTARIO DEVELOPMENT.

Following the agitation for better treatment of New Ontario carried on by the Opposition in the late general election and in the House, the Government voted five million dollars for New Ontario development.

PUBLIC HEALTH

Proposals to aid in the suppression of tuberculosis, advocated in the Liberal platform of 1911, and introduced into the Legislature by Dr. McQueen, Liberal member for N. Wentworth, were incorporated by the Government in the amendments to the Public Health Act.

TO ENTRAIN FOR CAMP MONDAY

All members of "D" Company of the 45th Regiment will parade at the G.T.R. station not later than 6:50 a.m. on Monday, June 15, for the purpose of entraining for Regimental Headquarters, Lindsay, to attend the annual camp at Petawawa. All baggage must be at the station not later than half an hour before train time, and there must be as little as possible, as the amount of baggage has been cut down this year. Each man must bring with him his own camp equipment. New uniforms have been issued and can be had at 187 Bethune street.

MOTHER'S CIRCLE QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

The Mother's Circle of the Queen Mary school held a very enjoyable garden party last evening at the home of Mrs. Moyer, Weller Street. A large number of the teachers and parents of the children of this school attended. The grounds were attractively decorated and presented a gala appearance with the numerous Japanese lanterns and a profusion of pretty flowers.

A brief business meeting was held at seven o'clock, followed by a programme, consisting of a recitation by Miss Annie Christie, a reading by Miss Thomas and several phonograph selections. A flower contest created a deal of amusement, the winner of the prize having nineteen correct answers out of a total of twenty questions asked.

During the evening dainty refreshments were served.

PATER-FAMILIAS ASKS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THEM

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As a man, with sons to grow up in the midst of terrible temptations I should like the use of your columns to ask a plain question or two:

Is there the slightest justification on commercial, or moral or humane grounds for the existence or continuation of the liquor traffic? Has it one good, one redeeming feature? Is it a benefit, or a curse, to the individual, or the community? Has it any place, or right of place, amongst legitimate forms of traffic in a Christian country?

These questions can only be answered in one way; and one can safely defy anybody to answer them any other way.

The butcher, the baker, the grocer, the dry-goods business, are all legitimate. They supply human needs. They give value for the money spent. They benefit, they feed, they clothe humanity, and never degrade humanity nor darken the home, nor wreck human lives, nor starve children, nor make wives widows.

Is the traffic in strong drink in any of these classes? No one, even those fondest of strong drink, will say that they are the better for its use, but men in thousands will say, if they speak from their hearts, that strong drink is a curse, and that the thrall of appetite for it is the worst of slavery. Nobody has a good word for it. The traffic in strong drink benefits nobody except those who thrive grow rich, feed sumptuously and dress richly upon its fruits. They do all these things at the expense of their fellow men. The bread they eat belongs to starving children; the clothing they wear is filched from the naked bodies of the wives and children of the victims of strong drink, whose squandered means enriches the men engaged in the traffic.

They are the monumental criminals of civilization. They are the most gigantic combination of men who amass money by false pretences. They get money without giving value and, more than that, they give harm and loss and pain and suffering and misery to those whose money they receive.

Can any one give one just reason, one reason that appeals to common sense, to common humanity, for the existence of the liquor traffic? No.

This being the case can any man of sense, let alone any man with a conscience and sense of duty to his fellow man, any man with a family, feel justified in sacrificing the destruction of the traffic to any consideration whatever? Can any man with a conscience, with a heart to feel, or a mind to perceive, hesitate between the safety of his sons and the welfare of the sons and mothers of others and the petty fortunes of a political party? Every elector is called upon to decide now. Any man with the devil's help can find excuses for doing wrong. This is a time when every man should have a conference with his conscience; and if he will let his conscience speak for him it will cry with a loud voice "vote to abolish the bar" as the concrete and cruel expression of a traffic that has no right to existence.

Yours truly,
Pater-Familias.

Roosevelt in England

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., June 13.—(Special cable.)— Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was met by Ambassador Page of the United States when he arrived here from Spain. In some papers Roosevelt is this morning heralded as the plenipotentiary of peace in the Home Rule trouble. Certain it is that Roosevelt will meet intimately several leaders on both sides of the prevailing political struggle here. To-day he is a guest of honour at a luncheon at the National Liberal Club. To-morrow at Major Lee's place he will have Lord Roberts and other anti-Home Rule trouble. Certain it is tat Roosehe dines with Premier Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Minister and on Tuesday he will have a conference with Mr. Albert Chamberlain and Sir Edward Carson. Among all classes it is hoped that Roosevelt's recognized tactful diplomacy will have its pacific influence in the present controversy.

Greece Demands That Turkish Cruelties Stop.

WAR IS ON THE HORIZON

Premier Venezelos Makes Declaration Almost Equivalent to Threat of Hostilities In Connection With Persecution of Countrymen—Minister Will Demand Redress of Grievance.

ATHENS, June 13.—The Greek Minister in Constantinople has been instructed to demand the cessation of persecution of Greeks in Asia Minor and the reinstatement in their homes and on their properties of 50,000 refugees who sought shelter from the Turks in Greek territory.

A guarantee also is demanded, according to the correspondent that these refugees be not again molested.

A warning to Turkey, which fell little short of a formal declaration of hostilities, was uttered yesterday by Premier Venezelos of Greece in the Chamber of Deputies. He was speaking on the treatment of Greek subjects in Turkey.

M. Venezelos, who obviously found difficulty in restraining his language when he spoke of the way in which the Turks had treated his fellow-countrymen, said:

"I do not wish to allow to escape words which cannot be recalled, but I should fail in my duty if I did not inform the Chamber of Deputies that the situation has become grave—even very grave. If a stop is not put to these conditions, the Hellenic Government will be forced not to content itself with joining in the lamentations of unhappy refugees."

The Premier characterized the Turkish persecutions of Greeks as being "of a character such as history had never known until to-day, their object being the elimination of populations which had been living in those places for several thousand years."

Storstad To Be Released.

MONTREAL, June 13.—The Norwegian collier Storstad will probably be released from custody by the Admiralty Court some day next week on giving bonds in connection with the action of $3,000,000 damages taken against the Storstad's owners by the C. P. R. Co. because of the sinking of the steamship Empress of Ireland.

It is said the case will not be heard in the Admiralty Court until the official enquiry into the Empress disaster under the chairmanship of Lord Mersey is well advanced. The Storstad will be taken to Quebec for repairs.

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000, No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.

The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.

The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.

On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.

Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?

You are invited to call and investigate.

Nationalist Army Leaders Under Fire From Redmond.

REFUSED TO CO-OPERATE

Declaring That Provisional Committee at Head of Volunteer Force Are Not Supporters of Irish Party—House Rule Leader Threatens to Launch a New Organization to Offset Ulstermen.

LONDON, June 13. — John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, yesterday declared war on the provisional committee of the Nationalist volunteers, a majority of whom, he asserts, are not supporters of the Irish party.

Although the provisional committee, at a meeting held in Dublin on June 10, verbally welcomed Mr. Redmond's co-operation in the Irish volunteer movement, it followed this up with a call to the volunteers in each county to elect a representative to serve on the committee, and this action the Irish leader interprets as a refusal of the committee to accept his proposal made on June 9, that 25 representatives of the Irish party should be added to the committee in control.

A meeting of the Irish Nationalists discussed the matter in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon and subsequently Mr. Redmond issued a letter declaring that the action of the committee "amounts to a refusal to accept my offer of co-operation."

Pointing out that the committee originally was a self-constituted body Mr. Redmond proceeds:

"I am informed on good authority that a majority of them are not supporters of the Irish party, while of the rank and file of the Irish volunteers at least 95 per cent. are supporters of the party and of its policy. This is a condition of things which plainly cannot continue."

Declaring that the rank and file and the responsible leaders of the Irish people are entitled to demand some guarantee that an attempt shall not be made in the name of the Irish volunteers to dictate the policy of the National party, Mr. Redmond finds the best guarantee of this to be the presence on the governing body of men of proved judgment and steadiness, as suggested by him. He regrets that the committee "should hastily have repudiated" his suggestion.

"It is of the most vital importance to the national cause," the Irish leader says, "that this matter should be settled in an amicable spirit, and unless the committee can see a way to reconsider its decision and adopt the proposal I have made I must appeal to all supporters of the Irish party in the volunteers to at once organize county committees quite independent of the Dublin Provisional Committee, and to maintain an independent county government of the volunteer movement until it is possible to elect a governing body which shall have the full confidence of the country."

SAID HE WAS ATTACKED.

Young Preacher Tried To Cover Up His Lateness.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 13.—Rev. J. W. Chambers, young assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, who was found lying bound and gagged on the trolley car tracks near Stratfield, has admitted that he had bound and gagged himself. The alleged admission came after two hours of sharp questioning by detectives.

Chambers said, the police assert, that he had been scheduled to attend a festival given by his church, that he was late and did not know how to explain his tardiness satisfactorily, so he scratched his face, rolled around in a stone quarry, stuffed a handkerchief in his mouth and bound his wrists. When he was found, he told of having been held up by two mysterious men.

Canadian Girl at Y.W.C.A. Congress.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, June 13.—At yesterday's session of the International Congress of the Young Women's Christian Association, Miss Una Saunders of Canada moved a resolution in favor of woman suffrage, but condemning militancy. An address by Miss Mabel Gratty last Tuesday on the subject of ideals for women has aroused much interest among the delegates as likewise has a paper read by Mrs. Fraser on "How to Take Care of Young Girls Coming to Cities from the Country."

In all the discussions before the congress the American and English delegates are taking leading parts.

Calls Golf "Harmful."

LONDON, June 13.—Dr. Lyttelton, headmaster of Eton, at a meeting in support of the "Duty and Discipline Movement" at Lansdowne House, said that golf did a grave social harm, because the players insisted upon having caddies at all tours, and thus created a "blind alley" occupation.

Bridge, too, he described as a grave national danger. Any game, he said, was a menace that kept Cambridge undergraduates abed on Sunday and other mornings and throughout the whole day in rooms full of tobacco smoke, when they ought to be out in the sunshine.

King Wore the Kilts.

LONDON, June 13.—Elaborate arrangements, which garrisoned Buckingham Palace like a fortress, effectually prevented any such militant manifestation at last night's state ball as marred the last court.

The scene in the ballroom was unusualy brilliant. The King himself lent a picturesque note by appearing in the ornate kilted uniform of the Black Watch of which he is colonel-in-chief.

The Queen wore a gown of pale blue with a corsage of sequins arranged with gold lace over the palest pink satin; her crown was of pearls.

SCHEME IS BLOCKED

Borden's Plan to Control Senate Gets a Bad Setback.

DOMINION HOUSE PROROGUES

Petition to Increase Western Representation In Senate Is Amended to Hold Back Appointments Until Redistribution Actually Comes Into Force — Duke Attends Last Closing Ceremonies.

OTTAWA, June 13. — Parliament was prorogued late yesterday afternoon, but a spectacular situation occurred before this formality was over. In the first place the Senate again amended the postoffice bill, and in the second place amended the address which the Government proposed to send to the Imperial Parliament asking for change in the clauses of the British North America Act, which affect representation in the Senate, in order that the Governor-General appoint nine more representatives from the western provinces to the Upper Chamber. The Government refused to accept the amendment and so the measures were dropped.

The redistribution bill was passed by the Senate without amendment.

The situation caused an immense amount of interest. Prorogation had been announced for three o'clock, but the changed state of affairs prevented this, and the Duke of Connaught was informed by telephone that the second chamber was not ready for his attendance. Militia men who had been ordered out to take part in the prorogation ceremony paraded the streets, and soon the whole city was alive to the fact that something unexpected had happened. Finally the Governor-General was informed that the Senate had promised to get through by 4.30.

A day or two ago the Senate amended the postoffice bill, which gave the Postmaster-General the power to impose rates on mail matter other than letters. When the bill came back to the Commons with the amendment of the Senate Mr. Pelletier refused to accept it, and it was sent back again to the Senate with the amending clause struck out. It came before the Senate again yesterday, and the Upper Chamber reinserted the amendment. When it was returned once more to the Commons Mr. Pelletier for the second time refused to accept it.

The other question which provided the general situation of deadlock was the refusal of the Senate to pass the bill to increase the number of Senators in the form in which it left the Commons. Senator Bostock moved an amendment to the effect that the increase should not take place until after the dissolution of the present Parliament. Senator Lougheed, on behalf of the Government, refused to accept the amendment. A vote was taken and the amendment carried on a party division.

When the amended bill came before the Commons, Premier Borden moved that the Senate amendment be not concurred in for the following reasons: Because the appointments to the Senate have no relation to the date of election of members to the House of Commons; because the address to the Imperial Parliament asking for an amendment to the clause of the B. N. A. Act which deals with Senate representation relates entirely to the last decennial census; because the amendment is in appropriate and incongruous there being no occasion for it; and because no sufficient reason had been adduced for the change made, and for the delay which would be caused by it.

The bill was then sent back to the Senate, and on the statement that the Commons refused to accept the Senate amendment, Senator Bostock moved that the Senate insist upon the amendment. This was carried, and the upshot is that there will be no increase in the western representation of the Senate until next session at any rate.

The Governor-General arrived at 4.30 o'clock, and after some delay the Commons were summoned to the Red Chamber, the Duke of Connaught delivered the speech from the throne, listened to the Parliamentary address of formal farewell, and at 5.45 declared the third session of the thirteenth Parliament prorogued.

In the Commons yesterday the question of the refusal of the Militia Department to allow the 5th Regiment of Montreal to parade at the Corpus Christi celebration carrying arms was brought up. The intimation was made that the regulations must be obeyed. The regulations state that only side arms can be carried in a religious procession.

ELECTIONS IRREGULAR.

Four Ottawa Controllers Unseated by Judicial Decision.

OTTAWA, June 13—The four civic controllers, Joseph H. Kent, J. W. Nelson, E. R. McNeill, and Dr. R. H. Parent, have been unseated by Judge MacTavish owing to irregularities in the January election. The formal judgment was delivered this morning.

The action to unseat the controllers was taken by a ratepayer, Thomas Clarey on the ground that there had been much irregularity in the conduct of the January election in the various polls.

In view of the quashing of the liquor license bylaw on similar grounds by Mr. Justice Middleton at Toronto the unseating of the controllers was generally expected.

Spanish Convicts' Mutiny.

CERBERE, France, June 13.—Convicts in the Spanish prison of Figueras, just over the frontier line in Catalonia, took advantage of the absence of most of the guards, attracted by a procession outside the jail in celebration of the religious festival of Corpus Christi, seized the governor and beat him to death. They broke into the store of arms and ammunition and attempted to escape. Detachments of troops and wardens fired upon Seeing convicts and fierce fighting ensued within the prison before the convicts were eventually mastered, many being shot down.

HE DIDN'T LAST LONG.

Senator Ribot Was French Premier For a Day.

PARIS, June 13. — Amid frantic applause by the members of the left and the extreme left in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, the Ministry of Alexandre Felix Ribot, which was formed only Thursday to succeed that of Gaston Doumergue, was defeated in a vote on its declaration of military policy and then given a vote of lack of confidence. Premier Ribot and his Ministers picked up their portfolios and left the chamber to present their resignations to Premier Poincare.

SEN. ALEXANDRE RIBOT.

The division on the military service law showed a vote of 306 to 262 against it, and later a motion disapproving the Cabinet, proposed by Deputies Albert Dalimere and Louis Jean Fuegh, was adopted by a vote of 374 to 187.

Following the defeat of the Government it was rumored in the corridors of the Chamber of Deputies that M. Viviani would be requested to again to try to form a new Ministry.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The first Niagara camp was brought to a close yesterday.

The Mexican delegates to the Niagara Peace Conference have decided to ignore the Antilla incident.

Gen. Carranza yesterday announced the names of his three representatives to the Peace Conference at Niagara Falls.

Fred Ducker, of Toronto faces a charge of manslaughter, the coroner's jury deciding last night that he struck the blow that caused Joseph Semlon's death.

Fire destroyed the barns of R. E. Wilson, Scotch Line, early yesterday, and burned two heavy Clydesdale stallions, four other horses, and all the equipment and machinery.

Sir Thomas Lipton was fined $50 at Southampton yesterday for furious automobile driving. He said he had been so used to traveling on Shamrock IV. he didn't realise his speed.

Kenneth D. Douglas, self-styled journalist, short story writer, doctor of philosophy and social service adviser, well-known in Canada, has been arrested in Boston charged with perjury.

STEPMOTHER BIT CHILD.

Practice Not Unusual With Italian Woman Says Counsel.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Instead of standing trial as she had intended, Mrs. Maria Rizzuto of 208 Ellery street, Brooklyn, who had bit her 11-year-old stepdaughter Carolina because the child refused to do housework, pleaded guilty yesterday in Brooklyn Special Sessions to a charge of assault.

"It is a pretty common practice among Italian women to bite their children when they are disobedient," said her counsel.

"Frightful!" said Justice Collins.

Justice Fleming called the child behind the bench. In whispers she told her story to him and Justices Collins and Forker. She bared her arm and showed the scars of three wounds made by her stepmother's teeth.

The court postponed sentence until next Friday.

Sues U. S. For Millions.

WASHINGTON, June 13. — Frank Gunn Farnham, of Honesdale, Pa., has succeeded in bringing before the Supreme Court a suit for millions of dollars against the Government under a patent for a "vest pocket stamp book." The Postoffice Department sells millions of these annually. He said he was led to the invention because stamps in his pocket stuck together on rainy days.

Mustn't Marry Divorced People.

HAMS HIT HARD AND THE PETES FAILED TO FOLLOW THE EXAMPLE

Athletics Win Second Game of Series by 10 to 5, Treating Schettler's Offerings With Scant Respect, While Petes Had Fifteen Men Left on the Bases

Pitcher Bill "Jiggers" Donahue, of the Hamiltan Athletics, may not be the luckiest guy in the world, but it would be a safe bet that if William was to fall off the Hunter St. bridge he would be fished out of the river covered with diamonds. Any time a pitcher goes in there and passes out nine bases on balls, allows nine hits, hands in a wild pitch and a wide throw, and has his team-mates fall down behind him on four occasions, and then wins the decision hands down, is certainly not running in the hardest luck possible. This is the stunt Donahue pulled off yesterday and the Hams won by 10 to 5.

All through the engagement the bases were loaded down to the guard rails with the Petes, but something always happened just when a flock of runs was looming up. No less than fifteen homesters were left stranded on the cushions during the affray, and there were half a dozen occasions which a base knock would have changed the appearance of things materially. Fox fanned once with two on, and again with the bases loaded, and Miller repeated the latter feat when he went in to bat for Schettler. On another occasion with two men on the run ways, Jimmy Gorman cracked one back at Donahue at a mile a minute clip. The pitcher threw out his gloved hand in self-defence, and the ball dropped at his feet, giving him plenty of time to throw out the runner. Once again with Blount and Schettler on, Welsh cracked one to centre that looked easily safe, but Corns came over on the dead run and by a magnificent run nailed the ball. It was a grand catch, and the fans applauded, although the grab cut the Petes out of two runs.

Donahue picked a good day to show how wild he could be because the Hams redeemed all their boots and the pitcher's generosity by a steady and persistent onslaught on Schettler. They started in the first innings and kept it up all the way. And it was real hitting too, good solid smashes, and in the right places to do the most harm. Schettler seemed to have lots of stuff too, but the Hams hit everything he threw up at them—slow ones, curves, fast ones or waste balls were all treated alike. And when Bob Sterling went in in the eighth they crowded a single and a double on top of a base on balls, and added two runs to their total.

Up to the sixth it was a fairly even battle. The Hams bagged two in the first, and the Petes promptly tied it up. Back came the invaders with two more in the second. The home brigade managed to get one of them back in the fifth, and it was 4 to 3 when the Athletics opened the sixth. Two runs in that session put the game on ice.

First Innings.

Hamilton—Dudley singled through short on the first ball pitched. Gilhooly hit to Schettler, but King dropped the pitcher's throw. Both moved up on a passed ball. Baldwin grounded to King. Corns hit inside of first base for two bags, scoring Dudley and Gilhooly. White fanned. Haeffner was passed. Sheckard flied to Blount. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Peterborough—Blount flied to left. Byrne drew a pass, and went to second on Donahue's wide throw to get him napping. Welsh tripled over Corns' head, scoring Byrne. Stewart rolled one to Baldwin, who fumbled and Welsh scored, tying the score. King singled on a line to right. Gorman hit to McGroarty forcing Stewart at third. Fox fanned. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Second Innings.

Hamilton — McGroarty died on a high one to King. Donahue flied to Stewart. Dudley singled to centre. Gilhooly doubled to left centre, scoring Dudley. Schettler cut off the relay throw and had Gilhooly at third, but Byrne dropped the ball in tagging the runner. Baldwin singled to centre, scoring Gilhooly. Baldwin stole second. Corns flied to Blount. Two runs, three hits, one errors.

Peterborough—Kelly grounded to McGroarty. Schettler fanned. Blount walked. Blount was caught off first, and was tagged out. No runs, hits or errors.

Third Innings.

Hamilton—White flied to Stewart. Haeffner grounded to Byrne. Sheckard singled to right centre. McGroarty drove a safety to right sending Sheckard to third. Donahue fanned. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough — Byrne flied to Corns. Welsh fanned. Stewart walked and went to second on a passed ball. King also drew a pass. Gorman died on a bullet drive which Donahue was lucky to knock down. No runs, hits or errors.

Fourth Innings.

Hamilton—Dudley flied to Stewart. Kelly made a fine catch of Gilhooly's high foul. Baldwin fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Fox fanned. Kelly singled over third. Schettler fanned. Kelly stole second. Blount grounded to Dudley. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Hamilton—Corns died on a smash which Schettler deflected to King, who threw him out. White fanned. Haeffner popped to Fox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Byrne walked. Welsh sacrificed, Donahue to Gilhooly. Stewart grounded to Dudley, Byrne going to third. King hit to Baldwin who threw low to first and Byrne scored. Gorman flied to left. One run, no hits, one error.

Sixth Innings.

Hamilton—Sheckard walked. McGroarty singled to centre. Both advanced on a passed ball. Donahue grounded to King, a nice play by the second-baseman. Dudley singled through the box scoring Sheckard and McGroarty. Gilhooly fanned and Dudley was out stealing, King taking the throw in grand style. Two runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough—Fox singled past Gilhooly. Kelly hit to Baldwin forcing Fox. Schettler singled to left and White let the ball go through him, Kelly scoring and Schettler going to second. Blount walked. Both advanced on a wild pitch. Byrne died on a pop foul to Baldwin. Corns robbed Welsh of a hit by a beautiful running catch of his smash to centre. One run, two hits, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Hamilton — Baldwin singled to third, Byrne being lucky to knock it down. Corns dropped a Texas Leaguer along the left field foul line. White sacrificed, Gorman to King. Haeffner hit a long one to Blount. Baldwin easily scoring. Schettler cut off Blount's throw and threw wild to the plate, Corns also scoring. Sheckard fanned. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Peterborough—Stewart died on a hard smash to Corns. King went down on a roller to Gilhooly. Gorman walked. Fox scratched a hit on a roller past Donahue. Kelly hit to Baldwin, who fumbled, filling the bases. Miller, batting for Schettler, fanned. No runs, one hit, one error.

Eighth Innings.

Hamilton—With Sterling pitching, McGroarty died on a grounder to Byrne, Gorman making a nice pick-up of the third-sacker's low throw. Donahue walked. Dudley singled to centre. Gilhooly doubled over third, scoring Donahue and Dudley. Baldwin flied to Welsh. Corns flied to Blount. Two runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough—Blount doubled to left. Byrne grounded to short. Welsh walked. Stewart doubled over third, scoring Blount. King was out when his little roller hit him on the back. Gorman walked, filling the bases. Fox fanned. One run, two hits, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Hamilton—White grounded to Fox. Haeffner died on a roller in front of the plate. Sheckard walked, and was out stealing. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Kelly fanned. Wilcox hit for Sterling and flied to Corns. Blount singled to right. Byrne flied to Corns. No runs, one hit, no errors.

BIG PROGRAMME AT RACES NEXT WEEK

Many Horses Entered for the Central Ontario Racing Association Meet on Wednesday and Thursday. Dr. Sinclair Secured as Starter

The two-days' programme, under the auspices of the Central Ontario Racing Association, at the Driving Park here, on Wednesday and Thursday of next week, promises to be the best racing ever in Peterborough. The entries close to-day and the number of horses already entered indicate grand contests in every class. Excursion rates have been secured on the railways for 200 miles around and there will be many visitors in town for the races. The Turf Club has been fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Sinclair of Cannington as starter. Dr. Sinclair has been here on several occasions and has always given every satisfaction.

Following is the programme:

First Day, June 17.

2.30 class, trot, $200.
2.30 class, pace, $250.
2.15 class, trot and pace, $250.

Second Day, June 18.

2.35 class, trot and pace, 1-2 mile heats, $150.
2.20 class, trot and pace, $250.
Free-for-all, $250.

Welsh Is Out In Front

Outfielder Has a Mark of .351 Three in the .300 Class

Left-fielder Welsh has displaced Dad Stewart at the top of the Petes' batting averages, the figures up to date showing Welsh with the fine mark of .351, a gain of 27 points over last week. Kelly gained one point. Byrne, King and Blount improved their position during the week, and the manager leads the team in run getting, with nineteen runs. The Petes have three regulars in the .300 class.

Origin of Overhand Bowling

Cricket being still so essentially a man's game, it is curious to recall that one of the most revolutionary changes in play—the introduction of roundarm bowling—was due to a girl. John Willis, the Daily Chronicle (London) tells us, who is generally credited with the intervention of the round-arm delivery, learned it from his sister, who bowled to him whilst he batted. Finding her bowling very troublesome and noting that she turned her hand over the ball in delivering it, he determined to adopt the method himself. At first the new style met with great opposition, but ere long received official recognition.

GOLF

Yesterday morning the Peterborough golf team, composed of 16 men, motored to Lindsay, where they played the Lindsay golfers, who handed them a defeat. The Peterborough men were the guests of the Lindsay golfers to dinner at the Simpson House and in the afternoon a large tea was given in their honour. Altogether the local golfers were most hospitably entertained and had a very enjoyable trip.

Scout News

A meeting of the combined troops of Peterborough was held last night and a large number of the scouts turned out. The meeting took the form of a business meeting and a camp is to be held in the near future. A new patrol has been formed, and it is to be the signalling patrol of the troop. The movement is making rapid progress and new members are coming in at each meeting. The camp will likely be held in the latter part of this month, and the camp will be run on the strict scout principles.

ORDERS FOR THE WEEK.

Wednesday night—Camp committee will meet at the home of Mr. Milby on McGill Street to discuss the camp preparations.

Friday—Troop will meet at the Armouries at 7.30 sharp for drill parade. Every member is requested to be present and any boy who absents himself twice in succession will be barred from attending either the Toronto camp or any other scout camp this season.

Sunday the troop will meet at the Armouries at 6.15 sharp for the district church parade to St. Luke's Church.

Hopeful.

Father—I got a number of sealed proposals at my office to-day.

Daughter — Oh, pa, were any of them for me?

The Way It Holds The Road Shows How It Is Built

One of the striking ways in which these FOURS show their superiority is the manner in which they hold the road.

You do not see the driver of a Studebaker FOUR continually bringing it back to a straightaway by "nursing" the wheel.

It does not creep to one side, but once "set" it goes straight ahead.

This is the quality sometimes called roadability.

Roadability indicates perfect balance, and balance goes clear back to the beginning of Studebaker manufacturing methods.

It starts with the raw material; with steels which are not only the costliest of their kind but made strictly to our own specifications.

It is developed by from two to four heat treatments, which double and treble the strength of these steels with large reductions in both size and weight.

It is carefully worked out by the forging, stamping and machining of all parts in our own plants—6,000 operations requiring 5,000 machines.

To this perfect balance, resulting from Studebaker design, wrought by Studebaker methods with Studebaker materials, is added a full floating rear axle.

The Studebaker FOUR is the only "Four" in the world at its price which has a full floating rear axle, equipped with Timken bearings.

The Studebaker FOUR is completely Timken equipped even to the hubs of the wheels.

The result of this manufacturing efficiency plus superb equipment is better quality—true roadability—vastly greater value than in any other "Four".

The Studebaker Proof Book describes and pictures the scientific manufacturing operation of Studebaker. Send for it.

PACTS READY TO SIGN.

Treaties Between U. S. and Britain and France Nearly Complete.

WASHINGTON, June 13. — Secretary Bryan for the United States and Ambassadors Spring Rice for Great Britain and Jusserand for France, will soon sign on the same day peace treaties, modeled after those already signed by Secretary Bryan, with sixteen nations. The signing of these treaties awaits only the approval of the British pact by the British self-governing colonies, to which it has been submitted.

The Anglo-American and the Franco-American treaties will in a general way, follow a similar pact already signed by Secretary Bryan, with the Netherlands. They provide that all questions arising between the United States and the respective European powers, which cannot be settled by diplomacy, shall be submitted for investigation for a period of at least one year to an international committee of five members. During the investigation hostilities would not be entered into, but the findings of the committee would not be binding.

MISSING GOODS FOUND.

Farmer Arrested Charged With Having Stolen Property.

GUELPH, June 13.—As a result of the discovery of a case of missing goods in a woodpile on the farm of S. Davidson, three miles from Erin Village, and the identification of them as having come from the Toronto stores of his sister-in-law, Annie Roberts, who is being searched by the police, Davidson was arrested by County Constable Elliott on a charge of having stolen property in his possession, and arraigned before Magistrate Watt here yesterday. Miss Roberts is charged with departing from Toronto with this stock and leaving only $5,000 worth to satisfy her creditors. Her present address being still unknown to her creditors, they engaged a detective on the case. He traced some of the missing goods to Erin Village, to which place they had been consigned by express, and as a result of further enquiries, a case containing some of the missing property was found on the farm of Davidson. He denied all knowledge of having the goods and of how they came on his farm.

ALL READY TO BE SIGNED.

Panama Tolls Repeal Bill Has Last Stormy Moment.

WASHINGTON, June 13. — Only President Wilson's signature is necessary to repeal the clause of the Panama Canal Act exempting American coastwise shipping from tolls. The long and bitter three months' fight in Congress came to an end yesterday when the House accepted by a vote of 219 to 71 the Senate amendment specifically preserving all rights the United States may have under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty or otherwise.

The President is expected to sign the measure Monday.

During the discussion yesterday there were flashes of heat. Representative Underwood, the Democratic leader, although voting for the Senate amendment, said that Congress should have never made this "un-American surrender" and called the amendment "ineffective and negative."

Representative Glass of Virginia attacked the Democratic leaders who opposed the measure.

Stabbed In Dispute Over Woman.

TORONTO, June 13.—Following a dispute over a woman, Cerial Bremento, of 167 Centre avenue, stabbed a fellow-countryman, Michael Partello, 132 Elm street, five times at the corner of Elm and Centre avenue at 9.30 last evening. Partello is in the General Hospital, and is reported to be in a serious condition.

According to eye-witnesses, the two were talking quietly enough until Bremento suddenly drew a long knife and lunged at Partello, who at first evaded the thrust, but was subsequently wounded by Bremento.

Five Times Wedded.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Mrs. Maria Lassaso, 110 years old, of Paterson, N.J., who five years ago was married to Anthony Lassaso, thirty years her junior, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, this city. Old age was the cause, according to hospital surgeons.

Mrs. Lassaso enjoyed the best of health until recently, and when her bridegroom died, eight months ago, her friends predicted that she would live to take a sixth husband. It was said at the hospital that the aged woman's general attitude toward life was most cheerful.

Registration Over To-night

Fewer Names Than Usual Have Been Added to the List

The registration of manhood suffrage voters ends to-night and unless there is an unprecedented rush to-day the number added to the lists will be much smaller than usual. At the City Council Chambers, the Examiner was informed that up to this morning the registration was the smallest on record. To-day showed a larger percentage registered, but not enough to bring the figures up to the average.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, June 13.—Banking house difficulties and the suspension of a grain firm were responsible today for a selling flurry on the board of trade. Closing prices, however, showed a comparatively steady feeling with net declines as follows: Wheat 3-8 to ½c, corn ½ to 7-8c and oats 1-4 to ½c. The outcome in provisions varied from 7½ loss to an advance of 2½.

LINER IS RAMMED

Steamer New York Reaches Port Crippled by Collision

ANCHOR STUCK IN HER SIDE

NEW YORK, June 15.—With her damaged port bow covered with an old sail and the Pretoria's anchor sticking in the firemen's bathroom on the main deck, the American Liner New York, which collided with the Hamburg-American Liner Pretoria early Saturday morning east of the Nantucket Lightship, arrived at her pier yesterday afternoon at 3.20 o'clock and landed her 140 cabin passengers. The 116 immigrants in the steerage stayed on board the ship for the night, and went to Ellis Island early this morning. The collision occurred during a dense fog. The Pretoria continued her journey, being practically undamaged.

The passengers were unanimous in their praise of the seamanship and judgment shown by Captain W. J. Roberts in handling his ship before and after the collision with the Pretoria. Captain Roberts has commanded the New York for twelve years, and this is the first accident he has had in that time.

The rent in the port side of the New York begins about fifty feet from the stem and extends about thirty-two feet. It is about fifteen feet deep. The anchor of the Pretoria is still embedded in the steel plates of the hull, and its flukes are resting on the iron deck of the firemen's bathroom, where the full force of the impact came.

Opposite the bathroom is the cabin occupied by the four masters-at-arms. They were on the deck at the time of the collision, and they would have been killed otherwise, as the entire room and the bunks were ripped open by the bow of the Pretoria. On the next deck below, which is called the 'tween deck, the hole extends for a depth of about two feet in the forecastle, occupied by the firemen and coal passers in the third engineer's watch. They were on duty in the stokehole when the ships crashed.

ANOTHER WAR COMING?

Greek Paper Voicing Public Opinion Says It Is Inevitable.

ATHENS, June 15.—War between Greece and Turkey is inevitable, according to the newspaper Hestia, which is considered as voicing the majority of Greek public opinion. The Government has not as yet received any intimation of the nature of the Sublime Porte's reply to the Greek note, demanding that Turkey cease its persecution of the Greeks in Turkey and make reparation to them for the losses incurred. It is feared here that in accordance with the usual method of Turkish diplomacy, the Turkish note will contain vague promises and denials, and will seek to delay a settlement. But public opinion is strongly opposed to dilatory tactics, says The Hestia, and will compel the Government to insist that the persecution cease, or war will follow at once.

It is reported that there have been several encounters between Turks and Christians in the Asiatic littoral, and that the Turks are concentrating arms and ammunition at various points. Several sailing vessels with Greek refugees aboard, it is also reported, have been captured by the Turks.

Salvage at a Standstill.

FATHER POINT, June 15. — No bodies have come ashore here for ten days, and all local preparations for the salvage of the imprisoned victims in the hull are at a standstill. Nothing can be done until heavy diving apparatus arrives from England. This may be about the last of this week. A rigorous patrol of the shore is maintained, but no bodies have drifted ashore.

ITALY HAD A NARROW ESCAPE FROM REVOLUTION

Strife is Settled---Republics Were Set Up--Peasants in Ravenna Armed and Disorder Reigns.

SITUATION WAS SERIOUS

ROME, June 15.—The threatened railway strike throughout Italy has been abandoned and order is being gradually restored, even in the towns where a virtual revolutionary movement was in progress.

The most serious situation exists in the Province of Ravenna where villages and small towns are being ruled by the local republican committees which have armed the inhabitants, thus giving the ignorant masses the impression that any kind of violence will be permitted. Churches and clubs have been sacked or burned, but in the case of private residences, the revolutionists have asked the owners' permission to take possession of their belongings. They have been sold for next to nothing so as to give the poor people the impression that the "republic" will maintain its promise to bring back the Golden Age, and end forever the high cost of living.

Ten thousand soldiers are gradually being spread throughout the province.

An outstanding feature in the general strike situation to-day was the news received at the capital of the proclamation of an Italian republic by the people of several towns bordering on the Adriatic, in northwestern Italy.

In some towns like Fabriano and Rimini scenes similar to those of the French revolution were enacted. The inhabitants misled by reports issued from the headquarters of the anarchist committee at Ancona, an important seaport on the Adriatic, to the effect that revolutionary movements had been successful in overthrowing the monarchy, proclaimed a republic, and substituted for the national flag the black banner of the peasants' league.

All the newspapers were burned the moment they reached these towns, in order to prevent the people from knowing the real condition of the country, as the revolutionary leaders had stated that King Victor Emmanuel had escaped to Montenegro, that the revolution had mastered the entire peninsula, and that the troops had joined with the people.

In some instances, the soldiers were compelled to fire on the people before order was restored with the result that several persons were killed or injured.

The tension caused by the general strike was ameliorated somewhat last evening by the announcement that the syndicate of railwaymen had ordered a cessation of the railway strike throughout Italy.

That the authorities were ready to suppress with vigor any revolutionary tendency of the leaders of and sympathizers with the strike movement, was indicated yesterday by Premier Salandra, who announced in the Chamber of Deputies that the Government was prepared to concentrate 10,000 men in the districts disturbed.

In the provinces, where the workmen generally had laid down their tools, numerous clashes between the strikers and the troops occurred.

Two rioters were killed at Adria and another demonstrant was killed at Parma. At Fabrian a soldier and a striker were fatally wounded and two other strikers injured. At Milan four officers and several soldiers were wounded.

At Porta Capuciana 23 policemen and 13 carabineers were wounded in a fight with strikers, while two of the rioters were shot down.

One of the worst excesses occurred at the Village of Santa Agata, near Lugo, where rioters attacked the city hall and burned a church, after drenching the doors and other wooden parts of the building with petroleum and benzine. The curate, after being forced to give the rioters all the wine in the cellars of the church, was obliged to follow the mob. He was even undressed, and his gown burned in the square in the centre of the town.

At Ancona, where the first demonstrations occurred, which resulted in the general strike, bluejackets from the naval division commanded by Admiral Umberto Cagni, reinforced the garrison. Ancona has been a hotbed of the revolutionary movement as the leaders, headed by the anarchist, Malatesta, have been spreading the report that King Victor Emmanuel had been forced to flee the country and that Premier Salandra was a prisoner.

Barbers Surrender.

KINGSTON, June 15. — The price of a shave in Kingston will remain at 10 cents. A few months ago the barbers decided to load the male citizens with a 50 per cent. increase in the price of this necessary service, but such an awful howl, with an unprecedented demand for safety razors, followed that the shavers took fright, and have now come back on their bended knees and are offering real classy shaves for a single dime.

PARALYZED LIMBS
To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hoenburger, 19 Morris Street, St Catharines, Ont., writes "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

AIRSHIP BREAKS.

Zeppelin Army Dirigible Is Smashed Making a Landing.

DIEDENHOFEN, Germany, June 15.—Another of the Zeppelin airships of the German army, the Z1, was badly wrecked near here Saturday. While trying to effect an emergency landing the air cruiser broke at right angles behind the rear gondola. A lieutenant was injured.

The accident occurred during a flight from Cologne to Metz. The Z1, with a military crew on board, ran into a rainstorm and the commander decided to descend. When the air vessel was within a few yards of the ground a sudden vertical gust of wind forced it violently to earth, and it broke virtually in two. The airship will have to be entirely dismembered for repairs.

READY FOR INQUIRY

Lord Mersey Arrives to Probe Empress of Ireland Wreck

SITTINGS BEGIN TO-MORROW

OTTAWA, June 15.—Lord Mersey, who will preside at the inquiry into the wreck of the Empress of Ireland, arrived in Ottawa on Saturday and was met by Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Saturday evening Premier Borden gave a dinner in honor of Lord Mersey, at which a number of the Cabinet Ministers were present, as well as Justice McLeod, one of the Canadian representatives on the board of inquiry.

Lord Mersey accompanied by Mr. Hazen and Judge McLeod left yesterday afternoon for Montreal where they will board one of the Government steamers and sail down the St. Lawrence to the spot where the Empress of Ireland met her fate.

The inquiry is expected to open tomorrow at Quebec.

Lord Mersey arrived in New York Friday on the Mauretania. With him came Prof. J. J. Welch, M.S.C., naval architect in Durham University; Commander W. F. Caborne, C.B., nautical assessor to the Privy Council, who will act in the capacity of experts to the commission; and J. A. Webster, secretary to Lord Mersey.

It was Lord Mersey who conducted the British inquiry into the Titanic wreck in 1912 and it is understood the Empress inquiry will be conducted along similar lines. Lord Mersey is a short, slim man, looking about 60 years of age instead of 74. He is suffering from gout in his left foot and has to wear a felt boot.

Subpoenas Issued.

MONTREAL, June 15.—Lord Mersey was in Montreal a short time yesterday morning on his way from Ottawa to Quebec where the inquiry is to begin to-morrow. His lordship, in an interview said: "We're going to find out if anyone is to blame and if so, who, and in what way."

The work of issuing subpoenas for the Empress of Ireland wreck enquiry to be held at Quebec beginning to-morrow is now almost complete. Those who have been served are: Captain Kendall, First Officer Jones, Second Officer File, Chief Steward Gaada and Chief Engineer Sampson, of the foundered liner, and Captain Andersen and the officers of the Storstad, which rammed the Empress. Altogether, with the officers of the two ships and survivors, it is expected some thirty-one witnesses will be called.

The C. P. R. has retained Butler Aspinall, K.C., the noted English admiralty lawyer, who has arrived here, and who will act with Arthur R. Holden, K.C., of Montreal. The Storstad owners who are coming from Norway to attend the enquiry, will be represented by Humphrey Mellish, K.C., of Halifax.

An official recount of the dead and survivors from the wreck issued by the C. P. R. makes the totals: Dead, 1,014; saved, 463; on board, 1,477.

THEY CARRIED THEIR GUNS.

Sixty-Fifth In Montreal Had Their Way at Eleventh Hour.

MONTREAL, June 15.—The chief feature of general public interest in the annual Corpus Christi parade in Montreal yesterday morning was the appearance in the parade of the 65th Regiment, with rifles. On account of the order from Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, prohibiting the regiment from carrying arms in the big Catholic procession, as has been done in each Corpus Christi celebration for many years, and the somewhat warm discussion which followed this order, resulting in its being recalled at the last minute, the turnout of the 65th, carrying rifles, was greeted with manifest pleasure.

The militiamen were allowed to escort the Host as far as the church door, but the order prohibited them entering with rifles.

Several thousand people, including women and children, took part in the parade, and the bench, the bar and the City Council, were represented. Mayor Martin had a position of honor at the head of the leading citizens.

WANTED: A MAN.

Mexican Difficulty Now Hinges On the Finding of President.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 15. —The mediating colony turned their thoughts Saturday from diplomatic forms and protocols to questions of personnel for the new provisional Government of Mexico. They began the search for the man of the hour—a successor to Huerta who shall be acceptable to all factions, capable of pacifying Mexico so that a constitutional election may be held.

The Mexican delegates are anxious that some clause be written in one of the protocols by which it shall be emphasized that the new President is to be recognized by interior Mexico as well as foreign nations. This is to make it consistent for Huerta to resign in accordance with his declaration that he would retire when Mexico was "politically pacified."

Chatham Boy Drowned.

CHATHAM, June 15. — A drowning accident happened in the river Thames near the Tecumseh Park Dock Saturday afternoon about four o'clock, when Francis Salisbury, the eight-year-old stepson of Frank Oldershaw of this city lost his life. The boy had gone in bathing and got out beyond his depth and his little companion could do nothing to save him.

EXPORTS INCREASED.

But Canada's Imports For the Year Show a Falling Off.

OTTAWA, June 15.—A statement of Canadian trade for the last fiscal year has just been issued by the Trade and Commerce Department. Total trade in merchandise for the year was $1,973,766,088, an increase of $26,687,554 over the preceding fiscal year. Imports totalled $618,328,574, a decrease of $51,671,315, while exports totalled $455,437,224, an increase of $78,358,869. The net increase in trade for the year was due to the big gain in exports of agricultural products, animal produce and manufactured products, particularly during the autumn months. Since then there has been a considerable falling off both in imports and exports. The total exports of agricultural products for the year was $198,230,039, an increase of $48,074,368, or nearly thirty per cent. Exports of animal product totalled $53,349,119, an increase of $8,544,526, and exports of manufactures totalled $87,463,462, an increase of $13,759,644.

Trade with the United Kingdom showed a net increase of $37,634,098. Trade with the United States showed a net increase of nearly three millions. With the British Indies, including Bermuda, despite the recent reciprocal trade agreement, there was a net falling off in trade of $1,620,287. From nearly every country imports decreased, while to every country, except the Argentine Republic, exports increased.

From the United Kingdom Canada took last year imports valued at $131,942,762, or $6,706,866 less than the preceding year. Canadian exports to the United Kingdom totalled $222,322,766, a gain of $44,340,764.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

"Leave the chair—I have changed my mind," he said, and dismissed the steward with a tip. Then he sat down, and scrutinised the girl so brazenly that her eyes fell, and she blushed.

"There is no help for it," he explained. "I suppose we ought to be able, at least, to recognize each other when we meet."

"I should know you again in twenty years; you are not a two-faced person, like me," she retorted.

"It is consoling to find you can be as unfair to yourself as you were to me last night."

"Would you have me twist my neck like a parrot, and say, 'Please look on this picture, not on that,' when a stranger happens to be to port instead of starboard?"

"I really think it would be worth while," he said.

He saw now that she was a girl of twenty or thereabouts, and a singularly attractive one from this new point of view. He felt that he must atone for the curt order to the steward; but she only laughed at the implied compliment.

"The poor fellow saw us talking together, and arranged the chairs accordingly," she said. "I'm frankly pleased, and you say you are; so that's all right. Let us swap symptoms, as grand folks do in society. I have told you how I secured my keepsake. How did you acquire a limp?"

"By lying too long in one position," he replied, unconsciously simulating her flippancy.

"Dear me! Why didn't you try some other sort of lie?"

"Because I was pinned down to the original statement by a ton of rock."

"I should have thought that the noise would have waked you up."

"That remark is a trifle too subtle for my dull wits."

"I watched you strolling about this morning, and decided that you were walking in your sleep."

"You shouldn't jump at conclusions. If I judged you by your pointed style of speech, I might regard you as a new species of porcupine."

"Good!" she said approvingly. "I was sure we'd become friends. I wish my father knew you."

"Taking a line through you, may I say that the liking would be mutual?"

"Are you, by any chance, thinking of visiting Patagonia?"

"No," he said.

For some reason, hard to define, he was convinced that Patagonia, though reported barren, would prove a rather unsuitable place for an anchorite.

"Are you interested in mines?" she inquired, after a pause.

"Yes."

"What sort of mines, copper or silver?"

"Neither."

"Really, you are most informing."

"I beg your pardon," he said hurriedly. "My mind wandered for the moment. I was thinking how extraordinary it was that a young lady should hit on my profession so promptly.

"No marvel at all. Rocks fall mostly on miners."

"An excellent example of ratiocinative reasoning."

"Don't imagine you can crush me with a word weighing a ton. Dad and I practice them on each other. They keep our brains from rusting, a common enough process on a ranch. Have you ever lived on one?"

He stirred uneasily. Evidently Patagonia shared characteristics with Colorado. Those absurdly shrewd eyes of hers missed nothing.

"Have I stuck another quill into you?" she went on. "If so, it was an involuntary effort."

"As it happens, I do live—I mean, I have lived—on a ranch. I own one; but it contains a gold mine. So you see, your divination is almost uncanny."

"I am still guessing why you are coming to South America. Don't tell me you prefer to make a mystery of your intentions."

"Will you be vexed if I avail myself of your offer, and remain silent?"

"Vexed. I shall be delighted. It is a positive joy to meet a man who had rather appear uncivil than coin a polite fib. The most truthful of men lie glibly to girls. They think it is good for us. Now, I regard you as a person who hates deceit in either man or woman."

He turned and stared at her fixedly. "May I ask how old you are?" he said abruptly.

"Nineteen."

"You talk like a woman of forty, and a wise one at that."

"I was grown-up at seven. At twelve I got that crack on the head I told you of last night, when our homestead was attacked and burnt by drunken Indians——"

"And there are Indians of that sort in Patagonia?" he broke in.

"Fifty-seven varieties—all bad. Some have souls, I believe; others rank lower than the beasts. But what have I said now?" for he had sprung upright as if in a great hurry to get away.

"Forgive me," he muttered. "I have just remembered some important letters I must write before I call at San Diego."

"So," she communed, when he had vanished through the companion-hatch, "even Mr. John Darien Power can prevaricate at times. But he is a nice man. I wonder why some woman treated him badly. It must have been a woman. If it were a man, he wouldn't have run."

The two became firm friends. As the days passed, and the Panama plodded south through tropic seas, Power learned so many details of the girl's life that he could have written her biography. Her father was an Englishman, who found a wife in Los Angeles. After being swindled by a nitrate company, he had the good fortune to recover from the assets a tract of land in the Chubut Territory of Patagonia. It contained no nitrate; but the discovery that it would grow good cattle came in the nick of time to save him from ruin. His wife was killed in the Indian raid which had left its disastrous record on his daughter; but Argentine troops had exterminated the Araucanian tribe responsible for the outrage, a rare event in that district, and the ranch had prospered. Each year or eighteen months Marguerite visited her maternal relatives in Los Angeles, and worked hard at the university for a term. By that device, it was evident, Sinclair salved certain twinges of conscience for keeping her bright intelligence spent in a patagonia ranch. The two hated these breaks in their home life. However, they provided a middle way; so father and daughter made the best of them.

Although the eastern route, via New York, was quicker, the girl herself elected for the long sea voyage down the Chili coast, and through the Straits of Magellan. She knew most of the ships plying in those waters, and felt more at home in them.

She was a prize favourite on board the Janama—among the men; her sharp tongue and amazing outspokenness did not endear her to the women. Some of them resented her popularity, and tried to snub her, and the result was a foregone conclusion. Quite unconsciously, Power caused one of these brief combats. A pretty, but vapid, and rather rapid lady from Iquique thought that a good-looking man like the American was devoting too much time to Miss Sinclair, and resolved to detach him.

She failed lamentably, and, in her pique, so far forgot herself as to inquire sarcastically what magnetic influence the girl exerted that she was able to keep Power in constant attendance.

Marguerite surveyed her rival with bland unconcern. "You are mistaken," she cried. "He cares nothing for women's society."

The other thought she saw an opening, and struck viciously. "So it would appear," she smirked. "You are the only woman on the ship he has spoken to."

"Yes. Odd, isn't it?"

"Distinctly so. Perhaps he is one of those rare mortals who really believe that beauty is only skin deep."

"How consoling that great and original thought must be for you!"

"For me? Why for me?"

"Because, like charity, beauty covers a multitude of sins."

Someone heard this passage at arms. The quip held a barbed shaft which flew far, even unto Iquique, and the Chilian merchant regained lost ground when he heard of it by exclaiming, "How true!"

But, strive as she might, and did, Marguerite never received any confidences from Power. They talked about many things, but his past history remained a closed volume. The long, hot days succeeded one another with monotonous regularity. When the red cliffs of Valparaiso appeared beneath the snow-crowned line of the Andes, those two, perhaps, were the only people on the ship who regretted that the voyage was at an end.

"So we part here," said the girl, as Power found her waiting to go ashore in the tender.

"Yes," he said. "When you are older you will realize that life consists largely of partings."

"I know that now," she said. She was wearing a white double veil, which was her habit when in town, so that he could not see that she was very pale. He was aware of an irksome pause—a rare thing as between Marguerite Sinclair and himself.

"You go straight to your new steamer, I believe?" he went on, forcing the conversation.

"Yes. And you?"

"I drift into a hotel for a couple of days."

And I can not tempt you to visit my poor but proud Patagonia?"

"I fear not."

"Good-bye, Mr. Power."

She shook hands with him hurriedly, and joined the crush of passengers in the gangway. She moved with the easy grace of one who lived much in the open air. For the hundredth time she reminded him of Nancy. He sighed. At last seven years 'pilgrimage had really begun'

FOUR WINTERS OF RHEUMATISM

Cured of Sciatica And Muscular Rheumatism By "Fruit-a-tives"

RIDGETOWN, ONT., May 21st, 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism. It was the only medicine that made any impression on me. I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism. I was laid up for four winters with Sciatica and Muscular Rheumatism, and was completely crippled.

Some neighbor of mine told me that "Fruit-a-tives" helped him, and I started in to take them. I used "Fruit-a-tives" faithfully for two years, taking them every day as I saw they were doing me good, and the results were marvellous.

For over two years, I have been completely free from any Rheumatic Pains whatever, and I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit." V. H. RACHER.

CHAPTER XIV.
THE WANDER YEARS.

If this record were a story of romantic adventure, it might well start from the moment Power set his foot in the hotel which a relative of an eminent French actress used to keep in Valparaiso. He had not been in the city many hours before a brutal assault on a woman led him to intervene. During the resultant scuffle he was robbed of his pocketbook, and, in addition to a narrow escape from being knifed, he was informed by a supercilious policeman that the whole affair, including the screams of a female apparently in fear of her life, had been cleverly engineered for the express purpose of relieving him of his money.

When settling his affairs at Bison he had arranged that the bulk of his revenues should be lodged with his New York bankers, to whom letters and communications of every sort were to be sent. To provide against the unforseen—a word of wise significance when applied to the vortex into which he was plunging—it was understood that a cablegram in his name would be acted on only if it bore the code word "Bido," a simple composite of the first syllables of Bison and Dolores, and, had it not been for the lucky chance that the bulk of his available ready money, some five thousand dollars, was safe in the room at the hotel, he might have been compelled to reveal his whereabouts to the bank forthwith.

Then, a Chilian gentleman, impressed by the fact that Power was an American, and therefore a millionaire, tried to extract gold from him by the safer and really more effective method of selling him a guano island. Singularly enough, this second thief's pertinacity opened up the narrow and hazardous path for which Power was looking. The captain of a small steamer engaged in the guano trade went out of his way to warn the American that he was being exploited by a scoundrel. Such disinterested honesty in a Chilian was attractive. Some talk followed, and, three days after arriving at Valpariso, Power quitted that lively city as a passenger on board the Carmen, bound for islands in the south.

The friendly skipper had no inkling of his new acquaintance's intentions. He thought that the senor was veritably a speculator in guano, who, all the better known deposits of the coast of Peru being either taken up or exhausted, was sent on exploiting fresh fields in Chili. This much is certain. Had Captain Malaspina realised that this well-spoken and pleasant-mannered stranger meant to throw in his lot with the savage race which infests the inhospitable islands and rock-strewn channels of the wildest coast in the world, he would have regarded him as a lunatic. He could never guess that his own blood-curdling yarns of these outcasts added fuel to the fire of Power's strange enthusiasm. He believed that the Indians were cannibals. He had seen them living and eating in the interior of a putrid whale. He had found a five-year-old boy lying on the rocks with his brains dashed out, and was told that the child's father had shown his anger in that way because the victim dropped some edible seaweed which the man had been at some pains to gather. Mere words could not describe the brutes. The worthy skipper always spat when he spoke of them.

His gruesome stories beguiled a slow voyage while the leaky boilers of the Carmen, iron steamship, of five hundred tons, pushed her sluggishly through the long rollers of the Pacific. Then a heavy sou'westerly gale sprang up, and the Carmen staggered for refuge into the Corcovado Gulf, and thence plashed and wallowed through the sheltered Moraleda Channel. To eke out her scanty stock of coal she put into the estuary of the Aisen River, where Malaspina bargained with Indians for a supply of wood.

Had No Power Over The Limbs

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Trouble and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbours of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

CREATION'S DRAMA OPENS IN LONDON

Royal Welcome Extended in Princess Theater.

PASTOR RUSSELL IS PRESENT

In Discourse He Explained How to Enter the School of Christ—Meekness the Primary Lesson—Then Comes Humility — Next Comes Gentleness, Patience, Long-Suffering, Brotherly-Kindness and Love—Methods of Instruction—Two Classes Soon to Be Graduated—Disposal of the Finally Incorrigible—The Future Service of the Successful Classes.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

London, June 14.—Pastor Russell is here, and in the Princess Theatre to-day presented his famous Photo-Drama of Creation. It received a royal welcome. This was the opening exhibition of a program on this side of the Atlantic which includes the principal cities of both Great Britain and the Continent.

Pastor Russell in his discourse chose that feature of his Creation Drama which relates to "The Great Teacher and His School." His text was: "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." — Matthew 11:29.

The Pastor began his discourse with the statement that there is only one way by which to get rid of one's sins—belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. But mere intellectual belief, he declared, does not accomplish this result. The Bible says that devils believe, and tremble. They are not justified by their believing. Neither are we justified by merely believing. We must do something more. The believer who acts on his belief, and who shows that he really means what he says, will make a full consecration of himself to God. From the standpoint of the Scriptures a believer is a disciple, a follower, a pupil.

The Pastor went on to demonstrate that the School of Christ is not open to everybody. The whole world of mankind are not in the School of Christ, with some taking more lessons and others fewer. There is one definite way of entering this School and becoming a pupil of the Great Master Teacher. Here the terms in His own words: "If any man will come after Me (become My disciple—pupil), let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." Only those who present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God through the merit of the Redeemer imputed to them and received by faith, are enrolled in the School of Christ. In other words, only the members of the Church which is the Body of Christ are in His School, being taught of God through His Word.

Addressing the Church, St. Paul says, "We are His workmanship." God has been working in the Church by His providences and by His Word of Truth, working in us by our experiences, which He has made for us, and by the opportunities which He gives us. All these things are designed by the Lord to bless us and to develop us into His own character-likeness, that, as the Master has said, we may be like unto our Father in Heaven—that we may be holy, even as He is holy—that our intentions, our aims and our desires may be exactly like those of God.

The Pastor reminded his audience that when a child enters school for the first time, he has merely put himself into the hands of his teacher for instruction. It requires years of patient training and study before he can be said to have an education, and still more instruction before he can become a teacher himself. This, he said, is exactly the picture which God gives us in respect to the Church. During this Gospel Age He has invited the Church class to enter the School of Christ and prepare for the great work of human uplift during the incoming Age.

The Royal Priesthood will all be teachers. Under the Jewish arrangement the priests were all teachers, instructors of th people, helping them in every way in respect to morals. The Royal Priests will also have authority to rule the world for its good. None but those whom God can entrust with this great power will be qualified to use it to uplift the world.

The Pastor then explained that those enrolled in the School of Christ are taught a great variety of lessons. The first of these is meekness—teachableness. None will be qualified for the great work of the future who has not been thoroughly taught this valuable lesson. He declared that there is probably a greater lack along the line of teachableness than along any other line. Self-conceit and self-will are qualities which prevent their possessors from being teachable—meek.

Those who are good pupils in the School of Christ will hear the Master's voice instructing them that of themselves they are nothing and can do nothing; that they need His assistance all along the way; that they need first of all to be taught of God—through the great Teacher whom the Father has appointed to give them instruction. Through the prophecies and through His Word He teaches all who are in His School. The voice of Jesus comes to all His pupils, speaking to them through the Scriptures and the various experiences of life.

Those consecrated children of God who have not learned the lesson of meekness have not learned even the primary lesson. Whoever says, "Lord, I want my own way; this is what I prefer and what I intend to have," is certainly not teachable, and cannot make progress in spiritual things. The Lord will not force such to do His way; during this Age He is not seeking those who must be forced to do His will. He will use force on those who need it during the next Age.

Throughout the Gospel Age the call has been for those who declare in their covenant that they desire to do the will of God, and who will sacrifice their lives in order to do that will. After they have made this contract with Him, and He has accepted them and sealed the contract by giving them the earnest of the Holy Spirit, they cannot repudiate their agreement. They must either go on to everlasting life or perish in the Second Death.

The Pastor dwelt for some time upon the subject of meekness. Some people, he declared, find this a difficult lesson to learn. But things are pretty well balanced. The man who is naturally very meek and teachable usually has disadvantages in other ways. People will impose upon him; for they are apt to impose upon the meek, as we all know. The man with a great deal of self-esteem and only a little meekness will get along better by himself, but will have his difficulty in coming under the hand of the Lord. The speaker reminded his hearers that they cannot alter the shape of their heads. Those who were born with a proud spirit have so much more to battle against. Those who were born with a humble mind will have difficulties along other lines, but will find it easier to learn meekness than will the proud-spirited. But since the Lord puts meekness first, no one will make progress in the School of Christ until he has learned to be meek; for meekness signifies teachableness.

The Pastor then went on to the other subjects taught in this unique School. Next in order come humility, gentleness, patience, long-suffering and brotherly-kindness. Gentleness is very important. Whoever is rude and boisterous will not be ready to learn, and therefore will not be in a proper condition to be used of the Lord until he has learned brotherly-kindness, until he can be kind to all the brethren and love them all. He must be gentle toward all so as not to offend or hurt them or stumble them. Whoever is gentle will always desire to be amistful to the brethren; this is characteristic of the Spirit of the Lord. Whoever is devoid of these qualities which go to make up Love must acquire them if he would be graduated from the School of Christ.

Then, lest any one should be discouraged, the Pastor explained that the flesh of some who are really overcomers may never become as gentle as that of others who naturally possess this desirable quality, but that they must have this quality in the mind or will; for the Lord will judge them by their desires, their endeavors, their efforts. Whoever will be of the Kingdom class must be meek and gentle, no matter what he may be according to the flesh.

The Pastor illustrated the methods by which the Master teaches His pupils to acquire these essential graces of the Holy Spirit. If a disciple of Jesus do something wrong, the Master expects him to be meek enough to go to the person injured and acknowledge that he is wrong. This discipline will be good for the unruly pupil, and will help him to be more meek the next time he is tempted. If a follower of the Lord has been rude in some respects, he should offer suitable apologies. This will teach him to be more gentle in the future.

So by their difficulties the pupils in the School of Christ learn the required lessons. If they cannot learn in one way, they must try another; for learn they must. Otherwise they will not be fit for the Kingdom; for these are qualities of heart and mind which the Lord demands from all who would be acceptable to Him. If the Lord find that the pupil's mind is meek, humble, gentle, patient, kind and loving, He will make allowance for the faults of the body; and in the resurrection He will give that pupil a body which will carry out the intentions of the mind.

The Pastor urged all who knew themselves to be disciples of Jesus, pupils in the great Teacher's School, to keep their hearts right with God and then to do the very best that they can do. He advised such to see to it that the body gets the proper discipline. The new mind must keep the body under control. If it was rude to somebody, humble it, teach it to be meek by saying, "You must go and tell that person that you are sorry for what you have done." Of course, he declared, this will go "against the grain"; but it is better to yield and thus learn the needed lesson than to lose the Kingdom. All such self-discipline is part of the process of preparation for the Kingdom work.

The standard of character-development which the Pastor upholds is very high. He declared that whoever would be graduated with honors from the School of Christ must be so meek, so humble, so teachable, so patient, that he will be ready to receive instruction from the Master in whatever way He may see fit to send it—whether through trials, difficulties, sickness, etc., or through books, hymns, or in any other way. No matter how it comes, if it brings us "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God," if it scatters our darkness, ignorance, superstition, if it brings us out into His marvelous Light, we may be sure that God has done it for us, because we could not have done it for ourselves.

The Pastor then showed that ultimately two classes will be graduated from the School of Christ. One class will receive very high honors—glory, immortality, joint-heirship with our Lord Jesus Christ in His Millennial Kingdom. The other class will be servants of God and will serve Him by rendering assistance to the Kingdom class. Under another figure these classes are designated in Psalm 45 as "the King's daughter" and "the virgins, her companions, that follow her."

The speaker next showed why there are to be these two classes and what has made the difference between them. The first class is constituted of those pupils that are so intent upon learning their lessons and of being graduated with honors that they not only study carefully their text book, the Word of God, but they watch the Lord's eye as it were, bent upon seeing what is His will concerning them. To these He has given the precious promise, "I will guide thee with Mine eye." Their reply is, "As the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, until that He have mercy upon us."—Psalm 123:2.

The thought is that this class are all attention to see what they can render to the Lord, watching to see what He wishes them to do. They do not wait until He disciplines them severely. This Little Flock class will be composed of such as can be guided by the will of the Lord, such as are so anxious to do His will, so alert, so willing, to do anything they can do at any time He may choose, as to be "instant in season, out of season," to themselves. Those who possess this spirit will be of the first class to be graduated from the School of Christ.

The second class to be graduated will be very large in number, the Pastor said. It will consist of those pupils who are rather slow, and who busy themselves with unimportant things. In figurative language, they are inclined to play during study hours and to forget the rules. Yet they are neither bad nor unruly. They are well-intentioned pupils, but somehow they do not properly study their lessons. They are inclined to study a little, then play a little, then study a little more, etc. These pupils require to be "kept in" after school frequently, and occasionally need a little switching. But they finally finish their course and are graduated.

Dropping the figure of the schoolroom, the Pastor discussed this second class for a time. These, he declared, will not be on the Throne, as will the Little Flock class. Instead of wearing golden crowns, this Great Company will have palm branches in their hands; instead of receiving the Divine nature, they will be of a spirit nature like unto the angels. But their conditions will be very blessed, for anything which the Master has to give will be good.

This class, the speaker said, will be composed of very good people, well-meaning people; but they are not up to the standard which the Lord desires for the Kingdom class. Whoever would be of that kingdom class should see to it that he reaches that standard. Those who will get the first place are those who catch the spirit of the Master and are loyal to Him and His cause, thus proving themselves to be worthy of His love. As He has said, "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me."

The Pastor then declared that according to the Scriptures we are on the eve of a great change or dispensation, that the One who redeemed the world is about to take His great power and reign. Those pupils in the School of Christ who are most attentive to the Master's voice speaking through the Word of God are hearing wonderful things pertaining to God's Plan of salvation. These who are obedient to what they hear are getting a clearer understanding in proportion to their obedience. Those who are inattentive and those who refuse to hear will not understand, but will surely suffer in the coming Time of Trouble—"such as never was since there was a nation"; "no, nor ever shall be," as Jesus said.

By way of conclusion, the Pastor exhorted all consecrated Christians to greater earnestness in striving to make their calling and election sure. He reminded such that they were not called merely to make a consecration, but to enter the School of Christ, to learn of the master, to be taught by Him, in order to be developed in heart and mind and in every way qualified to be with the Lord and to share with Him in His glory, honor and immortality.

To accomplish this result, they must receive chiseling and polishing—blow after blow, experience after experience, trial after trial. To all who are rightly exercised by this discipline the blessed result will be character-likeness to our dear Redeemer, who as a New Creature was also "perfected by the things which He suffered." With all such who are faithful to their Lord the experience of life will develop meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness and love. And thus, having finished their course in the School of Christ, there shall be ministered unto them an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

Mystified the Missionary.

It is well known that some of the most determined and powerful opponents that missionaries have to meet in India are those who profess to be able to work wonders such as the magicians of Egypt used to support their religion. One missionary decided to test what they could do, so he asked one of them for a demonstration of his power. The magician asked the missionary if he had a rupee. The latter produced one from his pocket, showed it and was asked to hold it tightly in his hand. The juggler was seated on his carpet about six feet away from the missionary.

"Are you sure you have the coin?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," was the reply.

"Now, then, open your hand," said the juggler.

The missionary did so with great caution, but all his caution was in vain, for there leaped from his hand a small snake, which the juggler immediately seized, at the same time taking out of his bag the rupee which belonged to the missionary!—London Family Herald.

Dreadful Dressing.

"To speak moderately, I truly confesse, it is beyond the ken of my understanding to conceive, how those women should have any true grace, or valuable vertue, that have so little wit, as to disfigure themselves with such exotick garbes, as not only dismantles their native lovely lustre, but transclouts them into gaut har geese, ill shapen—shotten—shell fish, Egyptian Hyeroglyphicks, or at least into French flurts of the pastry, which a proper English woman should scorne with her heels; it is no marvell they wear drailes on the hinder part of their heads, having nothing as it seems in the fore part but a few Squirrils brains to help them frisk from ill favor'd fashion to another."

The modern way of dressing is dreadful, isn't it? So it was in 1645, when Nathaniel Ward, in "The Simple Cobler," wrote the paragraph quoted. —F. P. A. in New York Tribune.

The Effort of His Life a Failure.

W. S. Gilbert had a novel experience before he wrote for the stage. When he was a barrister waiting for his first brief. It was long in coming, and when it did come Mr. Gilbert determined, of course, to make the effort of his life.

He was intrusted with the prosecution of an old Irish woman for stealing a coat, and when he began the speech that he had prepared and rehearsed so carefully the old dame at once began to interject: "Oh, ye divil! Sit down!"

"Sure, now, he's a liar, yer honor!" "Sit down, ye spalpeen!" "He's known to all the parties, yer honor!" After some minutes of this abuse Gilbert asked the recorder's intervention, but that official was too busy laughing. So the effort of his life was not a success.

If Mrs. Smith Stayed Home

BEFORE you leave for your summer vacation, you order your favourite newspaper sent on to your vacation address.

And having had it sent on, do you not watch for its daily arrival almost as eagerly as for your personal mail?

But do you read the advertisements in it as carefully at such a time as you do when you're at home?

Of course you do!

There is much in them to interest, advise and help.

The shrewd manufacturer, nowadays, realises that it is wise to continue advertising his wares all the year round. He advertises all through the summer—partly to keep his goods before the numerous people who take no vacation and are thus possible customers every day throughout the year; partly to reach those who are away at summerresorts but who will be home again in a few weeks ready and eager to buy his goods.

In his advertisements there is for Mrs. Smith, at the summer resort, just as interesting news of merchandise as for Mrs. Jones who stayed at home.

When Mrs. Smith comes home she will find a lot of new things needed for her home and her family. And she should her mind already made up as to the kind of things she will select.

Your daily paper, read on the porch of a summer cottage, will aid you in this—through its vitally interesting advertising columns—just as much as if you had stayed at home and were reading it there.

So read the ads Mrs. Smith—even if you are away.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of THE EXAMINER.

OPERATIONS OF FAKE POOLROOMS REVEALED

How the "King of Wireless Wiretappers" Separated a "Wise" Michigan Lumberman and His Big Bank Roll

BRAWNY Gideon Collins, owner of 30,000 acres of timber in Upper Michigan, proprietor of a dozen or more busy lumber camps and sawmills and the best poker player in his region, arrived at the Grand Central Station, New York city, one morning in July—the first time he had ever set foot in the city. The latter fact caused him no concern. He came to town covetous and aggressive.

Frills were few about Collins. He was Mr. Rough and Ready. Broad-brimmed backwoods hat, blue flannel shirt, black silk tie fixed in flowing sailor's knot, corduroy coat and trousers and boots. The tops of his boots were not hidden.

Two nights before, at a poker session in the Lumber Dealers' Club of Timber City, Collins, as usual, had "cleaned up" all who sat in the seven-hour game. He chuckled and taunted a trifle as he raked in his winnings. His opponents all took his planing good naturedly. They had got used to it. I should have said all but Sam McGuigan, a little dried-up lumber jobber, who played a great game of poker until it got to a critical point, and then he lost his betting nerve.

Sam didn't fancy the taunting. His little slits of eyes sent forth a gleam of envy and animosity. When Collins' boasts got to a point where he could stand them no longer he stopped out:—

"Oh, you can be trimmed, Gideon; you can be trimmed, and very nicely, too. I know a little man down in New York who can make you afraid to play a second hand with him."

Collins smiled patronizingly as he filled a lumberman's pipe with a cargo of loose cut.

"You're sore, Sam, and you won't stay still under a loss. But if you mean what you say I herewith announce for your information that I'm starting for New York on business to-morrow morning. First time in my whole lumber existence to put my peeps on the much touted village. They might consider me a 'Rube,' as it were. Maybe so. But gimme your poker friend's number, and if he plays a square game he'll find the Michigan hayseeder will get his roll."

"Bet you he trims you," snorted Sam.

"I'pronounce your bet."

"Bet you a hundred dollars and dinners for us four when you come back. And you are to report to us within an hour after you get off your train—right here in this room."

Straight to the number given him by Sam went Collins on his arrival in New York. He had business of more importance to attend to, but he was so lonesome for a game of poker that poker came before anything else. The address furnished by Sam was a hotel in the vicinity of Thirty-second street and Broadway.

"I'd like to see Mr. W. S. Galloway," he told the clerk. "I understand he stops here all the time."

The clerk gazed interestedly at the man. So did a little knot of hangers-on.

"There is no Mr. W. S."—— began the clerk, but a wink from a well dressed, very properly groomed man with a stubby mustache cut his announcement short. He knew the winker as Charles J. Tompkins, but he had been too long a hotel clerk not to comprehend the need of secrecy in business matters.

"I am W. S. Galloway," said the stubby mustached man in tones that could not be overheard. "This is a new clerk. I heard you speak my name as I crossed the lobby. If you wish to see me on business let us adjourn to the writing room."

"My name is Gideon Collins," blurted the lumberman, with great difficulty keeping his voice lower than a bellow. "I have been referred to you by Sam McGuigan, of Timber City. I'd rather play poker than eat. He says you play a square game. I've got around $35,000 in my wad and I hope you've got as much, for if we sit in I know I'm going to add your wad to my currency holdings. There you have it, and I'll tell you right off that you can't get my roll from me except through poker. I may be a hayseeder, but I'm no sucker."

The face of Mr W S. Galloway was a spectrum study as Collins rolled out his talk. Accustomed to control his features so as to make themappear absolutely expressionless, nevertheless when he heard the lumberman's announcement, and especially the announcement of the $35,000 figure, his complexion shifted from pink to white and brown and then all around again. But Mr. Galloway was not a man to remain stumped long nor one who looked Santa Claus too closely in the face to ascertain why he brought presents.

"What, a friend of Sam!" he cried, effusively taking the hand of the burly lumberman. "Why, it will be a pleasure to lose to you, Mr. Collins. And the fact is I rather fear I have lost whatever cunning I may have possessed in poker. You know as well as I do that a man must keep in practice to preserve his form. You've had the experience of falling off in skill, haven't you, Mr. Collins, just through abstaining from play for a while?"

"I can tell you plainly," said Collins with solemn emphasis, "that I have been playing poker since I was seven years old and I have never let twenty-four hours escape without a game unless I could find no one to play with me. And I have generally found 'em—and got their money. Haw, haw, haw!"

"Well, well, Mr. Collins, you're one original kind of a talker chap, I must say. Now, I warn you that I haven't played a game of poker in nearly a year. I say I warn you, because I want you to understand that when you prove you're a better poker man than I and get what money I have set aside for my game you won't think me less of a sport because I holler 'enough' and quit."

"Quit whenever you please," answered Collins. "Whenever you do quit I'll have some of your money, so I won't be able to argue against it. Haw, haw, haw!"

"Come to my office in the —— Building," said Mr. Galloway. "We can have a nice quiet game there. But really, I don't believe I can play any more—it's only—because—Sam"——

They went up several floors in one of the spacious elevators. Mr. Galloway seemed to know everybody. He bowed to the folks here and there—fully twenty or more. Most of them returned the salutations, although some looked puzzled as they did so. Collins and his guide stopped before an office door on which was painted:—"W. S. Galloway, Real Estate and Securities."

They played an hour. Collins won every pot but one. Some he won on ridiculously low bluffs. At the end of the hour Galloway had lost just $2,000.

"By Heaven, You'll Give Me Back the Money for That Last Bet!"

"There's my limit," he said cheerily. "I was sure I couldn't play like I used to. I still enjoy the sport, however, especially when you come recommended us a friend of Sam's. But take it from me, Mr. Collins, poker doesn't get any of my time now. The winnings are nothing but those of a piker compared with what I dabble in now. No, there's nothing in poker."

Now, Collins felt satisfied with himself and the entire universe. He had $2,000 of Galloway's good money. But there was a haunting thought that he was wasting time when there was money to be made so that a man could lose $2,000 like Galloway had and think it a trifle. This Galloway must indeed be an able man, although he had beaten him at poker.

"What line are you in that there's much more in it than poker?" he asked, lighting his big pipe and feeling the increased fatness of his wallet with great satisfaction.

"Oh, I'm in real estate first, but—well, you're a good sport and a friend of Sam's, and I guess I can venture to tell you. I've got a scheme for beating the race track bookmakers. I've cleaned up $200,000 in a month. I'm arranging for a final smash at 'em, and then I'll quit a millionnaire."

"Two hundred thousand dollars in a month? I guess I am a piker. How do you do it?"

"Speak low. You never can tell who's outside a door. Why, on the roof of this building they have a wireless outfit. You know, the pole and the cross arm and wires. The wireless operator is down stairs near the front entrance. But I have an operator of my own. Every day there is racing I have him on the roof. He disconnects the down stairs wire until we get the result of the races. Then I go down stairs and bet the other. There is a make-believe bro——'s office down stairs on the main floor. It's a bookmaker's place, all right. After we place our bet we connect up the wireless and down stairs again. This is three minutes after our bet is placed. S— what—can—be—wrong?"

"That's kind of crooked, isn't it?" asked Collins, but his heart was beating with covetous anticipation and desire to get in on the scheme.

"Crooked! To beat a bookmaker crooked! Bah! What wouldn't they do with you if they had a chance? Don't let that worry you. Listen here. I have my operator up on the roof now. Come up and I'll show you."

Up they went and Collins saw the wireless pole and cross arm and hanging wire accessories all right. Also the operator with his ear-phones fastened to his head and pounding hard on a key. It was Collins to know better? Was it plain sight?

"Now, Mr. Collins," said Galloway, "I'll demonstrate how it can be done. Here's $2,000 of my money. Take it down stairs and bet it on the horse I'll tell you in a moment. Get some of your own money, too, if you like. Offer your money to the cashier at his window in the S. J. Walling office. He'll take your bet and give you your ticket if you just use the password 'Sponge.' Now get ready."

The wireless apparatus flashed. The operator wrote down the word "Rambler" on a slip of paper and handed it to Galloway, who passed it to Collins and urged him toward the roof door.

"Put the money on Rambler. It's a 7 to 1 shot! Go to it."

Collins rushed to the elevator. He had no difficulty in placing the bet after he used the word "Sponge." Why should he? He was back again on the roof in a jiffy.

"Switch that wire back," Galloway ordered the operator. And the operator made a great fuss about moving a switch or what looked like a switch near the coping slabs of the roof.

"Now, Mr. Collins, they have received word that Rambler has won. Go down and get your money. Did you bet any of your own money?"

"I bet the $2,000 I won from you at poker," palpitated Collins as he hurried again to the elevator. He was back in a remarkably short while with bills that seemed to represent $20,000. He handed Galloway $4,000 and stowed away in his capacious wallet the remainder. He wet his lips, looking for all the world like a wolf whose hunger has only been half satisfied.

"When can you do this thing over again?" he asked Galloway significantly.

"I'm planning to do it this very afternoon and quit if a horse wins on which there are big odds. Will you join me in the clean up?"

"I surely will," said Collins grimly. "I'm ready to plunge all I got and make myself scarce in Michigan. I have here $51,000, counting everything."

"Well, here's $50,000 of mine," said Galloway in a terse, businesslike way. "You take it down. I can trust you in a transaction like this to act right for me. If they make any comment on the largeness of the bet, just say you're a friend of Chris Tracy. They will understand."

In another moment the wireless apparatus sparkled again. The operator quickly wrote down the word "Arithmetic" and passed it to Galloway. He in turn handed it to Collins, and taking him by the shoulder hurried him toward the elevator, saying:—

"Fine! Couldn't be finer. It's a 20 to 1 shot. Get right to it. We'll clean up a million apiece."

Collins laid his bet all right. They made no demur at its size, so he didn't have to mention the name of Chris Tracy. He returned to the roof so that the "switch" might be turned on promptly and the brokers down stairs get the news of the race.

"They're had time enough to learn the sad truth," said Galloway in a moment or two. "Cash in, divvy up with me and we'll shake this place for good."

Collins hastened down stairs again. No soul did he find in the "broker's" save the woman cleaner.

"Where's the—the—cashier—and—the—clerks?" he faltered.

"Thim people that takes the money? Oh, they all wint away in an awtymobeel just now."

Collins rushed up to the roof again, the possibility of his being tricked dawning more and more on him every second. He lived a lifetime in getting to the roof. He dashed the door open, fearing that he would find no one there, the same as he had found the broker's office.

And he would have found no one had it not been for the perversity of a spring lock. The catch had snapped shut. Collins slammed the door on his way down to cash his last big bet. It was a bad time for the lock to snap, from Galloway's viewpoint.

Collins wasted no time. He went at it in lumberman fashion.

"Here, you, Galloway, you're in with those crooks downstairs. Don't tell me you ain't. Where are they? What do I mean? You know well enough. They're skeeidoed. They've got my money. I don't care if they've got yours. You'll get that back all right. Come across with mine."

"Why, Mr. Collins, what kind of a way is this to accuse a friend? And you a pal of Sam's too!"

"Damn Sam! Don't hand out that innocent talk. You haven't lost any money. You're taking it too cool. Come across!"

Galloway darted toward the open door. Collins caught him in just two strides of his long legs. He throttled the fleeing man and pressed him toward the coping.

"By heaven," he cried, "you'll give me back the money I laid in that last bet or over you go into the street!"

"Give him his money, Tracy," cried the frightened operator, "give him his money. He'll kill you!"

"Yes, I'll kill you, Tracy, if that's your real name," howled Collins, still shaking the other.

"Here—take—it, take—it," gasped Tracy, for it was the "king" of the fake wire tappers being choked. He was released by Collins and, reaching for a bill fold in his pocket, took therefrom five $10,000 bills and one $1,000 bill. "Here you are. I give you this sooner than be killed. That's the only reason, remember."

"Good thing for you," snarled Collins. "Why, you can't play this game any better than you can play poker. I'll tell your friend Sam to pick out another smart pard." And he left the roof, with Tracy and the operator looking at him [illegible] utterly discomfited he had no doubt.

Two nights later he sat in the [illegible] Timber City.

"You lose on the bet that your friend Galloway could beat me playing poker," he said to Sam McGuigan with a grim smile. "He couldn't play a little bit. I trimmed him for $2,000. But I made $14,000 on the side, in addition to this $2,000, so never mind the bet or the supper. I'll stand it all."

The four played poker until three o'clock the following day. It was a decidedly off night with Collins. He may have been thinking of certain phases of his New York trip. At any rate he was absent minded and he was $250 to the bad when the game ended.

"Take the supper and drinks out of this," he told the clerk, handing out Tracy's $1,000 bill.

"Pardon, Mr. Collins," said the clerk a moment later, "but did you happen to read the superscription on this bill?"

Collins glared at the piece of paper, his companions circling round in curiosity. They all read—among other things:—

"This note is NOT a legal tender for $1,000."

And all of the other notes in Mr. Collins' pocket that had been handed him by Mr. Tracy to stop a vigorous throttling were found to contain the same negative information.

SMOKE PROOF ARMOR.

CLEVELAND'S Fire Department has recently adopted a new kind of helmet which enables the wearer to remain in a smoke filled room without having to use oxygen tanks to keep alive. According to the Scientific American the smoke proof helmets are something like the helmets used by divers. They have squares of mica set into them so that the wearer is able to see perfectly well while at the same time no smoke is admitted. The helmet is made of canvas

Fireman's Smoke Helmet with Intake Near the Floor.

From The Scientific American.

in the shape of a close fitting hood which has an extension inclosing the shoulders. From the hood extends a hose which trails on the floor and it is through this hose that air is carried to the fireman who wears the hood. The natural tendency of flames and smoke to rise renders the air on the floor comparatively free, and from this strata the oxygen is piped up to the wearer of the helmet. In the top of the helmet there are air valves through which the exhausted air may be expelled. The hose is kept from collapsing by a spiral spring which runs its entire length and it is kept on the floor by a weight at the trailing end. Enough air remains in the hose even after it is closed at the end, to enable the wearer to live in a smoke filled room for twenty minutes without any new supply of oxygen.

Once Wrecked on a Coral Reef, the Manga Reva Adds to Stirring Career as Mutineers Take Bark

THE hoodoo that followed the old four-masted bark Pyrennes when, with cargo ablaze, she was driven ashore on a low-lying coral reef in the Low Archipelago was not broken when Captain I. E. Thayer, of San Francisco, changed her name to Manga Reva, which fact was testified to recently when the vessel made Lewes, Del., with a mutinous crew of Lascars, Chinese and white men battened in the hold.

The Pyrennes was built at Glasgow in 1891 for John Hardie & Co. A gallant specimen of the type of four-masted bark so numerous on the seas in the 80s and 90's, she made some mighty fast records for vessels of her class in the British colonial trade and was famous in the South Pacific. It was not until 1900 that her hoodoo made itself apparent.

The Pyrennes, with a cargo of barley, was bound from Tacoma, Wash., to Leith, Scotland, under Captain Bryce. Her first mate, a Scotchman named Kerr, is now in command of the steamship River Clyde. It rained while the cargo was being stowed, and a portion of the barley was wetted, which later made trouble. It was Kerr, the mate, who first scented smoke aboard the Pyrennes. It was in the night, and all hands were piped up to do what was possible to prevent the spread of the fire.

Hatches were battened down and holes were bored in the decks and sides and the pumps manned to pour water on the smouldering barley. Every seam and vent, except where water was being poured in, was caulked in order to prevent air from reaching the inflammable cargo. The crew worked night and day, but the slow flames gained headway and smoke issued in black streamers from a dozen not quite airtight spaces. Baffled, Captain Bryce, bore for Pitcairn Island, but no landing could be made there except by whaleboat, so two white men, Melroy and Young, were picked up as pilots.

With them to navigate among the numerous reefs and shoals the Pyrennes stood away for Manga Reva, which lies in the Low Archipelago, and where the cargo could be discharged and at least part of it salvaged. Manga Reva is 288 miles from Pitcairn Island, and for two days the Pyrennes lay in a dead calm, the sea as smooth as oil, while the almost exhausted crew fought the flames sustained for the most part by grog passed round by a plucky little cabin boy. There was thought of abandoning the bark in small boats, but Captain Bryce refused to leave his vessel while there was a chance to save any of the cargo. At the end of the second day the calm was broken. A fair wind bellied the sails and the crew took fresh heart. By the time the little lagoon at Manga Reva was sighted the sea was running high and noisy breakers dashed over the coral reefs that surrounded the island.

True as a dart the Pyrennes sped for the narrow opening to the lagoon. It was dangerous to attempt to enter, but to stay outside meant certain disaster. On the crest of a monster roller the bark scudded between the coral jaws of the outer reef. Just as she seemed poised above the placid lagoon for a second a flaw struck her. She swerved to starboard, a shudder ran through her frame as she jarred against a rock, then she sped into the calm water, but rolling heavily. The carpenter reported a hole in her side as big as the head of a water cask, and under the feet of the crew who had fought for her so gallantly she began to settle.

A few months later an attempt was made to sell the bark in San Francisco, but the London underwriters refused to confirm the meagre price offered, and after several ineffectual efforts to sell her there and in Auckland the hulk was purchased by Captain I. E. Thayer. In October of the same year Captain Thayer went to Papeete, Tahiti, and chartered a small native vessel to proceed to Manga Reva, but he was obliged to travel five hundred miles to another island to obtain lumbers before starting the voyage. He arrived at the scene of the wreck just one year after the vessel was beached and proceeded with the almost hopeless task of preparing the bark for the voyage to Tahiti.

The resources of the Manga Reva were extremely limited, not even a blacksmith forge being available, and in consequence the work of salvage was greatly delayed. After exhausting the resources of the island and fearing a famine among his laborers, Captain Thayer left with the bark for Tahiti on March 19, 1902, accompanied by Captain Porter and twenty blacks who had never before seen a square rigged vessel.

Although the fire had entirely destroyed the decks and one of the masts leaned over at an angle of five degrees, the 900 mile voyage to Tahiti was made in twelve days, ending April 1, 1902. The voyage was made under great difficulties, as the only sails available were strips from the original equipment, while 3,000 tons of the grain cargo remained in the hold and the ship was absolutely without decks.

At Papeete temporary decks of one inch flooring were installed and after a full set of sails was finally obtained the ship proceeded to San Francisco, arriving there early in October. The voyage across the Pacific was uneventful and the bark was fully repaired in San Francisco Harbor and placed in commission.

Captain Thayer named the vessel Manga Reva because of the island where she was wrecked, but the relentless fate which pursues certain vessels was not to be cheated by a name. The Manga Reva put out from Philadelphia on October 9 last with a cargo of coal for the United States government valued at about $12,000. She was bound for San Francisco by way of the Horn, and the agents had reckoned her in the neighborhood of the equator when they were notified she was anchored off Lewes, Del.

The adventures which led up to this situation are best described by Captain H. C. Townsend, commanding the Manga Reva.

"We were about two hundred miles off the Delaware Capes when trouble began," he said. "My crew of twenty-eight men included Lascars, Chinese and other foreigners. One man was an American. He disappeared during the mutiny and I believe the mutineers threw him overboard because he would not join them.

"I was in the cabin when the cabin boy came to me with terror in his face and told me that one of the crew was very ill forward and wanted to see me. I immediately started up the forward companionway and had just stepped upon the deck when eight men leaped upon me.

"In a moment they had procured head cuffs and leg irons from my cabin. Two of the men informed me that they had decided to take command of the bark and that I was to remain in irons. They said that they were not content to be treated as inferiors and were tired of the plain food served.

"The first mate was forward at the time I was seized. He also was shackled and brought below. We were both watched closely. One of the crew took possession of my revolver, while another kept my rifle in constant readiness for use.

"The lazaretto was broken into, and, after the polyglot crew had tasted liquor the scene on deck was indescribable. The leaders soon lost all control over the mutineers, who would leave the wheel in order to take part in the fights which soon became general. They were unable to navigate the bark and were helpless.

"When the leaders realized that the vessel was in danger of going to the bottom in the first blow they came to me and begged me to navigate the ship for them. I offered to run into Bermuda, but the leaders would not consent. For three days they urged me to take them back to Philadelphia. I at last consented, and the mate and I were released.

"The crew were very suspicious and watched every move. They pretended that they understood my figures when I read the sextant. They were afraid I might run into Bermuda. One sailor said on that he would shoot me the moment Bermuda was sighted.

"The mutineers insisted upon eating aft, and Chinamen, West Coast Africans and Lascars all crowded at the cabin table while a Chinese erected his joss in my berth and brought his opium layout there to smoke. Before releasing me one of the leaders had taken possession of the log, and each day he made such entries as, 'Captain dead drunk, food is putrid and ship rotten. We may all go to bottom if we don't lower boats soon and leave her.'

"I believe it was their intention to reach shore in the small boats, and after murdering the mate and myself and throwing our bodies overboard create the impression that the Manga Reva had been deserted as unseaworthy."

Members of the crew say their action was due to the fact that the officers were intoxicated and that a mate beat one of their number.

When the pilot went on board the Manga Reva to take her into Delaware Bay, Captain Townsend slipped into his hand a note which read:—

"From Ship Manga Reva,
Nov. 9, 1903.

"To Mr. Burbage Dear Sir: Come to my assistance at once. Bring United States Marshal. Ship in hands of mutineers; had no way to offset it and have nobody but mate on my side. I have manoeuvred to get ship back here safe. I was sick abed when this took place; was tied up with mate but have held out. Notify Captain May to come to my assistance. Bring two reasonable men to look after ship. Also wire I. E. Thayer, 112 Market street, San Francisco (the owner).

H. C. TOWNSEND."

The agents notified the Revenue Cutter Service at Philadelphia and wireless messages were sent out from there. They were picked up by the revenue cutters Itasca and Onondaga at sea. The crew of the revenue cutter boarded the bark with short knife bayonets fixed. The mutineers made a show of resistance, but the glint of cold steel cowed them and they crowded aft and surrendered. Driven below, they were locked in and held on a charge of mutiny.

THE ROSE OF KILLARNEY.

ONE exquisite beauty is the rose Killarney Brilliant, winner of the silver medal at the recent exhibit of the Horticultural Society of New York in the American Museum of Natural History. During the four days that this flower was on public view, it was inspected and criticised by 167,000 people, of which number more than 98,000 waited patiently in line all one Sunday afternoon for an all-inviting glance.

The new flower is the result of hybridization reaching back a period of fifteen years. The great progenitor of the rose was the blossom named Killarney introduced in 1898. Since then there have been so many "sports," or offshoots, of the great rose ancestor that Killarney may be said to have developed into a type rather than a variety. Killarney Brilliant was originally grown in the open ground in England. Its original introducers are Alexander Dickson & Sons, of Newtownards, County Down, Ireland. For the last two years it has been grown at Sharon Hill, Pa.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sailor's Yarn

It Was Spun in the Time When the Wind Was the Motive Power of Ships

By EDWIN CORWIN

One moonlight evening when the brigantine Osceola was moving before a light breeze with all her canvas set a number of her seamen were lolling on the forecastle spinning yarns. One of them, Tom Hawkins, was very long, very freckled, and his red hair was twisted into a dozen or more short corkscrew curls. In his ears were little gold wire rings. He was a great favorite with his mates, and among his many accomplishments was spinning yarns. Had he stuck closely to the truth his stories would not have been as diverting as they were. Their charm was in the fact that his audience never could tell where Tom left the river of truth and sailed out on the ocean of fabrication. On this moonlight evening the party called on him for a yarn, and he gave one as follows:

"I've been to sea ever since I was twelve years old and spun a lot o' yarns, but there's one yarn I've never spun to any one. The reason is that when I was a younker not over eighteen I got into trouble, and the yarn's about that. I was shipmates with mates that was my friends, just as you is now. They helped me out o' the scrape, and if any o' 'em had ever met me again I could rely on their not givin' me away. If I spin you the yarn any one o' you could make it hot for me."

"Go on, Tom. If any man peaches on you we'll keelhaul him."

"I know every one o' you, and there isn't in the lot a man mean enough to give me away. Just as there wasn't a man o' my mates I was speakin' about that would do so, neither. But I didn't never meet any o' 'em ag'in. So it didn't make any difference. I ain't agoin' to say what ship this yere happenin' was on, nor what port she was bound for, nor the name o' the master, nor any of the officers. They was all fine men except the third officer. I ain't a-goin' to tell you his name, neither, and it won't be long before you'll learn the reason why."

Tom stopped, looked very solemn and said he reckoned after all he'd better not go any further. This was met with a storm of protests, and after much persuasion he continued:

"The third officer was a tyrant, and every man jack o' us hated him. It seemed as if the devil had got into him and he couldn't get him out. He'd send a man aloft when the wind was blowin' a hurricane to make taut a loose rope that wasn't doin' any harm, and there was nine chances in ten that the man would be blowed overboard. He'd order a man out on to the end o' the bowsprit when the ship was dippin' her nose in the waves, and the man was sure to be washed off.

"One cold day when the fo'castle was a glare o' ice and we was takin' a sea every time we dipped, a capstan bar some one had left layin' on the deck was floatin' about in the water that come aboard. The third officer ordered me to go out and git it. You might as well expect a man to jump overboard at once as to try to walk on an ice plain heavin' and rollin' like that. If it hadn't been for showin' a want o' pluck I would 'a' disobeyed and stood a charge o' mutiny. As it was, I went out over the long, sharp fo'castle to the capstan, picked up the bar and started back. She rolled just then, and I went down, slidin' agin the bulwarks and along 'em till I got where I could ketch on to a hatch. There I clung, the blood from a crack I'd got in the forehead runnin' down on my eyes.

"Unfortunate for me, I had kept my hold on the bar. I was so mad that I didn't know what I was doin'. The third officer yelled at me to git up and not lie there doin' nothin'. I did git up, and I brought the bar down on the third officer's head. He dropped, and that was the last time he ever gave an order."

Tom paused in his narrative, and the audience, awed by an act of mutiny sure to be punished by death, remained silent. Tom resumed:

"The night after the killin' I was in the brig. Durin' the midwatch the sailmaker comes to me and says, says he: 'Tom, you'll have to swing for this, sure. Your mates have talked over in the fo'castle ways to save you, but they don't see how they kin do it without another mutiny, implicatin' the hull lot o' 'em.' Says I, 'They mustn't do that on any account.' Says he: 'There's just one chance for you. I'm ordered to sew up the body o' the third officer in canvas. Reckon I kin sew you up instead and heave the mate overboard.

"'The funeral is to come off at four bells in the mornin', and they'll slide you instead o' the dead man. I kin git you a tin can o' grub, a bottle o' water, a life preserver, a knife to cut yourself loose with and anything else you'll need.'

"'Death by drownin' is preferable to death at the yardarm any time, and mebbe I'll git picked up. You kin fix it your way.'

"The sailmaker went away and told my mates that I was agreed to the plan. They was all ready to help. One got the grub ready, another the water, and so on. The bo'sun had the key to the brig, and he let me out. It was just before dawn that the body o' the third officer was buried without any ceremony at all, and I was sewed up ready to be buried out o' the prayer book. I clutched tight a sharp knife with which to cut myself out o' the sack and to get rid of the shot tied to my ankles. The other things was tied on to me. What bothered me most was lyin' still on my back from just before dawn till four bells in the mornin'. And the prospect even after that wasn't invitin'.

"After eight bells I counted every bell till four, and it seemed an hour between 'em. When four was struck I heard a trampin' above, and I was carried on deck. Then I listened to the cap'n readin' the burial service.

"It didn't sound no way pleasin'. If I had only expected a divin' exploit it wouldn't 'a' mattered, but I expected a drownin', or, worse'n that, a starvin'. The only thing in my favor was that we was in the gulf stream and the water was warm, besides bein' summer time.

"Well, when the service was ended I was tipped up and felt myself slidin'. It seemed a mighty long while before I struck water. When I did I began to slit the bag, and as soon as I could get my arms out I felt for the rope about my ankles. The shot was pullin' me down pretty fast, and by the time I cut myself free from it I'd gone down somepin like sixty feet, I reckon, but not likin' to get back to the surface till my breath was used up—fearin' to be seen from the ship—I didn't pull myself up; I simply floated up.

"When I struck the surface I saw officers and men lookin' at the place where I had gone down, though most o' 'em were turned away. I saw the sailmaker apart from the rest leanin' over the gunwale lookin' for me, and when the others had gone off I waved my hand to him.

"First thing I did after that was to look around for a sail. There was not one to be seen. Then for the first time out there on the lonely ocean I began to think mebbe I'd better 'a' stayed aboard and been swung off at the yardarm. There was hope for me, 'cause I was in the course of ships 'tween American and Mediterranean ports. But how many ships was passin' that way? Mighty few. And how was I to get their attention? True, one o' my mates had tacked a white rag to a stick and it was put into the bag with me, but what's a few square feet o' rag to a ship miles away?

"I found my grub in good shape. It was in a tin box with a round hole in one side, the hole havin' a cap that screwed on. To help keep out the water the screw had been waxed. My life preserver had been fixed to hold my shoulders above the surface, and by raisin' my can and my bottle I kept the grub from salt water. Bein' hungry, I ate a fair breakfast, though I would have preferred some company.

"I floated all that day and the next and the next without seein' a sail. On the fourth day I saw one on the horizon, but o' course it didn't do me any good. My first meal was the last real meal I took; the rest was eatin' and drinkin' when I was so hungry and thirsty that I must have somepin to keep me goin'. My water soon give out, but I didn't suffer so much from this, 'cause the sea water got into me through the pores of the skin, leavin' the salt on the outside. I wished somepin to float on would come near me, but not a stick passed me.

"I slept most o' the time; leastways I was in a stupor. It was the only thing that enabled me to stay in the water so long, the sun shinin' hot down on me by day and the cold air blowin' over me by night. One day, after I had been scannin' the horizon all the mornin' for a sail without seein' any, I sunk into one o' those sleeps or stupors. The next thing I knew I was bein' hauled into a ship's boat. The time o' day was about sunset. I'd been sleepin' for hours, and while I was doin' it a vessel came right along where I was. A sailor saw me floatin' not a cable's length from the ship and reported me. Then a boat was sent for me."

"What time o' day was you taken out o' the water, Tom?" asked one of the audience.

"It was just after 6 in the evenin'."

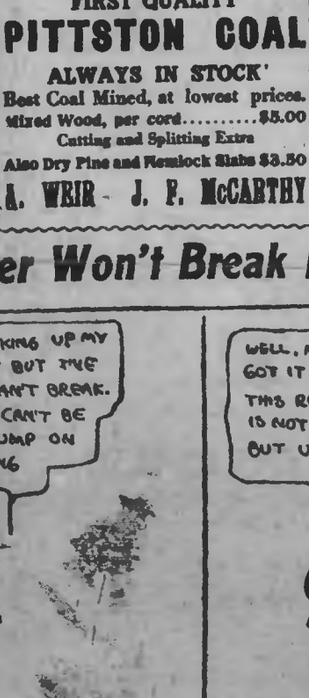
"How do you know?"

"How do I know? I know 'cause I always carried a silver watch in my fob and looked at it as soon as I was got into the boat."

"Was it goin'?"

"Sartin, it was goin'. I wound it every day."

This broke the spell of Tom's yarn. His mates would not admit that a watch immersed in sea water would keep going and mark accurate time.



"I BROUGHT THE BAR DOWN ON THE THIRD OFFICER'S HEAD."

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak aching back, and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Tricky Bait.

"They told me to use a live frog for bait," said the stranger, "but I've been here all day and haven't had a bite yet."

"I reckon not, suh," said the old Georgian darkey. "De frog hez swimmed ter a log wid yo' hook an' line an' is settin' cross leg on de log a-lookin' at you!"

Consolation.

"Look here, waiter, I've been waiting half an hour for that steak I ordered."

Waiter—Yes, sir; I know it, sir. Life would be worth living, sir, if every one was as patient as you, sir."

Her Tip.

"Mine at last! I could face ogres for you."

"Well, while you are feeling so spunky it would be a good time for you to interview papa, George."

NO REST FOR MILITANTS.

London Police Are Taking Strong Measures With Women.

LONDON, June 13. — The police are persisting in their harrying tactics against the militant suffragettes, to whom they are determined not to give any rest.

Yesterday they raided a private house in Kensington where the "Wild Women" established their headquarters, after their offices in Westminster had been invaded and closed a few days ago. Great quantities of papers were seized, but no arrests were made.

Attempt To Burn Church.

LONDON, June 13.—A determined attempt was made by militant suffragettes yesterday morning to burn the ancient church of St. Margaret's at Chipstead, about 14 miles to the southeast of London. Three distinct fires fed by fire-lighters, composed of squares of felt saturated with oil were set by the "arson squad."

The rector, Rev. Wm. H. Stone, and the villagers were soon on the scene and were able to extinguish the flames before much damage had been done to the church, which dates from the 12th century.

Half Million Against Union.

MONTREAL, June 13. — The collection by Presbyterians of $500,000 to fight church union was announced yesterday at the annual meeting of the Montreal Methodist Conference in St. James' Church, by Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown of Winnipeg, a general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada. He said that the Presbyterians wanted a survey of the country. He had no objection to this provided the Presbyterians paid for it. He thought the matter of property could be adjusted by Parliamentary legislation.

Rev. Dr. Sparling of Ottawa was elected president of the conference.

Mazatlan Attacked.

On Board U. S. S. California, Mazatlan, Mexico, June 11, via wireless to San Diego, Calif., June 13.—The Constitutionalist army under Gen. Obregon began yesterday its first concentrated general assault on the Federal fortifications at Mazatlan. The battle raged all day.

Scene of Disaster.

MONTREAL, June 13.—The funeral service of the Catholic dead who are still imprisoned in the hull of the Empress is being arranged at Rimouski. The services will be conducted from a boat chartered for the purpose.

"TIZ" GLADDENS, SORE, TIRED FEET

No pulled-up, burning, tender, sweaty feet—no corns or callouses.

"TIZ" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, bunions, and chilblains.

"TIZ" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "TIZ" brings restful foot comfort. "TIZ" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

Strike Like a Revolt.

ROME, June 13.—Movements of a revolutionary character were reported yesterday throughout the four provinces of Bologna, Ferrara, Ravenna and Forli.

Although a cessation of the general strike which began on Monday had been ordered by the labor organizations, the workmen of extreme views in these districts have refused to return to work.

Nothing has been heard from Ravenna since the despatch of a detachment of troops from Bologna to assist in restoring order.

A Real Snap.

"What, mother, is meant by having a snap?"

"It is something, child, that no one really has but children. Their mothers take care of them, and their fathers pay the bills. They never have a snap again."—Baltimore American.

Weight of Platinum.

Platinum is the only thing in the world that is heavier than gold. A cubic foot of this metal weighs 1,330 pounds to 1,020 pounds, which gold weighs. Next in weight come mercury, lead and silver in the order named.

Nature Never Intended Woman to be Sickly

As a matter of fact it is her right and her duty to enjoy perfect health and strength—to be just as strong and healthy as man—perhaps more so—in view of the fact that it is she who brings into the world the offspring.

Every woman can be strong and healthy. Don't resign yourself to a delicate life.

If you suffer from headaches, backaches, nervousness, low spirits, lack of ambition, or have lost all hope of being well again—it's more than an even chance that you will speedily regain your health if you will try

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

This famous remedy is the result of years of patient research by a physician who has made women's ailments a life study.

GIRL SPY GOES TO PRISON

Young Austrian Woman Sold German Naval Plans.

BERLIN, June 15. — Rose Lauenstein, the girl clerk, who was arrested at Hamburg on a charge of having obtained from a shipyard portions of the plans of a warship and of having sold them to the French Intelligence Bureau, was sentenced at Leipsig to thirty months' penal servitude for espionage. She is an Austrian subject.

Having obtained possession of a drawing of some warship machinery she offered it to the French Intelligence Bureau, which had sent her to Germany with a list of matters regarding which information was desired. In attempting to obtain this she fell into a police trap and was arrested when starting for Paris with faked secret information papers on her person.

Fatal Accident In West.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., June 13.—One workman was killed and seven others were badly injured on the C. P. R. irrigation works at Brooks, Alta., when the trestle work of a large cement viaduct gave way and fell forty feet to the ground.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent County, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

While entering a deserted Chinese shack often frequented by tramps, Provincial Constable J. N. Allan of Kamloops was shot dead there on Saturday.

The Mexican troopship Guerrero destroyed the Constitutionalist armed steamer Guitacan, after a battle near Guaymas Thursday night, according to reports.

The Panama Canal tolls exemption repeal bill was signed Saturday by Vice-President Marshall and by Speaker Clark, for the U. S. Senate and House respectively.

A fifth eruption of Mount Lassen, California, more violent than that of Thursday night, which in turn was far greater than any of those that preceded it, occurred Saturday.

A quartette of fishermen of Jackson, Mich., report that they caught a turtle which weighed 103 pounds. The fresh water monster was taken to Jackson and put in the city zoo.

John Duffy, a roomer at 128 York street, Toronto, attempted to commit suicide early Sunday morning by jumping from the second storey to the sidewalk. He was unhurt, however.

Captain John Berry, pilot of the missing balloon of the Million Population Club, and his aide, George Y. Morrison, walked into Oregon City on Saturday. Their balloon was wrecked in a tree.

With 350 passengers on board, 240 of whom were members of the International Circulation Managers' Association, the Northern Navigation Co.'s new steamer Neronic, arrived at the Soo Sunday, on her maiden trip up the great lakes.

WOMEN SHOULD STRIKE.

They Ought To Give Up Church Work For a Year Says Minister.

WINNIPEG, June 15.—At Saturday morning's session, crowded with business, the Manitoba Methodist conference in Broadway Church a resolution was passed memorializing the general conference to open all church court to women of the church on the same terms as laymen. Rev. Dr. John MacLean, Winnipeg, made a determined speech against the innovation, saying that the question of the extension of church privileges to women seemed to be bigger than the gospel of Jesus Christ to some people. "These folk seem to fancy that women will bring in the millennium and overcome all evils." There was much merriment from Dr. MacLean's attitude, the resolution carried with only two dissentients. During the discussion, Rev. B. A. MacClung said he would advise women of Methodism to strike from church work for one year if the request was not granted.

FILMS ARE BURNED.

Lubin Company's Stock Was Worth Half a Million.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 15.—A boy was fatally hurt and moving picture films valued at $500,000 were destroyed and a block of houses was burned to the ground Saturday as a result of an explosion which wrecked a one-storey brick building used as a storage vault for films at the Lubin Moving Picture Plant at Twentieth street and Indiana avenue. One side of the brick structure was blown out. Thousands of reels of films stored within caught fire. A row of houses, facing the brick building soon caught fire, their occupants fleeing in terror. Roy Didio was enveloped by flames when his home, No. 2933 North Garnett street was set ablaze by the explosion. He was so terribly burned that he will die.

Two hundred girls fled in alarm from the Lubin plant and many fainted.

Boy Killed By Motor Truck.

TORONTO, June 15.—While crossing the street opposite his father's butcher store, at 221 Soraurea avenue at 10.45 a.m. on Saturday, Ralph Stokes, three-year-old son of Fred J. Stokes, was run down and instantly killed by a motor truck. Henry Jollow, the driver, was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence and taken to No. 6 police station.

Mayor Fires One Hundred.

MONTREAL, June 15.—Mayor Mederic Martin and his Board of Control discharged 100 men in the public works department yesterday morning. The lot consisted of engineers, draftsmen, chainmen and others of like employment. The mayor says he saved the city $65,000 a year by firing the whole bunch. To-day the City Council will be asked to vote money to pay the expense of a referendum on the abolition of the Board of Control. It is likely that the city will have a vote on the question soon.

VESUVIUS IS ACTIVE.

Area Around Crater Threatens To Plunge Into Abyss.

ROME, June 15. — Vesuvius is showing signs of activity, and an area of 200 yards on the edge of the main crater threatens to plunge into the abyss. The Government has, therefore, stationed a squad of carabineers on the summit of the volcano to warn adventurous tourists of the danger. At this season of the year nearly 100,000 visitors usually make ascents.

It may be recalled that about two years ago a large party of Messrs. Cooks' excursionists had a narrow escape. Only five minutes after they had descended the cinder cone where they had been standing collapsed with a thunderous crash, wrecking the upper funicular railway station and carrying away a large portion of Messrs. Cooks' buildings at the bottom of the crater.

Destruction of Papers Alleged.

QUEBEC, June 15.—Charging her with destroying certain real estate documents, by throwing them into the St. Charles river here, Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Robitaille of Quebec city, are taking action against Miss Zelia Mercier. They claim damages to the extent of $565. In their action, the plaintiffs say the defendant took plans, deeds of sale, contract, and threw them to the bottom of the river.

Land Leeches of Ceylon.

Beautiful Ceylon has mosquitoes said to be the most adroit and audacious in the world and snakes and a thousand more plagues of poor human beings but the worst of them all is a species of leech. The Ceylon land leech is a thin creature about two inches long and very nimble and flexible. It will crawl up a man's leg and, traveling underneath the clothing, will climb as high as the throat. These leeches do not crawl like the leeches that are known to medicine, but rear themselves up on their tails to watch for prey and walk off to attack it with amazing rapidity. In walking through the jungle hosts of them may be seen by the roadside, where they wait to victimize cattle. Horses, it is said, are driven half wild by them, as also are palanquin bearers and coolies, whose bare legs are their favorite resort, the man's hands being too engaged to pull them off. The leeches may be seen hanging round their ankles, from which tiny trickles of blood run over the feet.—London Standard.

One of His Own Books.

At the height of his vogue Dumas could not turn out his tales fast enough to satisfy his clamoring publishers, and it became necessary for him to employ collaborators, to whom he sketched the plot, perhaps, leaving them to do the rest. Among the most distinguished was Paul Meurice.

Thus it came about that Meurice was the author of one of the most amusing novels of Dumas. Dumas when traveling found this novel in a hotel and opened it to pass away the time. He began reading it seriously, got interested in it and was amused. Presently some one came to his room and found him with his own book in his hand.

"I am reading," said Dumas in response to a question, "a novel of my own which I did not know and which pleases me vastly."

It was Dumas who said when left to himself, "I am never bored when I have my own company."—New York Tribune.

The Selfish Skipper.

"I will not stop to tow you off. I have fish aboard."

This was the answer returned by the captain of a fishing steamer to the signal of distress from a pilot boat on the rocks at the entrance of the Golden Gate. No one will deny that it was a heartless answer, but it is an answer that is being constantly given in all the relations of life. All around pilot boats are on the rocks or suffering pain, but the fishing boat sails by unheeding because it has fish aboard and has no time to stop and throw out a towline. How many fishing boats there are that refuse a word of kindness and counsel, a friendly hand, a smile of encouragement! How many fishing boats there are that are blind, deaf or indifferent to the hopes, aspirations and struggles of those who are on the rocks!

"We can't stop. We have fish on board."

"Pop."

"Yes, my son."

"Do you believe that history repeats itself?"

"Yes, my boy."

"Well, if it does, who is the other man like Washington who never told a lie?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Given Up Atlantic Flight.

LONDON, June 13.—The project of the Canadian millionaire sportsman, Mackay Edgar, to fly across the Atlantic Ocean with a huge Martin-Handasyde monoplane is in abeyance owing to Hamel's death. Edgar is not interested in any other pilot, as he says none of them has Hamel's ability in the air. He refuses to invite another to take his place.

There is also difficulty in finding any one sufficiently experienced to be trusted with preliminary tests of the mammoth plane in starting and landing.

Ear Wagging.

Only animals with long and drooping ears are able to wag them. A rabbit, for instance, can do what it likes with its ears, dropping one or both and laying them flat along its back when dashing through thick cover. Hares are still more brisk in ear movements. But short eared beasts, like weasels and stoats, are unable to wag their ears in any degree, although they have enough ear to wag if they had the power.

Thackeray as a Lecturer.

Thackeray did not always enjoy giving lectures, and there seems to have been a curious difference in his manner of delivering them. In one town a member of the audience, after admiring Thackeray's clear and telling delivery, declared that in expression he was like nothing so much as "a monument of grief." Yet one of his hearers at a subsequent lecture found him "a radiant, smiling, buoyant personality." From Edinburgh he wrote to Mrs. Fanshawe: "The lectures have been a success. I was famously hissed for speaking disrespectfully of Mary, queen of Scots, but it was good fun and made the evening more amusing. I am to repeat the lecture here, and go for reading out of a book for sixteen hours shall get £500."—London Mail.

Weather Forecasts.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, Nov. 14, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. As a storm had raged several days earlier in France, Valliant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

A Shipwreck.

Muggins, gazing intently at a dead dog, in a resigned tone at last said: "Here is another shipwreck."

"Shipwreck! Where?" blurted out Juggins.

"Where, my dear friend?" quoted M. "There is a bark lost forever."

Juggins growled and passed on.

"Bronze" Statuette Solid Gold.

While in Rome recently an Aberdeen tradesman named Sunderland purchased from a hawker a statuette of a Roman soldier five inches high, for $2.50. It was thought to be bronze, but examination now shows it to be solid gold.

Temperance Associations Say Mr. Soden Did Not Promise To Vote

Did Not Make Definite Clear Cut Statements on Points Submitted to Him by Temperance Electors.

QUESTION IN A LETTER

Editor The Examiner

Dear Sir,—As the stand the County Temperance Association and the Citizens' Temperance League have taken on behalf of the Liberal candidate in West Peterborough is receiving considerable attention at the hands of the Conservative candidate and some of his friends, may I trespass on your space in order to make their position clear.

Both the County and City Temperance organizations, as far as Mr Soden's personal record is concerned, at first considered Mr. Soden to be a candidate who would be satisfactory to the temperance interests.

Only one thing prevented the temperance organizations from extending their support to Mr Soden. It is the fact that up to the present Mr Soden has used a cloud of words and high sounding phrases, expressing his belief in the abolition of the bar, the shop and the club license, but no where yet has Mr Soden, as far as we can discover, stated openy that if elected he would vote on every possible occasion with either party—

First. For the abolition of the 1,300 bars in the Province.

Second. For the abolition of the approximately 58 Club licenses.

Third. For the abolition of the 215 shop licenses in the Province.

Instead, Mr. Soden has made it very plain that he may not entertain any of these measures. For proof, let us examine the report of his Opera House speech, as published on the front page of the Daily Review for June 12. Near the top of the sixth column: Mr. Soden is quoted as saying:

"Mark, you. I am not speaking, and do not wish to be understood as speaking against the abolition of the bars and the Club licenses. My statement, my beliefs, my standing on this question remain even as I stated them at the Conservative Convention, viz., I believe in the abolition of all three, but contend that to be effective, permanent and safe, legislation for temperance men to support, the law should include all three."

Note, that the inference is that unless all three are included Mr. Soden may not vote for the abolition of the others. If this seems to be hair-splitting we would call attention to the following statement by Mr. Soden, which appears at the top of the next column to the right, where Mr. Soden says:

"To the extent of my own vote, and of my own influence, if returned, I MAY work towards the end that we desire."

We would like to call attention to the fact that Mr. Soden says he MAY vote. He does not say that he will vote for such measures. This is the kernel of the whole difficulty.

We are perfectly aware that Mr. Soden, in his private canvas, when asked for a clear-cut, definite answer, has made absolute promises to temperance workers, whose support he desired, that he intends to vote for any and al three of these measures. Thus, privately, he has pledged his vote and influence for temperance. We are also aware that Mr. Soden has made the positive assertion that if elected he would go to Toronto absolutely unpledged as to how he would vote. These conflicting statements have prevented both organizations from placing confidence in Mr. Soden's platform. If Mr. Soden has made as definite and clearcut statements inpublic, that he would vote in the Legislature with either party on every posible occasion in favour of temperance measures, as he has made in private, there would have been no opposition from Temperance organizations to his candidature.

A Precedent.

If any person thinks this stand unreasonable on the part of the temperance organizations we would draw attention to the fact that in East Peterborough Mr. Jas. Thompson, before his election to the Legislature, was considered to be a strong temperance man. He pledged himself to vote, if elected, for the abolition of the three-fifths' requirement. Temperance people helped to elect Mr. Thompson, and on one or two occasions after his election he did vote against the Government on the three-fifths' requirement. Since then he has voted with th Government against the temperance measures introduced by the

RECORD CROWD WILL HEAR THE LIBERAL LEADER

Judging by the interest that is being shown in the visit to Peterborough of Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Opposition, there will be a record crowd in atendance at the Grand Opera House on Thursday to hear the messages from the man of the hour. Mr. Rowell is very much in the limelight at the present time, and Peterborough electors are very fortunate in being given this opportunity of hearing him. Mr. Rowell will be accompanied by several other speakers when Mr. Gillespie will also address the meeting.

BATTERIES AND DRAGOONS OFF TO PETAWAWA

Artillerymen Got Away on Saturday and The Cavalry Left Yesterday For Training Quarters

BOTH IN GOOD SHAPE

The 24th Field Battery, about one hundred strong, entrained at the C.P.R. station Saturday night about nine o'clock for the Annual Camp at Petawawa. There they will spend the next couple of weeks, and it is anticipated that on their return the Battery will be much pleased with their period of training, and that the actual campaigning that they will pass through at Petawawa will be of considerable value.

The Battery left on a special train which included coaches for the officers and men, box cars for the impedimenta, and flat cars for the guns, which were very much in evidence. The whole regiment felt in fine spirits in the prospect of the outing, and will certainly make a good showing on the field of Petawawa.

The Battery was in cargo of Col. Young, while Major G. Hall, Capt. Fee and Lieutenants Matthews, Morphey and Bishop were other officers. Dr. Cameron was the medical officer with the Battery.

Dragoons Entrain.

Yesterday afternoon the Third Dragoons entrained at the G.T.R. station, en route to Petawawa also, and the men and horses looked in fine shape for the rather strenuous two weeks that lies ahead of them. The men that left were in charge of Major Anderson and Captain Cleghorn, and Major Medd is in command of the portion of the Dragoons that joined the local contingent at Millbrook.

The turnout of the Dragoons is an unusually large one this year, and the horses that were secured for the men were spirited and fine looking animals. The prospects of a successful camp appeared bright to both men and officers, and they made a splendid showing as they lined up near the station immediately before their departure.

45th Regiment.

The 45th Regiment, of Lindsay, also passed through the city this morning en route for Petawawa. There are between fifty and sixty local boys with this Regiment, in "D" Company. The Regiment is in charge of Col. F. Holmes Hopkins, Lindsay, and Lieutenant Henry commands the local contingent.

A Long Series Of Liquor Cases

This morning's police court was a long series of drunks.

William Huffman was charged with supplying W. Hamilton, a blacklister, with liquor, but the case was dismissed.

W. Hamilton was fined $10 for being drunk while on the prohibited list.

Five men were fined $2 for being drunk.

A blacklister was fined $10 for being drunk.

Harold Whittaker, who was charged with vagrancy, was discharged.

Gus Rose was fined $7.60 or fifteen days in jail for illegal fishing.

Benjamin Taylor was charged with a breach of the Fisheries Act. The case was dismissed.

Magistrate Dumble let the case of David Evans, who was found drunk, go for a month to see how he behaves.

On Sunday morning Garnet Innis drove a cab up George Street while under the influence of liquor and one of the horses fell down and he was unable to control it. The lady who was in the cab had to get out and walk. However, Innis was fined $2 and costs, amounting to $5.75.

SUFFS FIRED BOMB IN BIG CHURCH TERRORIZE LONDON

Wild Scenes in Old St. Paul's Chained Themselves to Seats and Hooted While Hymns Were Sung

SOME ROUGHLY TREATED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., June 14.—Today's instalment of terrorism by the militants consisted in the placing of a bomb in the ultra fashionable church of St. George's in Hanover Square, and brawling in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and elsewhere. The bomb placed in St. George's was similar to the bombs heretofore exploded in various churches. It exploded about 10.30 o'clock Sunday evening, about an hour after the church had been closed.

The firemen and police on entering St. George's after the explosion found the church filled with dense smoke. The most serious result of the vandalism was great damage done to the famous Dutch window above the altar, at which so many fashionable weddings have been solemnized. The window is in three sections. It dates back to about the year 1520, and formerly belonged to a convent at Malines. Beneath the window and over the altar hangs Sir James Thornhill's painting of "The Last Supper." This escaped damage.

The pew, the second from the altar, where the bomb was placed, and another one adjoining, were wrecked. The remnants of the bomb which were found indicate that it was made of about two pounds of gunpowder placed in a corned beef can, which was bound with a strap. It was evidently ignited by a fuse, at the end of which a lighted candle had been placed, as in previous cases of this kind.

Wild Scenes in St. Paul's.

The uproar at St. Paul's Cathedral occurred in the afternoon and excelled all previous efforts of the suffragettes except the vicious demonstration at Brompton Oratory last Sunday. The Lord Mayor of London, the sheriffs, the judges of the High Court and other dignitaries were present, as the occasion was a special "hospital" Sunday service. There were numerous policemen about the cathedral in preparation for any disturbance and there were special detachments of detectives at all the entrances, who scrutinized everyone who entered, but all these precautions were useless.

Just as the singing of an anthem was about to begin, a raucous yell startled the huge congregation, which had no need to hear the words of the women, which were to the effect that women were being murdered, to realize what was happening. The police pounced on the disturber, who was a middle-aged woman, but before they reached the nearest door, a group of the militants who were seated among the congregation beneath the dome started shrieking. The police and the vergers seized two of the women and bundled them out but three others were found to be chained to chairs which are joined to the long pews by planks.

While they were being disentangled the women kept up a squealing chorus of "Brutes." The choir started to sing an anthem, but this was drowned out by the squealing as the women, struggling and kicking, were carried to the door. Other women then began yelling in other parts of the cathedral.

Congregation Takes a Hand.

The congregation then became incensed and took a hand in ejecting the women. They did not go so far as the more violent Catholics at Brompton Oratory, but they did not treat the disturbers tenderly. Two of the women gave an elegant display of feminine dignity by throwing themselves on the floor and kicking and striking at everyone who approached them. At another part of the building one woman threw herself on the floor and another one flung herself on top of her to prevent the former from being removed. Some of the indignant worshippers seized one of the women and shook her violently.

In some cases the members of the congregation who assisted in ejecting the disturbers seized them by the hair and in that way dragged them to the door. One of the women struck a man and he retaliated by boxing her ears.

Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey—Under which suffragettes exploded a bomb, breaking the historic Stone of Scone This is the most famous relic of prehistoric days in the British Empire. For centuries the stone furnished a throne for Scottish Kings on the day of their coronation. It remained in Scotland until captured by Edward the Fifth of England, where it has remained ever since. It was specially mentioned in the Act of Union between Scotland and England, and under the law no British King can reign unless he is crowned upon the sacred stone.

BECK VERY NON-COMMITAL

Refuses to Say Whether or Not He Will be the Conservative Candidate in London or Discuss Power Policy

LIBERALS TO MEET

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ONT., June 15.—Hon. Adam Beck refused to say whether or not he will accept the Conservative nomination for London.

He absolutely declined to say this morning whether he would support Rowell's abolish the bar platform or not.

London Liberals are meeting in convention to-night, and it is expected that A. M. Hunt, secretary of the Western Fair, and a prominent temperance worker, will be nominated to oppose Beck.

Inquires Into Collision

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK CITY, June 15.—Under orders from the United States Government, searching enquiry will be made into the cause of the collision between the steamers New York and Pretorian on Saturday although no lives were lost. There is much comment here regarding the slowness of commencement of enquiry into the Empress of Ireland disaster. On behalf of the United Staters lost in that calamity, it is thought some protest should be made to the British Government.

FELL FROM A VERANDAH

Railing Collapsed and Mrs. Hodges, Chambers Street, is Precipitated to the Pavement

HER RIBS FRACTURED

Mrs. Hodges, 433 Chambers street, was the victim of a painfuh accident yesterday morning, by which she sustained a fracture of several ribs, a bad gash on her head and a severe shaking up. Mrs. Hodges was leaning over the railing of the verandah at her home when it collapsed and she fell to the pavement, five feet below. The injured lady, who is 85 years of age, was carried into the house, where Dr. Frederick attended to her injuries. She is resting more easily to-day.

Local Man Was Interested in Neckwear Co'y

Mr. Thos. Disten has received word from his son, William Disten, of the formation of the Disten Neckwear Co. Limited, in Winnipeg, for the manufacture of high class neckwear. Mr. Disken, who is manager of the company, was for some years connected with the Colonial Weaving Co. of this City. There are no manufacturers of neckwear in the west and Mr. Disten believes the future of his company is very bright. He was able to interest some moneyed men in the proposition and has already established a good connection.

$500 FROM THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

Examiner Special;

MONTREAL, P. Q., June 15—His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has subscribed $500 to the Empress of Ireland relief fund through the Board of Trade at Quebec.

NEW TAILORS

The Globe Tailoring Co., of Toronto, which has opened up a branch of their business in Peterborough at No. 181 Charlotte Street, is highly pleased with the reception given them since coming to Peterborough. They sell tailor-made suits for $14.00—one price only—and guarantee to satisfy their customers.

LOST A FOOT, NARROWLY ESCAPED WITH HIS LIFE

Ben Clute, G.T.R. Brakeman, Was Thrown Under Moving Transport Train at Millbrook on Sunday—Right Foot Crushed.

HIS HOME ON ALBERT ST.

Ben Clute, a G.T.R. barkesman, had his right foot amputated at the Nicholls Hospital on Sunday afternoon as the result of an accident at Millbrook station, in which the Peterborough young man narrowly escaped being crushed to death under the wheels of the 3rd Prince of Wales transport train.

Young Clute was in the caboose next to the two engines which were hauling the train. It left this City at 2.15 p.m. and arrived in Millbrook about 2.40 p.m. The platform was crowded with Millbrook people who, with universal village curiosity, had gathered to see the train arrive. Clute stepped from the caboose and for some purpose began to run along the platform toward the rear of the transport.

The crowd was close to the platform edge and someone stepping nearer the coaches, bumped against Clute, throwing him off his balance and on to the track.

Presence of Mind.

The train was still moving. Bennie fell across a rail and quickly rolled off as the wheels approached. He cleared his body except his right foot, which was badly crushed.

One of the engines of the transport train was sent back to Peterborough with the injured young man, who received first aid at Millbrook from the medical officer attached to the Dragoons. The train reached the City at 4 o'clock.

Ben Clute's parents reside on Albert Street. He has been with the G.T.R. for a considerable time and was located at Lindsay. He is quite a young man, in his early twenties, and his friends in the City have learned of his accident with regret.

INQUIRY INTO DISASTER WILL BEGIN TO-MORROW

Lord Mersey and Members of Court Pass Through the River St. Lawrence To-day Towards Scene of Accident

INFORMAL SITTINGS

Examiner Special:

THREE RIVERS, QUE., June 15.—Lord Mersey and his court of enquiry into the Empress disaster, with all assessors and various staff, passed down the St. Lawrence River from Montreal this afternoon, toward the scene of the great disaster. There were informal sittings of the court en route. Lord Mersey is anxious to clear away all preliminaries as early as possible, and kept up constant connection with the shore by means of wireless all day to-day. It is believed the court will be ready to hear witnesses to-morrow morning in Quebec.

Local Boy Is Successful

Gerard J. Maher, son of Mr. M. J. Maher, has been very successful in his third year examinations at St. Michael's College. In the special course in Philosophy he was first in the first class honour standing, and in the general course he passed with first class honours. He is only nineteen years of age.

NO COMMENT ON FACT THAT ARMS WERE CARRIED

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, June 15.—None of the Montreal papers make any comment of the fact that the 55th carried their rifles after all yesterday, being content with merely describing the event, which was the most successful Corpus Christi procession in the history of Montreal.

Ball Team Has Week On Road

The Peterborough Ball Club left this morning on a week's road trip, playing in Hamilton and finishing the week in Brantford. The Petes will be at home a week from to-day with Brantford as their guests. The team has been playing pretty good ball for the past week and with any luck on the road should be in a position to climb the ladder in their week at home.

FARMERS NEED RAIN BADLY

The farmers in this vicinity are complaining of the need of rain. While districts not very far remote from Peterborough have had all the rain necessary, or at least considerably more than Peterborough district; we have had only light showers, and that occasionally.

A farmer in Monaghan, and another in Smith, talking to the Examiner this morning, stated that rye and fall wheat were already heading out and that all straw and hay would be very short unless rain came soon. In fact he stated there would be no hay crop at all.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

It is very important that every player of the Red Caps be at the Exhibition Grounds Tuesday, June 16th, at 7 p.m. sharp, for practice against a picked team. Signed, J. Pilling, Manager.

MRS. STEVENS WILL SPEAK ON TEMPERANCE

Mrs. E. A. Stevens, provincial president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will address the ladies of Peterborough in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, on the temperance question. A large audience will undoubtedly hear Mrs. Stevens.

Merchant Says The Pavement is Not Kept Clean Enough

A prominent George Street business man stated to-day that the dust from the pavement is worse than when the old roadway had its natural topping. Then when the watering cart passed over the road the earth was reduced practically to mud and it was hours before it dried out. During recent hot days the pavements dry up very quickly and there is not sufficient force behind the water to carry the dust and dirt into the gutter. This merchant states that the City Fathers should keep the pavement damp. He is of the opinion that the street watering situation under present conditions, is not getting the attention it deserves. If merchants are to pay extra for their premises fronting a paved street, in justice to these merchants the streets should be well cleaned. If they are intended as an asset, keep them an asset, and not allow them to deteriorate into a lodging place for dust. This is one man's opinion.

INFORMATION WANTED ABOUT LOST BOY

Mr. George Moore of Keene is anxious to know the whereabouts of his son, George Henry Thomas Moore, who left his home on June 9th. The boy was in Peterborough on June 11th and slept at the home of a friends on Oaddy Street, East City. Young Moore is 15 years of age, has black hair and hazel eyes. The father would be very grateful to receive any information that will help him to locate his son.

A GOVERNMENT FOLLY.

Hon. Mr. Duff, speaking in the Opera House, in boasting of the achievements of the Whitney Government, said that the Government had greatly increased the Provincial revenue. But he did not boast that the Government had incresed the expenditure four times over—doubled it twice in nine years. In opposition, Sir James Whitney was righteously indignant over the extravagant expenditure of the Liberal Government, and he has committed the sin he condemned. He even spends a million dollars and more in building a residence—nay, a palace—for the Lieutenant-Governor, though it drains the treasury so dry that there was not money enough left to pay the school grants. Everybody but the Government derides this palace in a hole as supreme folly. Even the Toronto Saturday Night, always friendly to the Government, condemns this foolish and utterly unnecessary expenditure. It thus saterises the folly: placed in the worst possible site that could be selected. a site so bad that some $300,000 had to be spent to put it into half-decent condition. "Saturday Night" has its little laugh in this wise:

"It has been suggested that Ontario's new Government House, in view of its situation, be made over into a home for retired railway locomotive firemen and engineers. It is thought that with railways, close at hand on two sides, and with the belching chimneys of the Don Valley Brick Company on a third, these men would feel perfectly at home at Government House. It has been further suggested that this palatial million dollar pile be made over into an asylum for the feeble-minded, in memory of the genius who picked upon the site but on mature consideration, it is said that the lunatics would object to the location.

In any event, Sir John Gibson is to be congratulated over the fact that his term of office is expiring, and that he will not be obliged to live in the place."

MR. SODEN REJECTS HONOURS.

Mr. Soden, in his rejection of the honour of being in the "honour roll" of those Conservatives who desire advanced temperance legislation, takes an attitude that may lead to an enforced reject ion of the honour of representing West Peterborough. The Toronto Star publishes an "honour roll" of Conservative temperance men who have publicly announced their support of the policy of abolition of the bar, the chief issue in the campaign. It is assumed that the list is called an "honour roll" for it it is an honour to a man to be consistent and honest—to have the courage of his convictions, to vote for a great moral issue representing the greatest moral advance ever proposed in this province—that they prefer the benefits to the individual, the society and the state, to the petty triumph of a political party. Our boys and girls, our wives, our homes, all blighted by the curse of strong drink and exposed to the dangers of the traffic, will always be a target for the assaults of the traffic; but party organizations, party governments, come and go, and have no ground for existence, except by the will of the people and in the interests of the welfare of the people.

Mr. Soden, the candidate—he makes so many shifts that it is hard to designate his candidature—declines to be in the Star's "honour roll" and sends by telegraph the following, as recorded in the Star:

The Star to-day received the following telegram from Mr. R. J. Soden, Conservative candidate in West Peterborough:

"Peterborough, Ont., June 13.

"I request that you cancel my name from your alleged honour roll, as I do not subscribe to the Rowell policy, but agree with the Whitney Government that if the people want dvanced temperance measures they must send the men to Parliament who will advocate them. I am for the abolition of the shops as well as bars and clubs, and regard Rowell's policy as even more dangerous to true temperance than the present arrangement. Please publish today." R. J. SODEN.

Note—Of course Mr. Soden's name name is removed from the honour roll, there being no desire to include in it nay reluctant name. The Star also gladly publishes Mr. Soden's explanation of his real position.

In this Mr. Soden adds another phase to the contradictory character of his candidature. At the temperance convention he voted with the almost unanimous temperance convention, for a resolution, pledging the convention to support the candidate who would sign the pledge as amended by Mr. Soden's own motion to include "shops." He has not only not supported the candidate, Gillespie, who signed the pledge, but he actually sought to get nominated in opposition to him, and refused to sign the pledge he had altered to suit himself; and support the candidate who signed it as amended. At the opera house he did not, and dared not, "speak against the abolition of bars and club licenses," but in his telegram to the Star he regards Rowell's policy—of abolish the bar—as even more dangerous than the open bar and the three-fifths clause.

Mr. Soden seems to have great faith in Sir James Whitney's colourless and meaningless evasion—that if the "temperance people want advanced temperance, send him men to support it and he would give it." With his record of opposing temperance reform, of refusing to cooperate with Mr. Rowell to join forces and destroy the traffic, of playing into the hands of the traffic with the three-fifths clause, this deceptive, deluding and misleading promise is made. Misleading because the government don't want such men sent to Toronto. When a government candidate shows even a leaning to advanced temperance legislation he is forced out of the way by the machine and a straight liquor-traffic candidate substituted.

Mr. Soden is retained as the candidate, for with all his pretenses, he is regarded as a man who will support the government through thick and thin and find an excuse for voting in the House against temperance and for the party, as he has shown a determination to do in this campaign.

We all know where to find Mr. Gillespie; he has taken a stand and stays with it. Mr. Soden, the candidate of a government that refuses to give abolition of the bar, adopts the policy of the opponents of the government and shuffles about so that it will take a commission of inquiry to discover where he stands — according to his varying statements, though there is little doubt that he will vote with the government opposed to temperance advance if party interests demand it, that is if the electors give him the opportunity.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

The opponents of abolition of the bar have so tender a conscience on behalf of temperance or of the liquor traffic, that they consider it desecration to bring so sacred a matter as abolition of the bar—the greatest of modern evils—into party politics.

But Mr. Rowell is not to blame for bringing it into politics. He made the best efforts he could to keep it out of party politics by trying to get Sir James Whitney to place the issue on a higher plane than party politics.

He wanted to get Sir James and his government to cooperate with him, and only took the position he has taken when he found the government unalterably opposed to advanced temperance legislation.

If Sir James had met Mr. Rowell half way the question would have been solved long ago without the necessity of bringing the abolition of the traffic into the field of party politics.

Here is a little illuminating history of Mr. Rowell' attempts to get Sir James Whitney's cooperation:

As far back as July 1st, 1912, at London, Mr. Rowell held out the olive branch to Sir James Whitney when he said.

"Sir James, join with us and let both political parties unite to wipe out the licensedbar-room in this province. Would it not be a splendid spectacle for all the provinces of the dominion and for other countries of the world to witness the union of both political parties in this province to wipe out the curse of the licensed bar."

Again, less than two months ago, in the House, in regard to the petition of the Ontario Young Manhood Association, Mr. Rowell made the following offer to Hon. W. J. Hanna, acting leader of the Government:

"While in many respects I prefer the policy we have submitted to the House to the policy submitted to my honourable friend, the provincial secretary, by the young Conservative members of his party, I say to my honourable friend that if he thinks the proposal presented to him by the young Conservatives of the province is a better proposal than ours, if he thinks it is more in the public interests than ours, then if my honourable friend will introduce legislation to carry it out, we, on this side of the House, will unite with him and his friends to lift the whole question out of the region of party controversy, both parties unite and together wipe out this evil from the province.

"I shall go further and if my honourable friend will accept this policy proposed to him by his young friends and embody it in legislation, I shall be glad to join my honourable friend, the provincial secretary, and any other member of the government in going before the people and urging their acceptance of such a measure."

Both these offers were rejected or ignored. They were made in good faith by the Liberal leader, and if they had been accepted, the issue of advanced temperance legislation would have been accepted. The issue of advanced temperance legislation would have been removed and settled outside the pale of party politics.

Were Sir James Whitney and Mr. Hanna, the real leader, so tied to the liquor interests that they did not dare accept Mr. Rowell's proposal to treat the great temperance issue of abolition of the bar as a non-partizan question?

Mr. Rowell has been forced by lack of government cooperation to make advanced temperance questions a matter of party politics, and in effect it is the Whitney government that is responsible for the temperance issue being forced into party politics.

Now that this has been done, and the appeal of Mr. Rowell has developed such great strength and popularity, the Whitney government which "had no use" for advanced temperance, suddenly sees how good a thing it is and its candidates and apologists are claiming that the government has done more for temperance than—it has done.

The government, led virtually by Mr. Hanna, antagonizes temperance advance, refusing to cooperate in settling advanced legislation for temperance by party agreement; refused to abolish the liquor traffic's dearest friend—the buttress of the bar — the three-fifths clause; sent, or permitted a government official to go, into districts where voting was going on to work against the Scott Act, and in many other ways showed and shows complete subservience to liquor interests.

Yet the followers of Mr. Hanna, the virtual head of the government, now claim to be the greatest friends of temperance, and his candidate in this riding poses as a friend of temperance by antagonizing the policy of his leaders and adopting the policy of the government's strongest opponent upon the question of abolition of the bar.

Nobody will be deceived, except those who want to be deceived; who want an excuse for stifling their conscience and voting for party instead of principle.

Petes Win The Rubber Game, Beating Hams By Eight to Four On Saturday

Homesters Scored Six Runs Off Dr. Yates' Delivery in First Three Innings---Tracey Pitched Steady, Reliable Ball For Home Talent--King's All-round Work Featured.

On Friday last, Pitcher Bill Donahue of the Hams, tried to hand the game to the Petes, but the homesters were not taking any. Saturday Dr. Yates, with the able assistance of his hired help, offered the victory to the Blountmen on a silver platter, and this occasion found the home talent in a more receptive mood, the Petes winning by 8 to 4 in the rubber game, and making their record for the week four wins out of six starts.

Manager Yates is down on the score cards as a pitcher, and he tried to justify the title on Saturday. He occupied the rubber for three innings, during which time the Petes nicked six runs. It was the genial dentist's birthday, and he acted the part. He had nothing but a delivery and a round-house curve, and in addition the plate was swinging for him. On top of it all the Hams fielded like a tail-end Mercantile League team, and if the worthy pilot of the Athletics had finished the game the score might have been a record-breaker. He derricked himself in the fourth, however, and Cosy Dolan finished in good style, holding the local gang to a quartette of hits, and a pair of runs.

Ken Tracey was on the rubber for the homesters and pitched one of his effective games, refusing to hand out a pass, and keeping the hits pretty well scattered. Errors behind him were responsible for several runs, a bad toss by Fox in the first innings turning what should have been a double play into a Hamilton counter. Tracey's pitching percentage is now well ahead of the team's average. He is at the .500 mark, with three wins and three losses.

The chief feature of the game waes the grand fielding of Second-Baseman Chester King for the Petes. The local keystone guardian accepted ten chances in big league style, handling no less than nine ground balls without the semblance of a skip. Two of his stops, one on a wicked drive by Gilhooly, and the other, a bare-handed stop of Red Fisher's steaming grounder over second, were sensational, to say the least. To round out a grand day, King had two solid hits, driving in a pair of runs in the first innings, and sending another over in the sixth.

The Hams went out in order in their half of the first, but the Petes got away to a good start. Blount grounded to McGroarty, Byrne hit one in the same place and was safe when the shortstop let the roller get away from him. Welsh forced Byrne at second, and then stole second. Stewart beat out a bounder to short, moving Welsh to third, Stewart purloined the middle sack and both runners scored when King drove a single over second. Gorman's fly to White ended the innings.

The Athletics got one back in the second. Corns singled through third to start with, and Tracey booted Fisher's sacrifice bunt. White popped to Byrne. Walmsley hit to King, forcing Fisher at second, but in trying to complete the double Fox heaved the sphere high over Gorman's head and Corns scored, Walmsley going to second. McGroarty flied to Blount.

The Petes had another big session at their bat. Fox was walked to start with. Kelly laid down a bunt for a sacrifice, but Fisher made a wide leave to first, Fox going home and Kelly to third. On a ground rule Umpire Miller sent them back to third and second. Tracey hit to Baldwin, and all hands were safe when Dudley dropped the third-baseman's toss. Blount rolled one at Yates, who made a bad throw to the plate, Fox scoring. Byrne's sacrifice fly to White scored Kelly. Welsh fanned, but Stewart singled over second, Gilhooly making a fine stop. King grounded to the pitcher.

In the third the visitors failed to reach first, King throwing out Yates, Dudley and Gilhooly, making a particularly fine play on the latter's vicious drive.

The Petes came back with another brace. Gorman walked and moved up on Fox's sacrifice. Kelly also drew a pass. Tracey singled to right, scoring Gorman. Blount was hit, filling the bases. Byrne hit to McGroarty forcing Tracey at third, while Kelly scored. Welsh fanned.

In the fourth the Ham put two over. Baldwin opened with a single to left, and Fox's fumble of Corns' grounder put two on. Fisher doubled to right, his drive bounding over Stewart's head and Baldwin and Corns scored. White sacrificed Fisher to third. Walmsley grounded to Byrne and McGroarty to Fox, leaving the big catcher stranded.

With Dolan pitching for Hamilton, the Petes failed to score, although Stewart, first up, got a life on McGroarty's fumble.

Dolan opened the fifth for the Athletics with a double, but it was thrown away as Kelly threw out Dudley, Gilhooly fanned, and Fox handled Baldwin's roller.

Kelly gave the Petes a good start by singling, and Tracey sacrificed, but Blount flied to right, and Byrne grounded to Gilhooly.

In the sixth Corns flied to Blount. King robbed Fisher of a hit by a sensational bare-handed stop. White singled to left, but Walmsley was easy on a skipper to King.

The Petes shoved another over in their half. Welsh was safe on Baldwin's fumble, and Stewart sacrificed him to second. He scored easily on King's single over second. Gorman forced King and Fox died on a foul fly.

It was one two three order for the Hams in the seventh, but the Petes added another. Kelly opened with a single, but Tracey forced him at second in trying to sacrifice. Blount forced Tracey on a grounder to Baldwin. Blount stole second, and scored on Byrne's single to left. Byrne was out stealing.

In the eighth Hamilton scored the last run of the game. Gilhooly started with a double to left. Baldwin flied to left. Corns scratched a hit through short. Fisher singled over second, scoring Gilhooly, but was forced at second on White's grounder to King. Walmsley struck out.

MAKING OF A SCOUT

H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught Extends Patronage

"The Making of a Scout" is the subject of a remarkable moving picture film which will be shown in the Grand Opera House. The film, which is almost two miles in length, being the longest film of a single subject in the world, was made under the direction of the National Council of Boy Scouts of America. It is arranged in seven reels and will run for more than two hours.

This novel moving picture production was shown to Col. A. P. Sherwood, Dominion Commissioner of the Boy Scouts, and a committee of Boy Scout officers of Ottawa a few days ago, with the result that they readily approved of it. One of these officers in speaking of "The Making of a Scout," declared that it was all its managers had claimed for it, and even more than he had expected. Those who have seen it, describe the drama enacted by eighty-four characters, most of them real Boy Scouts, as depicting every phase of the activities of Boy Scouts. The pictures show not only the physical activities, but the teachings and general foundations of the Boy Scout movement. By this popular and graphic means these teachings are brought before hundreds of thousands of boys who have not yet been fortunate enough to be reached by Scout influences.

Among the many distinguished personages who have given their approval Wilson, president of the United States who, by a personal appearance in "The Making of a Scout," places his seal of approval on the picture. Other well known men of the republic from whom James E. West, the manager of the Boy Scout moving picture drama has received letters of encouragement and commendation, include Theodore Roosevelt, ex-president of the U. S., Judge Ben B. Lindsay of the Juvenile Court, Denver, Colorado and Gifford Pinchot, Washington, D C.

The picture has been shown with great success in many parts of the United States. It will be shown at the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, on Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday afternoon and evening, June 19th and 20th. Night doors open at 7.30. Performance 8.15. Matinee doors open at 2.00. Performance 2.30.

"A Boy's Ideal" Subject Of Sermon To The Boy Scouts

Eloquent Discourse by Rev. F. J. Sawers at St. Luke's Church Last Evening--Some of the Ideals a Boy Scout Must Follow.

The Boy Scouts of the City must have indeed been deeply impressed by the simple yet eloquent discourse delivered by their District Commissioner, Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., on the occasion of their church parade to St. Luke's, East City, last evening. "A Boys Ideal" was the theme chosen and the high standards of living, both physically, morally and spiritually, laid down in the Boy Scouts' law, referred to, were extremely instructive and helpful to the large congregation present, other than those to whom they were specially directed.

Rev. Mr. Sawers spoke from the texts "Fear God, honour the King," and "Be Ye Ready." In his opening remarks he stated that the Boy Scout movement was younger than the youngest Boy Scout. It was only nine years old, but in that time it had enlisted more than two million boys. It was to be found, not only in Great Britain, but in China, India, Germany and France. In Ontario there were one hundred and forty-seven Scout centres. The movement stood for the development of boyhood with all its possibilities of good and likewise of evil too.

"Be Prepared" was the motto of the Scout. How often one was thrilled by the account of a timely rescue from imminent peril. The preparation of mind and body behind that action was significant. It necessitated mental alertness and a physical condition unimpaired.

The Scouts' salute, namely, the raising of the three fingers, symbolized his willingness to honour God and the King, to help others and obey the Scout law. The Scout's honour was to be trusted. His word was as good as his bond, and the rector remarked if every man in the community had been brought up under that code, affairs would be different to what one sometimes witnessed. "If we were living under a tyrannical monarch it might be a hard thing to obey the King," the reverend speaker continued, "but when we think of the great British Empire, of Victoria the Good, of Edward the Peacemaker, and of our beloved King George, it was an easy matter."

To be useful and to help others was perhaps one of the most important clauses in the Boy Scouts' code. To tie a knot in his tie, and before it was untied to do a good deed, for which no remuneration was to be taken, was his daily obligation. The Scout, too, must be courteous, kind and gentle. He must smile and be happy under all circumstances.

Thrift was also demanded by the Scout law. "I wonder how much anxiety is caused by people living beyond their means?" asked the speaker. "This ideal should make a deep appeal to us all." The ideal Scout was also pure and chaste in thought, word and deed.

Concluding, the Rector said that it must be evident to all that the Scout movement represented the development of truest manhood and noblest citizenship. It was a Christian enterprise. Just as the Saviour went about doing good, so should the Boy Scout. The movement was not a military one, but every member had to be a fighter, even as all had to fight the evils that each day beset them.

Master Sam Whitehouse sang in splendid voice, "Abide With Us," and during the offertory the choir rendered very effectively, an anthem, "Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

DELIGHTFUL RIVER PICNIC

Organized by the Direction of the Conservatory of Music ---A Trip to Rice Lake

A most delightful and enjoyable picnic was that held last Saturday, which had been organized by the management of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

At 2.15 p.m. the good steamship "Stoney Lake" threw off her quarter-spring at the Government Wharf and headed round for the voyage down river. The vessel was comfortably filled, which means that there were seats for all and room to move about; just a pleasant complement of somewhere around two hundred and fifty.

The day was ideal; a brilliant sun shone all day, its warmth being tempered by a pleasant westerly breeze, while a few large flecky white clouds relieved the monotony of an ethereal blue sky. The journey down stream was most enjoyable; the foliage looked as fresh as though there had been a copious rain shower over night, the various tints of green adding an increased beauty to the many pretty spots to be seen down the Otonabee River. On the way down a small diversion was created from the fact of the "Stoney Lake" being overhauled by the "Monitor," which transferred its 'male' (passenger) to the larger vessel.

Of the charming little scenes to be found on this river, this scribe has indited at length on former occasions. Suffice it to say, after a very delightful sail, more especially across Rice Lake, the steamer was moored alongside the Wharf at Gore's Landing at 5.15—three hours from the start. The party then went on shore, some to the hotel, some formed themselves into picnic parties on board, while others partook of an al-fresco repast under the spreading trees on terra firma.

At 7 o'clock the warning whistle recalled all on board and a very pleasant sail up the river was terminated by the arrival of the "Stoney Lake" at its point of departure, as the clocks struck ten and, strange to say, the Town clock and the Post Office cock happened to be synchronous.

On the way down, as also on the return journey, it was well in evidence that the old saw, "The Shoemaker's wife is the worst shod" did not apply on this occasion, for there was music and plenty of it, both vocal and instrumental, piano and orchestral, on both journeys, together with dancing thrown in, on the return trip.

To the indefatizable exertions of Lieut. and Mrs Gliddon are due the thanks of those who enjoyed this trip, and thoroughly enjoyed it was! The presence of a few, whom one might have hoped to see, was missed—familiar faces which would have added even more brightness to the scene. A word of commendation must also be given to the Commanding Officer of the vessel and his assistants, whose attention and courtesy were everything that could be desired—equal to that on an ocean liner.

Just before disembarking—the united voyagers heartily sang "God Save the King," bringing, fittingly, to a close, a day to be remembered by all those participating in it.

WEST CAN'T LIVE ONLY ON WHEAT

Under Present Conditions Money Flows in Every Fall But Goes Right Out Again

Although the city of Edmonton, said Mr. R. T. Riley in a recent speech there, was already a big industrial, commercial and educational centre, and to some extent a limited financial centre, the time had come, in his opinion, when fifteen or twenty out of the best and wealthiest men in the city should get together and make up their minds that the city must become a financial centre of importance in the west. That could not be done by organizing companies with the idea of exploiting the people of the province, and using them a little more hardly than they were now being used by the financial corporations now doing business here—not by organizing companies and paying enormous dividends to the shareholders, but by demonstrating to the shareholders, that they could invest their money with absolute security.

How to Get Cheap Money.

"The only thing that the city lacks," said Riley, "is cheap money. I am going to tell you how you can get it. The cheapest money ever produced anywhere in the world came out of the soil. Money was a very timid and cautious product. It did not like to wander far away from where it was produced, at four per cent., whereas money was available in England, in Belgium, in Holland, where it was produced at four per cent., whereas when it got here it was worth from eight to ten per cent. The reason was that the world had found out that if money travelled far away from home it stood a pretty good chance of getting lost.

"If you want cheap money in Alberta you have got to take it out of the soil. How are you going to do it? By raising grain only? I do not think so. The finest advocacy of mixed farming I ever saw was written on the back of a barn on a deserted farm—"Gone; man cannot live on wheat alone." Until the time comes that you have twenty-five per cent. of all your cultivated land in this province devoted to the growing of alfalfa and other crops of that kind used in the feeding of steers and hogs, you will never know what it is to get as cheap money as you ought to have.

Good Roads For Farmers.

"Go to the government and use your strongest influence for good roads for the farmers, for good roads lead to cheap money. And let me tell you that even if the government does lend money at 4 1-2 per cent. to the farmers, you people in the towns and cities won't suffer. The cheaper the farmer can borrow his money, the better satisfied he is going to be and every dollar the farmer makes on the land he spends in the towns.

"The trouble is that money comes into the province every fall like a tidal wave and then goes right out again. What you want is money that circulates like water in a mill pond, and stays with you all the time. And if some of you are interested in real estate, I want to make this statement—you city real estate from this on is not going o rise in value until the farm lands of this province have become reinstated to the value that they possessed two or three years ago, and from which they have fallen. I make that statement after mature consideration.

"Until the time comes that the province has demonstrated that it can produce money of its own for its own use, and not till then, is it going to get cheap money from the east, and when it does that it will not only be able to get all the money it needs, but it will have more money than it needs thrust upon it."

CROY BRAE, SCOTLAND

It is an Optical Illusion or a Mystery to Scientists--Scotch Local Editor Relates His Experiences and Answers Few Canadian Enquiries

Croy Brae, Ayr, Scotland, is still a mystery to many visitors and tourists who visit the Land of Burns. Brae is the Scotch term used for a small hill. There are many other mysteries connected with this phenomenon, as after a very heavy rainstorm you can witness the water running up the incline; also when at the top of the hill the full view of the Clyde River is visible to the eye, and taking your journey to the foot you are astonished at such a wonder. There are hundreds who cycle to this spot to make certain of these revelations, believing in the old saying "Seeing is Believing."

The following is an abstract from the "Ayrshire Post," Ayr, Scotland, and Mr. W. G. Wallace answers some of the inquiries as follows:

Strange this simultaneity and spontaneity of great minds. I have two letters by the same post, asking me for a solution of the old problem of the Croy Brae. One is from a reader in Canada—a lady—who says:—"A few days ago I was telling some Canadians here about it (Croy Brae), and how, when cycling up one could free wheel all the way, but they seemed to think that I was talking through my hat." This young lady wishes me to just let them know that she has not been throwing the hatchet. The other letter is dated from Ayr, and reads as follows:—"Sir,—On Saturday last, while out cycling, an argument arose regarding the Croy Brae. One side of the party said it was magnetised, the other said it was an optical illusion. From Dunure to Ayr the argument was kept up, and it still lies unsettled. I shall be very pleased if you will inform me through the medium of your esteemed paper the correct solution of this problem.—Alejandro."

So here I am! I was under the impression that this Croy Brae business was thrashed out years ago. I am sorry to have to again disillusionise. The phenomenon is simply an optical illusion, and is caused by the conformation of the surrounding country. And yet that is disputed by some, for they say that if you shut out the surrounding country from your view and keep your eye on the road before you it seems running downhill, while, if on a cycle you have to pedal for all you know to keep yourself going. Over twenty years ago, when the Brae came first under my notice, I was cycling, and when I came to go down this hill I lifted my feet off the pedals ('twas the old bikes then) to run down it, but the bike stopped short and I had to step off. I mounted again and found that it took such stiff pedalling that I concluded something had gone wrong with my bike. I stepped off once more, oiled up, whirreled the wheels, and again got up. But it was no use. Concluding that something had gone wrong with my machine, I turned about to come home and ran my bike a bit so as to be able to mount on the perceptible incline. I was rather bewildered when the machine went off with me up hill before I could get my feet on the pedals. Then I got curious about myself and wondered if my head was all right. I felt eerie, so I continued on my way home, and then I wrote my experience to find that it was no new one, that it was the mystery of the district. The name "Croy" is so called after an enclosure for catching fish. Do you see the connection?

REV. W. C. RIDDIFORD HAS NEW CHURCH IN LONDON, ONT.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford, former pastor of the Park Street Baptist Church, witnessed yesterday the opening of the new Egerton Street Baptist Church, London, of which he is the present Pastor. The building will seat one thousand people. It is constructed in the most modern manner and cost $35,000. Rev. W. A. Cameron, the noted Toronto Baptist minister, delivered the address at the dedicatory service, held at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. Mr. Riddiford. The Church was built during the pastorate of the former Peterborough divine.

The Danger Of Launches Without Lights

The following from the Bobcaygeon Independent applies with equal force to conditions at Stony Lake and on the Otonabee River:

The boating season having opened it is an opportune moment for calling attention to the necessity of all craft carrying lights at night. Many serious accidents have been narrowly escaped, on the waters surrounding Bobcaygeon, through the absence of lights, and there certainly should be some means found of enforcing the navigation laws. Traffic on the river on dark nights, and also on the est danger, when so many boats are lakes, is accompanied with the gravmoving under gasoline power, at high speed. Launches should carry the regulation coloured lights, and no skiff or canoe should be out after dark without a white light to indicate their presence. It is really astonishing the risks that are daily taken on the lakes with launches and boats. It is only in the rarest instance that a launch will carry any life saving protection. As a rule they never carry a life belt, or even pole or oar, nothing whatever to support a life, and in the event of fire or break of the hull, the boat must sink, leaving the occupants without the slightest aid to save themselves from drowning.

Another source of danger is cribs of timber left unlighted in the rivers without warning lights. The presence of cribs along the river shore may be unknown, and quite unexpected, and in the shadow of a bank, impossible to discern. Lights should be carried at suitable distances along tows or cribs. There have been several instances reported of launches carrying many women and children, glancing along the side of a crib, and barely escaping being capsized.

At a former period when the lake traffic was carried on in a quiet way with skiffs, canoes and punts, the absence of lights was not of serious consequence. The advent of gasoline launches, and their rapid increase in number, makes it imperative that some precautions be taken for the protection of life, and the carrying of the prescribed lights, should be made by voluntary consent, an obligatory custom.

LUBRICATOR CO. BUILDING TO BE OCCUPIED

Mr. Sam Long, who recently sold his hotel to Mr. Mulhall of Cobourg, intends to open an establishment shortly in East City for the manufacture of all kinds of soft drinks. Mr. Long has secured the building formerly owned by the Lubricator Co., on Hunter Street, and is having machinery installed.

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATIONS SAY, ETC.

Liberals. On April 23, 1913, he voted against a resolution to the effect that no tavern or club license should be issued after the 30th of April, 1914. On the same day he voted against a proposal to have all bars closed at 12 o'clock, noon, on Saturdays, instead of 7 o'clock, andat 8 o'clock on other eevnings, and not to open until 6 in the morning. On the same day he voted against having Good Friday added to Christmas, as days on which the bars must be closed, although the Government has since adopted this last piece of legislation, and carried it as its own. In 1912, 1913 and 1914 Mr. Thompson voted with the Government against proposals to abolish the bar.

Supporters of the temperance cause have no reason to believe that Mr. Soden is a stronger man than Mr. Thompson. He will be subjected to the same influences to whip him into line, that proved so effective with Mr. Thompson. These influences have forced the retirement in this election of a Conservative candidate in Toronto who expressed his approval of such measures.

Mr. Soden's position has been stated. Now note that of Mr. Gillespie. Mr. Gillespie has not only accepted the platform of the temperance organizations, but in his letter to the electors of West Peterborough he has made his position clear in the following words:

"I am in favour of the abolition of the three-fifths clause; I will vote with either political party for its abolition and favour a straight majority vote on every posible occasion in the Legislature. I will vote with either political party on every possible occasion for the abolition of the open bar, club licenses, shop licenses, and all other legislation looking for the restriction and abolition of the liquor traffic."

Both temperance organizations would have been delighted had Mr. Soden made as clearcut and definite a statement on the temperance issue as that of Mr. Gillespie. He was given ample time in which to do so. He refused to accept that opportunity. He, and he alone, therefore is responsible for the fact that the temperance organizations have not been able to give him their support.

Signed on behalf of the Temperance Association.

H. B. COWAN,
President.

FISHING SEASON OPENS TO-MORROW

Do not let your enthusiasm as a disciple of Isaak Walton lead you into difficulties to-night. The fishing regulations do not permit of fishing until after 12 o'clock to-night.

Little Lake and the Otonabee River will no doubt be the scene of great activity with the rod and line early to-morrow morning. As usual, two of the most ardent early morning fishermen will be Messrs. R. G. Dobbin and Sam Baker.

PLAINLY SUPERIOR

NEW YORK CITY, June 15.—The United States polo enthusiasts today admitted that the British polo team was plainly superior in workmanship and discipline to the United States team. The odds to-day are four to one on the Britishers carrying off the trophy. The second game tomorrow may be postponed on account of the heavy rains to-day.

Mr. Burnham Justifies "Offensive Partizanship"

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In your issue of Saturday you refer to something that I think calls for a statement from me. You call attention to the presence of federal officials at provincial meetings and accuse us of ignoring the "offensive partizanship" involved. Let me say that Sir Wilfrid Laurier last years, when asked by Mr. Borden to define "offensive partizanship," laid it down:

"That the reasonable participation of the officials of one government in the affairs of another was not offensive partizanship. Let me say also that last year when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was here I stated in the press, that I hoped that all those public employees who wished to har him would attend, and that us employees of the government attending any public meeting need fear any charge of partizanship, whatever his political colour. But there is reason in all things, and when Sir Wilfrid said that "if any employee of his government wished to enter politics rather than to attend to his public duties he would give him every opportunity of doing so," his meaning was clear. This statement by Sir Wilfrid was adopted by Mr. Borden. The public service does not imply slavery, hypocrisy nor ignorance, nor a condemnation of a polite recognition of old party friends. No one would ask an employee to ignore the presence of a man of note of his own party.

But an undue and uncalled-for participation by the employee of a government in the politics of that same government is likely to be offensive and will no doubt be so regarded. This does not apply, it is well understood, to a reasonable and decent relation to the meetings of another government of which the employee is not a servant. It is perhaps just as well to emphasize these facts at this time. The doctrine has been made clear by Sir Wilfrid, and no one need fail to understand its fairness and its reasonableness.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Mr. Burnham, as usual, "gets in wrong" at the beginning. It was not the Editor of The Examiner that referred to "offensive partizanship," but a correspondent, and though publishing a letter from an elector does not commit a journal to his opinions, in this case the correspondent was right in the position he took. The point is not what Sir Wilfrid Laurier thinks, but a comparison with the action of the Borden Government. It has cut the heads of so many men—even of some dead men—for "offensive partizanship," that a list moved for two years ago proved to be so long that it is not yet completed. Mr. Burnham's phrase, "a polite recognition of old party friends" is "richness" as Mr. Squeers would say. Yet the government he supports cut off many a head for so "polite a recognition of old party friends," as being a brother-in-law or some such relation of a Grit. Mr. Burnham would be better employed persuading officials to abstain from offensive partizanship than encouraging them. But anything will serve to distract attention from the real issue in this contest—it is not offensive partizanship, nor ancient history of political doings, but the live issue of abolishing the greatest legaliz or other evil in existance. Mr. Burnham will permit officials under his jurisdiction to show "polite recognition of old party friends," but would he have so much consideration for an official who fell among thieves through the traffic Mr. Burnham is helping to perpetuate?

RECENT RAINS IN WESTERN PROVINCES PROMISE A BIG CROP

Newsy Letter From Calgary ---Optimism Inspired by Weather's Kindliness---Oil Situation is Quieter.

CAPTURE OF A BANDIT

Examiner Special:

(By E. G. McKeeley)

Thesituation is saved. For the past twenty-four hours gentle rains have fallen throughout the Prairie Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. In fact the greater portion of the West has received a much-needed baptism of moisture, and the outlook for a big harvest has vastly improved. Nowhere in the whole Dominion of Canada is crop producing weather more appreciated than in the Canadian North West. It is the panacea for hard times. Its effect as an antidote for financial and commercial depression is recognized by rich and poor alike. It occupies the centre of the stage in the public mind and in addition to filling the granaries of the world, inspires a spirit of optimism that is so vital to the development of the West. Rains in crop-producing quantities subordinates everything else. Even the oil strike fades into insignificance and well it may. One has only got to comprehend the vastness of the wealth that the last great West is capable of creating through the medium of the soil and its relation to the commercial centres that dot the prairie from Winnipeg to the Coast. It was generally understood that the Banks, up until the recent rains, had refused to advance loans to farmers and ranchmen. A farmer with a large acreage of drought-ridden crop constitutes a poor risk from a financial standpoint While his intentions may be gilt-edged, they do not prove a satisfying endorsement. hence the action of the Banks.

The Oil Situation

The oil delirium is slowly subsiding and it has already reached a level where the stock-buying public demand certificates in lieu of a receipt. The latter were acceptable in any form during the initial stages of the oil boom but, thanks to the active campaign conducted by the authorities, resulted in the suppression of would-be wild-catters, the defenceless public have been educated to the necessity of doing business with companies who are in a position to furnish certificates rather than be satisfied wtih a form of receipt. Some of the receipts did not even bear the name of the company which was supposed to have authorized their distribution. But that didn't make any difference; Calgary simply had to have a boom or admit the loss of one of her most useful activities. The opportunity presented itself in the form of an oil-strike at the Dingman well. That was all that was necessary. The public supplied the rest and, incidentally, the money with which to give the boom proper effect. Some families even went so far as to sell their household furniture,and in a few instances, personal effects were sacrificed.

Public Opinion.

The refusal of Public Utilities Commissioner Robson to permit the sale of Calgary oil stock in the Province of Manitoba, the allegations by certain western newspapers to accept advertising having to do with the Calgary oil-fields have caused no little concern in and around Calgary. The "Chicago of the West" has approved of Alderman "Tappy" Frost's scheme to confute the scoffers in the Manitoba metropolis, with the aid of several drums of the oil. This has been secured direct from the Dingman well in the presence of reliable witnesses. Several city officials were invited to see the doughty alderman fill up the tanks from the flowing well. Newspaper men made notes of the event and photographers preserved the scene as an added verification. Alderman Frost intends that the demonstration for the benefit and instruction of the people of Winnipeg shall be thorough and satisfying as the most sceptical and suspicious can want. Not the remotest opportunity will be given the Winnipeggers to assert that it was bought elsewhere or that it was taken out of the oilfield and poured down the hole. In the words of the Calgary News-Telegram: "Alderman Frost is on his way to Winnipeg surcharged with confidence that his mission will be crowned with scalps and success. He intends to sprinkle the city with the odourous fluid, and the doubters who are smaller than himself, he will make drink the liquid. He will advertise that he has not one share of stock for sale; that he does not represent any company; that his one object is to demonstrate that the Calgary oilfield is an accomplished fact, and that the material proof is available to substantiate this claim. Knowing "Tappy" as we all do, we confidently expect that the gaiety of the Winnipeggers will be considerable increased while he is 'in their midst.'"

May Go East.

Unless something happens to remind him of his aldermanic obligations, Alderman Frost will proceed to Toronto where he will stage a similar performance. It may be that some free-thinking citizen of Peterborough would dare to doubt the statements emanating from the Alberta oil fields. In which case Alderman Frost would have an opportunity to extend his visit. He might even go as far as to sprinkle a little of the oil on the streets, hereby alleviating the dust nuisance, and putting the postcard column of the Daily Examiner out of commission. With Alderman Frost caroming over the landscape, and Mayor Sinnott off to England on a two-months' holiday, the municipal council of Calgary is sadly depleted. It's well that they haven't a problem similar to that of the expropriation of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

A Bandit Captured.

The police department had a little workout last week. It was in connection with the roundup of an alleged bad man, who in conjunction with two others of his kind, shot to death the paymaster of the Canada Cement Company. Thei ncident occurred about two weeks ago at a small place ralled Exshaw, some distance out of Calgary. Two of the bandits were captured a few days after the murder, and it remained for the third member of the gang to make his way to Tuxedo Park. This is a subdivision adjacent to Calgary. In due time the bandit's hiding place came to the attention of the police department with the result that Chief of Police Cuddy, in accordance with the obligations incident to his position, undertook to apprehend the culprit. This he did with the aid of a strong force of policemen, special detectives and a section of the fire department. The latter were instructed to flood the cellar in which the hunted out of the dug-out and marched to beautifully staged, and with one exception, nothing was lacking. The one deplorable exception was a motion picture machine with which to preserve the details. When the man was ready for the services of a pulmotor,, the head hunters in command of the head of the Calgary police department, stepped into the building and brought the fiasco to a close. The man, more dead than alive, was hauled out of the dug-out and mrached to the photographer's in his bare feet, much to the liking of a large crowd of spectators. The papers slobbered all over Chief Cuddy and called him a brave officer. Such is officialdom and the fruits thereof.

Urged Them To Welcome New Pastor

Rev. C. E. Cragg, in the Mark Street Church Last Night, Says That Next Six Months Should Be Most Progressive in its History

Speaking to a good congregation in the Mark Street Church, last evening the Rev. Mr. Cragg, who has been transferred to Grace Church Napanee, exhorted the congregation to unite in supporting the new pastor, Mr. Phelps. "Mr. Phelps," said the speaker, "had nothing more to do with his appointment to the Mark Street Church than he (Mr. Cragg) had in leaving the Church. The Stationing Committee had made the change without consulting either of the Pastors and it was, therefore, through no wish of their own that own that Mr. Phelps would take charge of Mark Street, and that Mr. Cragg was leaving for Grace Church, Napanee.

Mr Cragg remembered the first two Sundays that he spent as Pastor of the Mark Street Church. The first Sunday there was not a large attendance and the next Sabahth there were still fewer present. The impressions he received from those two Sundays were so discouraging that he believed they were responsible for the difficulty he found in leading the congregation during the first six months of his pastorate. He urged the congregation to prepare a splendid and memorable welcome for the new pastor, so that he would not be handicapped in his work by unpleasant first impressions of his new charge. There was no reason why, if the congregation rallied in support of Mr Phelps, that the next six months should not be the most progressive one in the history of the Mark Street Church. Mr. Cragg referred very briefly to the progress of the Church during the time that he was Pastor, remarking that the membership had increased by eighty since his coming to the Church.

Next Sunday Mr. Cragg preaches his farewell sermon and two weeks from next Sunday the Rev. Mr. Phelps will occupy the pulpit of the Mark Street Church and preach his opening sermon. The Rev. Mr. Phelps comes from Brighton, Ont., where his pastorate of the Church was a successful one. The Rev. Mr. Cragg leaves the City two weeks from to-morrow.

BRITISH OFFICERS TO TRAIN THE CANADIAN TARS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 15. — Arrangements are being made to obtain a number of retired petty officers of the British navy to undertake the instruction of Canadian naval militiamen. It is figured that at least twelve such men will be required to train twelve hundred naval militiamen whom Hon. J. D. Hazen expects to have in the uniform of the British navy before snow flies again. Training will be commenced probably at Toronto, Kingston, Halifax, St. John, Montreal and Vancouver, within a few months. There has been company drilling at Victoria for over a year.

Insurgents Make Attack on Durazzo

Special to The Examiner:

DURAZZO, ALBANIA, June 15.—A strong force of Albanian Mussulmen insurgents opened an attack on this city at an early hour this morning, maintaining for hours a sharp rifle fire, supported by artillery. Among the first of the defenders of the Albanian capital to be killed was Col. Thomson, the Dutch officer selected by the powers to command the gendarmerie into succession to the Swedish officer who previously had held the position.

DRIFTING TO OPEN SUNDAYS

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, June 15.—At the Methodist conference here to-day several speakers voiced the sentiment that all Canada was drifting toward a wide-open Sunday, with theatres, restaurants and pleasure resorts all open like the United States.

POSTMASTER EDGAR NOT ON THE PLATFORM

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice that your correspondent states that I was on the platform the night of the Soden meeting in the Opera House.

I wish to say that your correspondent's statement is untrue, and he is most short sighted, as I went to Toronto on Tuesday afternoon, the 9th instant, to attend the Synod of the Church of England, and did not return to Peterborough until Friday, the 12th, at midnight. This is not the first or second time your paper has quoted me as being in places or doing things of which I had no knowledge. I would be obliged to you and your correspondents if in future you would print only the plain truth in regard to myself.

JAMES EDGAR,
Postmaster.

Note—The Examiner willingly publishes Mr. Edgar's letter, with the explanation that it received the information as to Mr. Edgar being on the platform, from a Conservative who was asked to give a list of the names of those on the platform at the meeting on Thursday night, and regrets that its correspondent has commented upon this misinformation.

SOME POINTS IN THE RECORD OF THE WHITNEY GOVERNMENT

Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, speaking in the Opera House, made great claims from the record of the Government, now led by Mr. Hanna. Mr. Duff's time was limited and he saw things through glasses blurred by prejudice. Therefore a brief reference to the Whitney Government record on some subjects will give a true idea of the merits of the record. Take the following subjects and the action of the Government upon them:

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Voted down in three successive years the Abolish the Bar resolution.

Refused to close the bars on all public holidays at 9 o'clock in the evening and at 1 o'clock on Saturday.

Proposed anti-treating legislation and then failed to introduce it.

Neglected and made light of the petition of 9,000 young Conservatives asking for advanced temperance legislation.

Refused enquiry into the actions of Provincial License Inspector Snider in representing himself as having been sent by his department against the Scott Act in the counties of Welland, Peel and Huron and into the charges against the Provincial Secretary of having made arrangements with the organized liquor interests in connection with Snider's visits.

Failure to enforce the liquor license law as pointed out year by year in the Reports of the Dominion Alliance.

Voted down the proposal to abolish the three-fifths requirement, and allow local option to be carried on a majority vote.

Voted down the proposal to make local option county-wide.

EDUCATION.

Lack of constructive leadership on the part of teh minister.

Over-loading the curriculum in public and high schools.

Rigid regulations discouraging initiative and individuality in teacers and scholars.

Failure of the government to meet te demand for properly qualified teachers by not enlarging local facilities for teacher training.

Cut down in 1913 the rural public school grant by 28 per cent. while continuing, for example, to spend large sums on the new Government House, which, when completed, probably will cost over $1,000,000.

Failure of government to submit to the House proposals for dealing with the financial crisis at the Provincial University which was disclosed even to the public in the year 1913.

The government's vacillating policy on the bilingual school question is such that it has lost the confidence of both parties.

Abolition of model schools.

Failure to deal adequately with question of technical education.

CROWN LANDS.

Alienated to McKenzie and Mann, or the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, two million acres of our finest land in the clay belt, with a dollar in cash return, as a land grant to the Transcontinental Railway.

The bonds of this road have been guaranteed by the Dominion Government, and last year it received from the Dominion Government a cash subsidy of $12,000 a mile.

Voted down opposition resolution that the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway before securing an extension of time should be required to provide for settlement along the line of its road in New Ontario.

Sold two of the finest timber townships in Northern Ontario to the Jackson Lumber Syndicate of Buffalo, for a dollar an acre, and certain very limited conditions of settlement, without knowing the quantity or value of the timber on the townships.

Refused investigation in the public accounts committee during the session of 1914, into important phases of this deal. Mr. Jackson himself, although summoned, did not appear, and claimed he could not come.

Sold at the nominal rate of an average of 33 1-3 cents per acre, over 1,000,000 acres of land, to the Lake Huron and Northern Ontario Railway, under the guise of a land grant—land which the railway company now claims to be worth from $8.00 to $10.00 an acre.

Agreed to pay $185,000.00 to the Pembroke Lumber Company, of which Mr. Dunlap, M.P.P. one of their supporters, was president, for 185,00 acres of land which had already been lumbered over for between sixty and seventy years.

Sold in October, 1913, five timber berths in northern Ontario to the George Gordon Company and others, by private tender, on the basis of a cash bonus, in addition to ground rental. The cash bonus is a policy which the government had denounced for years. It is claimed that the price received in this case was much below the estimated value of the timber.

Refused to disclose in the public accounts committee, the government's own reports on the quantity and value of this timber.

Defeated a resolution moved by the opposition in the House, to instruct the deputy minister to produce this information for the public accounts committee.

Repeatedly changed and reduced by order-in-council, without submitting them to the Legislature for its approval, the ming royalties payable by Cobalt mining companies.

This record will be continued.

THE CHILDREN'S ORCHESTRA.

The closing (for the season) performance of the Children's Orchestra will be given to-night at 8 o'clock at the Hall of the Conservatory of Music.

This orchestra of young folk numbers some twenty members, and their performances are really very creditable, more especially considering the youth of some of the members. It is quite evident that they have been trained with great care and patience, reflecting much kudos on their various instructors.

Go and support and encourage the young people by your presence.

Children's Orchestra In Recital To-night

To-night at the Conservatory of Music Hall, a recital will be given by the Children's Orchestra, assisted by many of the children who have been studying under the Conservatory staff.

Those who know music and have heard the Conservatory Children's Orchestra at rehearsal, say that their performance is a wonderful exhibition of musical skill and individual and ensemble musical ability and skill, and a wonderful example of the possibilities of high orchestral development in Peterborough.

OBITUARY

BABY McBRIDE.

The death occurred yesterday of the six-months'-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. McBride, Charlotte Street, after a few days' illness. The parents will have the sincerest sympathy of their many friends in their sad bereavement.

The funeral was held this afternoon at half past three o'clock to the Little Lake Cemetery.

BABY GUERIN.

On Saturday, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Guerin, 158 Lake Street, passed away, after a short illness. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, to St. Peter's cemetery. In their loss of their young son, Mr. and Mrs. Guerin will have the heartfelt sympathy of all who know them.

MRS. ELIZABETH STUBBS.

The death occurred on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock of Mrs. Elizabeth Stubbs, at the residence of her son, Mr. S. J. Stubbs, 21 Dennistoun Avenue. The late Mrs Stubbs was 82 years of age and has resided for some time in this City. A large number of her friends and the friends of her son, Mr. S. J. Stubbs, will be very sorry to learn of her death.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and the remains were forwarded to Stratford for interement. The services were in charge of the Rev. R. G. Peever of the George Street Church.

OLIVER O'HARA.

Mr. Oliver O'Hara, aged 84 years, son of the late James O'Hara, passed away at Cavan yesterday morning. The deceased was a life-long resident of the 8th Line of Cavan Township. He was born in Ireland, and came to this country when a small boy, he taking up his residence in Cavan. He leave to mourn his loss one sister, Mrs. Ann Morton, who lived with him, and one brother, James O'Hara, of Springville; two nephews, James Morton, at the homestead, and Mr. Charley Morton, of Peterborough. Two nieces are Mrs. Wesley Hutchison, of Bailieboro, and Mrs. Fred. Redpath, of Peterough.

The funeral will take place from his late residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the Fraserville Cemetery.

BOTH GOOD NARRATORS.

Lew Dockstader, the minstrel, was introduced recently to a man who owned a place in New Hampshire.

"Lots of good fishing up your way?" asked Dockstader. "I hear you own a farm up the White Mountain way?"

"Good fishing!" cried the other enthusiastically. Well, Mr. Dockstader, I went out one morning recently and brought back 17 trout for breakfast. Got 'em in a half hour's time, too. We had guests at the cottage and they thought that quite remarkable."

"Glad I met you, sir," said Dockstader, holding out his hand with a look of admiration. "I'm a professional myself."

"A professional!" exclaimed the other. "What, fisherman?"

"No," was the answer. "no—er—narrator."

No lot in life is small enough to stunt a soul.

The long-distance 'phone makes the heart throb faster.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Walter Darling, of Smith Township, Takes Poison This Afternoon and Dies Shortly After

"Good-bye. I have taken poison. Life is not worth living." On the back of an envelope, hastily written, these were the words left by Walter Darling, a resident of Smith township, who was found dying about six miles from Peterborough this afternoon shortly before two o'clock.

Darling, who was driving home from this City, attracted the attention of a party of tourists who were motoring down from the Lakes, by waving his arms and shouting at them from his buggy. The horse was grazing at the side of the road when the motor passed him about five and a half miles north of Peterborough, and seeing that he was in a helpless condition, and their attention attracted by his actions, the party stopped immediately after they had passed his outfit and went back to render any aid they could. Soon after they reached him, however, he became unconscious and didn't regain his senses before he died, a few minutes later. Dr. Brown, of this city, was hastily called from the residence of a farmer near by, but before he reached the scene of the tragedy, Darling had passed away. It was on the back of an envelope bearing the name of a local druggist, and labelled "Strychnine" that the note, quoted above, had been written, and which was found on his person by the tourists.

Darling was 25 years of age and leaves a widow and one small child. His father was notified of the tragedy and with Mr. Hendren of Lakefield, took charge of the remains. As the case is, in the opinion of the authorities, clearly one of suicide, there will be no inquest. Seen in connection with the matter the druggist stated to the Examiner this afternoon that the dead man had purchased the poison from him. Deceased is the son of Mr. Aexander Darling and resided about a mile this side of Lakefield.

NOTES AND GLEANINGS

Coca, the "wonder plant of the Andes," known also as the "divine plant," should not be confounded with the seeds of the palm, Theobroma cacao, which are cocoa or chocolate beans. The latest Bulletin of the Pan-American Union describes the plantations on which the leaves of this shrub, resembling the blackthorn bush of the United States, are grown to feed the cocaine factories of Peru and Bolivia. Whether the chewing of the leaves by the natives is harmful seems still debatable, for the article quotes Dr. W. Golden Mortimer, who spent four years investigating coca and its influence, as follows:

As to the value of coca, there cannot be the slightest daubt. . . . . The evils from cocaine have arisen from its pernicious use, in unguarded doses, where used hypodermically or locally for anesthia, when an excessive dose may have often been administered, without estimating the amount of alkaloid that would be absorbed, and which might result in systemic symptoms.

The curiously "upstairs" nature of Mexico is descanted upon by Prof. Mark Jefferson in the Bulletin of the American Geographical Society. Most of the people live on a plateau more than 5,000 feet above sea level. The revolution has but just gotten up to the plateau, and while over a third of Mexican territory is held by the rebels, not much over a tenth of the 15,000,000 people live in it. Villa and Carranza hav still much climbing to do.

Discussing the whitening of the hair, the Journal of the American Medical Association remarks incidentally that why the beard grows anew after cutting or shaving is not known, nor why it grows more rapidly in Summer than in Winter. The real reason for the silvery grey appearance of the hair in aging persons is not because the phagocytes discovered by Dr. Machnikoff have eaten the pigment, but because a new hair coat has formed, like the seasonal coat of animals which assume different colours. It is not true that one's hair can grow white in a single night despite the myths of Marie Antoinette and the prisoner of Chillon there is not a single authenticated case of this in history.

The "Gospel Trumpet" On The Licensed Saloon

An Interesting Essay on Drink Evil--Many Court and Prison Authorities Are Quoted to Show the Terrible Effects of the Traffic.

A subscriber in Peterborough to the Gospel Trumpet, a publication that represents the religious views of a number of residents of this City, has handed the following in for publication, taken from the above journal:

The Licensed Saloon.

A monster petition against the licensing of saloons is soon to be presented to the License Court of Allegheny County. The right of petition is accorded to every American citizen. The petitioners in this matter claim that no court has a moral right to license a saloon. The greatest statesman of the nineteenth century said that it was the duty of a government "to make it easier for the citizen to do right and harder to do wrong." If that is true, no state has a right to permit the existence of the saloon within her bounds.

Let us get clearly before us the meaning of "license."

To ease their conscience, some have represented it as a fine or penalty imposed on the liquor dealer for engaging in a business that is hurtful to the State. There is no resemblance between a fine paid as a punishment after the commission of the crime and a tax or license paid beforehand to give legal sanction to the wrong to be done. A fine is a punishment and expires with its payment. A license is a contract between the person paying it and the State in which the latter gives permission to do the evil and promises legal protection in the doing of it. A fine is the punishment for doing something illegal; a license is an official act making the thing in question legal.

The license system is antagonistic to the purpose of civil government.

Government is a divine institution for the cultivation of intelligence, morality and reverence for law. The saloon is the deadliest enemy of all these. When the State licenses the saloon it is giving legal sanction to the very thing it was organized to prevent. The purpose of the State is to suppress evil while the saloon is the supreme fountain of evil. The State exists to maintain peace and order, the saloon is the enemy of both. The virtue of the people is the stability of the State, the saloon destroys this virtue. It is the function of the State to make and enforce laws, the saloon is the supreme cause of lawlessness. The existence of the saloon places in jeopardy every purpose of the State. Can the State be true to herself and legalize that which more than all other institutions combined blocks her purpose?

The friends of the saloon claim that the suppression of the saloon is an infringment of their rights. Not so. The State has a right to banish anything that is a menace to the best interests of the people. All sanitary regulations are based upon this principle. The saloon is a menace to our civilization and a foe to every better interest of our people. It fosters dishonesty, impurity, lawlessness, murder, divorce, corrupts politics, increases the taxes of the people, destroys health and wealth more than all other forces combined.

Statistics are always uninteresting but it may be well, sometimes, to force ourselves to study them in the interest of truth and fairness. Both friends and foes of the saloon are liable to view it through coloured glasses. For this reason I have collected the following statements from official and impartial sources.

The Testimony of Courts.

Chief Justice Hale, one of the most learned England ever had, said: "The places I have long held in this kingdom have given me opportunity to observe the original cause of most of the crimes committed in the past twenty years, and I find that four-fifths of the murders, robberies, riots adultery have been caused by strong drink."

Chief Baron Kelly, for many years on the Queen's Bench, said. "Two-thirds of all the crimes that come before the Courts of England are occasioned by drink."

Chief Justice Noah Davis, for thirty years on the Supreme Bench of New York said: "Of all causes of crime intemperance stands the unapproached and unapproachable chief. It is the cause of four-fifths of all crime."

Judge Coleridge said: "There is not a crime comes before me that is not directly or indirectly caused bystrong drnik."

Judge Whiteman said: "I find in every calendar that comes before me one unfailing source of most of the crimes that are committed, strong drink."

Judge Williams said: "Experience has proven that almost all srimes into which courts have to inquire may be traced directly or indirectly to strong drink."

Judge Anderson said: "If all the people could be persuaded from use of intoxicating drink the office of judge would be a sinecure.".

Judge Decker of Denver said: "Ninety-five per cent of all crimes coming before me originated in drink.

The presiding judge of one of the Chicago courts said some years ago: "Annual reports, police reports do not tell half the truth. The saloons of Chicago are responsible for the police force, the justice courts, the Bridewell, the criminal courts, the county jails, a great portion of the penitentiary crimes, the coroner's office, the morgue, the poorhouse, the reform schools and the insane asylum. Go where you will and you will find that whiskey is the root of the evil. The gambling house and the bad house are its direct outgrowth. Ninety-five per cent. of the children in all reformatories have drunken parents. The ruin of almost every fallen woman can be traced to drink on the part of her parents, herself or her deceiver. Full ninety per cent. of all defalcations, divorces and insanity come from drink. There are in Chicago more than ten thousand homeless children through drink. Thrown upon their own resources the boys become thieves and the girls resort to lives of shame. A large part of the cases coming before the criminal court are from this source. Many years experience on the criminal bench fit me to know whereof I speak when I say that nine-tenths of all law-breaking in America is hatched in the saloon."

The Testimony of Prisons.

Chief Justice Noah Davis said that in searching for the cause of crime, prisons were the most reliable source. Let them testify.

An English Prison Inspector said a few years ago: "I am within the truth when I say that four-fifths of all of fences are committed through strong drink."

Another English prison inspector said: "Nine-tenths of all the crimes required to be dealt with by law arise from the drink traffic."

The Comissioner of the House of Commons of Canada some years ago reported that 21,936 of the 28,280 persons condemned to the jails of the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario during the three preceding years were committed for drunkenness or crimes committed under the influence of drink.

The State Board of Charities and the Inspector of Prisons of Massachusetts, a few years ago, joined in the statement that four-fifths of all vice must be traced to the saloon.

The State Board of Police Justice of New York said in their anual report some years ago: "We are fully satisfied that intoxication is the one great cause that renders our police courts necessary."

The lamented Dr. Harris, Corresponding Secretary of the Prison Association of New York said that ninety-three per cent. of the inmates of the New York workhouse were sent there for liquor crimes.

Two years after the prohibition law went into effect in Iowa many years ago, the Warden of the State penitentiary reported to the Legislature that they were $800,000 behind the work contracted for because the number sent to that institution had so rapidly decreased that they could not carry out their contracts.

A few years ago the publishers of the Homiletic Review of New York sent five questions to the prison officials of the United States. Forty-five answered. These are the questions and a few of the answers:

(1) "How far can you endorse the assertion of Chief Justice Noah Davis, that of all causes of crime, intemperance stands out the unapproached and unapproachable chief?" Thirty-four endorsed it fully, and nine practically.

(2) "What proportion of prisoners in your institution were drinking men?" Here are a few of the answers. "All." "Nine-tenths." "Seven-eighths." "Eighty-five per cent." "Three-fourths."

(3) What per cent. were brought there directly or indirectly through drink?" Kentucky answered: "Ninety-nine hundredths." Arizona, California, Nebraska, and New York all said, ninety per cent." The others were similar.

(4) "Are not a very large majority of crimes traceable to the saloon?" Forty-three gave an emphatic affirmative, and two a modified one.

(5) "What would be the effect upon the penal institutions of the country should every saloon be closed forever?" Arizona, Idaho, Wyoming, and South Carlina answered that it would result in a criminal decrease of seventy-five per cent.. Arkansas said: "Prisons would gradually pass into innocuous disuetude"; Colorado said: Many jails and prisons would be empty two-thirds of the time." Connecticut said: "Prisons would soon be well nigh depopulated." Kentucky answered: "In ten years nine-tenths of the criminals would not be here." Massachusetts: 'Nine-tenths of the prisons would be shut for want of inmates." Texas and both the Illinois penitentiaries said the inmates would be diminished more than one-half. Maine: "Jails greatly thinned, pauperism would disappear, reform schools would be vacated and poorhouses be unknown." New York: (a) Sing Sing, "In ten years institutions for imprisonment for misdemeanours would be practically emptied and the prison population would decrease from sixty-five to seventy-five per cent." (b) Auburn: "But little use for prisons if the saloon were closed." Pennsylvania (a) Western Penitentiary. "Inmates greatly diminished." (b) Eastern Penitentiary: "Not much use for either jail or penitentiaries." Montana, "One penitentiary would be sufficient for the entire United State." Nebraska: "Few penitentiaries would be needed." New Hampshire and New Jersey said that "we could close nearly all prisons." Missouri said that ninety per cent. of her prisoners came through drink. The replies from workhouses, reform schoolsand poorhouses were practically the same as above.

The Testimony of Business.

There are things more important than business. The health, morals, and intelligence of a city are greater than its stocks and bonds. The boys and girls of a city are an asset worth more than all commercial enterprises and any business that imperils them should be driven into oblivion. Manhood values are more than money values. Henry George said: "I am for men," but those who favour the saloon place dollars above men. The only thing that bulks large with them is the dollars. Of course business is not to be overlooked. It is essential that its interests be guarded, but it is folly to so fill our eyes with the dust of commercialism that we are blind to all the higher elements of civilization.

But the saloon does not help but injures business. Reason teaches this. Health, intelligence and morality are the wealth producing elements of society. Nurture them and business is advanced, weaken them and it is injured. It is not good business to nurture and protect an institution that destroys the elements that produce wealth and the law without which business can have no safety. It is not good business to nurture a business that destroys the homes where the future business men are being fitted for their work.

But our opponents ask for cold facts. These can be supplied without limit. Wherever the saloon has been banished and the law enforced, the volume of business has increased greatly and taxes have decreased because crime has been lessened. A very few facts from an overflowing treasury must suffice. A spoonful from the ocean will disclose the material of which the swelling tides are composed, Governor Dingley said that when the prohibition law was enacted in Maine there was more poverty and drunkenness in that State than in any other in the country but that when he made the statement there was no equal number of persons in the Anglo-Saxon world whose bank deposits were so large and among whom so small an amount of strong drink was consumed.

When the prohibition law went into effect in Kansas it was one of the poorest of our States and now has the greatest wealth distributed among the people of any State. For many years no effort was made to enforce the prohibition law in Kansas City, Kansas. It was regarded as impossible, and the business men were almost a unit in opposing the attempt because they thought it would injure business. Recently a district attorney was elected who closed the saloons in spite of the business men. In two years there was scarcely a business man who was willing for the saloon to come back. The men who fought the enforcement of the law most bitterly became its most enthusiastic supporters because of its beneficial effect on business. In two years business had grown fifty per cent., bank deposits seventyfive per cent., and building two hundred per cent. Such figures could be duplicated in numberless cases.

New Castle, Pa, is another example at hand.

The Abolition of the Saloon is a Political Necessity

It unfits men for the duties of citizenship. It corrupts the voter, prepares him to be the tool of corrupt demagogues, corrupts statesmen, legislatures and courts, tramples under foot the law, blocks every effort for better government, is the most tyrannical and vicious boss the political world has ever known, seeks to control the business policy and editorial utterances of the press. By the common consent of humanity it is recognized as the greatest enemy of the human race. Therefore, the State should suppress it and not foster it.

Why license that which produces disease, poverty, crime and makes its victims a burden to the State?

We are told that if the saloon is closed, liquor will be sold illegally, that prohibition can not be enforced.

WAS TROUBLED WITH
Weak and Dizzy Spells.
Heart Would Beat Something Awful.

Those feelings of weakness, those dizzy spells which come over people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They indicate an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered state of the nerves. One dizzy spell may pass off, but eventually they will come frequently, and at the same time more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills before their case becomes hopeless, for they have no equal for restoring the heart to its usual strength, and making the nerves firm and steady.

Mrs. Lea. Kinney, Moose Mountain, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with weak and dizzy spells, and my heart would beat something awful. I got so I had those spells every day. I got so I would try one medicine, and then another, but nothing did me any good until I got Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I can safely say they did me more good than anything I ever took, for I feel like a very different woman. My friends often ask me what I have been taking, and I always say 'Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.' I tell all my friends who say their heart troubles them, to take your pills."

APPEAL IS ISSUED

Sir James Whitney Gives Out Manifesto to Electors

SATISFIED WITH RESULTS

TORONTO, June 16.—The Provincial Government's pre-election manifesto was issued by Sir James Whitney yesterday. It contains a review of the work of the Whitney Administration and an appeal to the electors to pronounce upon the policy of the Government.

An election at the end of three years has been called in accordance with the custom of consulting the electorate when measures of an important nature are proposed or have been enacted, says Sir James.

"With reference to this point, I draw your attention to the very important act passed at the last session, known as the act for compensation for injuries to workmen; also to the report of the public roads and highways commission; and to the legislation providing for the establishment of radial railways by municipalities; all these foreshadowing action of tremendous importance to the people of the province. In our history there is no instance of legislation promising such great and beneficial results. As I have said, we desire to gather your opinions with reference to these great subjects, as well as the other matters to which we have given our attention."

Referring to the past ten years of tenure of office, the Premier says:

"During our term of office we have abolished such devices as the numbered ballot and have restored clean and honest methods in the conduct of elections.

"We have regarded agriculture as our chief industry and have largely increased the expenditure for agricultural purposes brought instruction in the latest methods and discoveries directly to the people by means of district representatives, and have cooperated with the Federal authorities in extending agricultural improvements.

"We have established the provincial university on a prosperous footing, have given generous aid to the primary and secondary schools, and have taken advanced steps in educational progress by setting up systems of training in technical, industrial and agricultural instruction.

"We have challenged attention at home and abroad by producing at the lowest prices the best text-books ever published on this continent, and in so doing have saved the people considerably over a million dollars in the cost of the books.

"We have more than doubled the public revenues, maintained unimpaired the provincial credit, and spent the money in useful public improvements.

"The extension of the great system of hydro-electric power, which has been administered by Mr. Beck and his colleagues on the commission with unexampled zeal and fidelity in the public service, is transforming, in a wonderful manner, industrial and social conditions in the province, and we ask your further authority for proceeding with this development."

Passing reference is made to workmen's compensation, the eight-hour law for miners, the act to aid urban housing, and the extension and reconstruction of the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, and then Sir James turns to the liquor problem.

"The license laws have been faithfully enforced in honest fulfilment of pledges, and in accordance with the moral and temperance sentiment of the province, by many wholesome amendments, by the curtailment of the hours during which liquor is sold, and by provisions to aid in enforcing the Canada Temperance Act where that law is adopted," he says. "Under existing laws, the people have the right to close shops and bars alike in any locality. This policy has resulted in nine years in the abolition of over 1,200 liquor licenses, or nearly one-half of the whole number in the province. We believe that the people should be trusted to decide this matter for themselves, and that the dragging of the temperance question into the arena of party politics is not in the best interests of the cause. We believe, moreover, that a policy that keeps shops open while closing the bars will have a tendency to encourage and increase the sale of liquor in large quantities and the consumption of it in the home. That policy we leave to our opponents. We shall continue our efforts to minimize as far as possible the evils resulting from the liquor traffic and the drink habit."

The development and extension of New Ontario is touched upon as well as the appropriation of $5,000,000 for colonization roads, and the manifesto goes on to discuss the plans laid for the building of good roads in Older Ontario, and the recent report of the commission.

"We began the task you allotted to us, realising that the good name of Ontario had been compromised by corrupt election methods; that its best interests were languishing and its revenues stationary," the manifesto continues. "We have earnestly sought by honest administration and enlightened legislation to place the province in the position she should rightfully occupy in the Dominion of Canada, and reviewing the results which have been accomplished under a gracious Providence, and by the help of our fellow-citizens, we ask you to renew your confidence in order that the work may be carried on."

Home Wrinkle Recipe
Astonishing Results

Such startling, sensational results come from a very simple, harmless home-made wrinkle-remover, there's no excuse now for anyone wearing those hateful marks of age, illness or worry. No need fooling with worthless pastes, creams, nor "skin foods" which don't feed the skin. No need rubbing, massaging, steaming—senseless methods which expand and loosen skin and underlying tissue, aggravating a wrinkled, flabby condition. Better sense, surer, is the scientific sazolite formula. Thousands have successfully tried it—thousands freed of wrinkles, enlarged pores, saggy cheeks, double chin—thousands younger looking, happier!

All you need do is to dissolve one ounce of powdered sazolite in one half pint witch hazel, and bathe your face in this. The effect is almost magical. Even deepest crow's feet completely, quickly, vanish. Skin becomes firm, smooth, fresh looking—bears no trace of treatment except enhanced beauty. Get these inexpensive ingredients at your druggist's, try this marvellous sazolite lotion to-day.

BATTERY IS NO MORE.

London Artillerymen Recent Treatment of Major Leonard.

LONDON, Ont., June 16. — The Sixth Field Battery of this city is practically no more, as the result of Major Wood Leonard, commanding officer, being relieved of his commission following the discovery of liquor in the tents of the battery at Petawawa. Practically all of the 100 men in the battery demanded their discharge on being paid off here yesterday, following their return to the city Sunday. The men express great indignation at the treatment of Major Leonard, who they claim was wholly unaware of the presence of the beer in the camp. All the officers of the battery, which is a volunteer one, have also tendered their resignations, following the episode, but will take no further action until a consultation is held.

The rank and file of the battery, which has been one of the best in Canada, claim that the London squad was by no means alone in having liquor in the camp. In connection with the affair it is rumored that Major Leonard, who is held in the highest esteem both in and out of the battery, intends to enter a civil action for damages against Lieut.-Col. Morrison, on whose authority the search of the battery's tents was conducted, claiming that the search was made without the knowledge or consent of Major Leonard and in his absence.

The order book of the battery shows that before going to camp explicit instructions were issued by Major Leonard that no liquor would be tolerated in the camp for a minute, and the men of the battery, to a man, maintain that their commanding officer knew absolutely nothing of its presence there.

HE ENJOYS HIS MEALS NOW

For He Keeps a "Little Digester" Handy

Mr. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us on May 19th last:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO., 809 Church St., Toronto

Dear Sirs,—

I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters". All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief, until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters". Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) R. A. GLASSCO.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

Power saw his opportunity, and seized it eagerly. He asked to be put ashore for a couple of days in order that he might study the natives at close quarters. The friendly skipper was unwilling, arguing that a tribe of monkeys would better repay investigation, but ultimately yielded to pressure. There was really no great risk, he knew, because Chilian gunboats had taught these coast Indians to leave white men alone; so Power was landed, his total equipment being a small medicine chest, a hut, a folding bed, some few stores, and a shotgun, with a hundred cartridges, all told. He took more food than such a brief stay demanded; but the necessity of placating the head men of the village supplied a plausible excuse. A couple of silver dollars proved an irresistible bribe to a Spanish-speaking Indian who promised to guide him into the interior, and a letter to the amazed skipper of the Carmen saved the villagers from reprisals.

"I am sorry I was compelled to mislead you (he wrote); but I mean to explore the Andes at this point, and I prefer to set out on a crazy project without undergoing the protests and discussion I should certainly have met with from the kind friend you have proved yourself. If all is well with you seven years from this date, write to me, care of the National Bank, New York. I will surely answer."

"Seven years," shouted Malaspina, shaking a huge fist at the silent hills. "Seven devils! He is mad, mad! There will be an inquiry by the American consul, and I shall be accused of killing him. Holy Virgin! What a fool I was to let him go alone!"

He was minded to flog an Indian or two, and thus extract information; but calmer counsels prevailed. After all, he had a letter proving that Power had left the ship voluntarily. At first he resolved to report the astounding incident on returning to Valparaiso, and discussed the matter volubly with Jose, second in command. Jose said, "No. Let sleeping dogs lie. Those foreign consuls are plaguey fellows. They get many a poor man hanged just to please their governments."

Malaspina had been well paid, of course; so he decided to hold his tongue, keeping the letter in case—Thus was the trail lost. Power was buried alive.

The guide led him twenty miles up the valley of the Aisen, and handed him over to the members of another tribe, describing him as a harmless moon-gazer. In a hovel lay an elderly Indian, shivering with fever. Power dosed the quaking wretch with calomel and quinine, and performed a miracle. Thenceforth his life was safe; as long as the few ounces of quinine and calomel lasted, at any rate. He had landed in the Chili region at the beginning of spring, and his nomad hosts moved nearer the Andes when the weather improved, taking him with them. Their barbarous tongue included a number of Spanish words, and by slow degrees he learned their comparatively small but curiously inflected vocabulary. Once he could make himself understood, the foundations of his mission were laid securely. By sheer initiative, having no training in such arts beyond the knowledge acquired by most intelligent men, he taught them how to spin and weave the long hair of the Chilian goat. He established some principles of communal law. He showed them how to use nitrate as a fertilizer. He experimented with medicinal herbs when his own small store of drugs had given out. He got them to build better huts, and adopt some elementary principles of sanitation. Tillage and crops broke down the migratory habit. Land was cleared, and drained or irrigated as needed. For the first time in its history, the tribe lived in permanent dwellings.

In a word, Power established a state.

Within four years he had elevated these apemen and women to a standard so far above that of their neighbours that his fame spread into unknown fastnesses of the Cordillera. Among his adopted people he would have been worshipped as a god if he had not sternly repressed any such tendencies. But he could not stop the growth of his reputation as a magician, and a well-planned raid by another tribe brought about the slaughter of a section of the community and his own capture.

He was reduced now to the direst misery. His captors, some degrees cruder and more bestial than the men he was governing, took him by forced marches across a spur of the Andes, giving him food of such revolting nature that he became suddenly ill. At last they were compelled to cary him, and, using such limited reasoning faculties as they possessed, allowed him to save his life by cooking and eating portions of animals freshly killed. Their object in making him a prisoner, he gathered, was to divert his magic to their own district so that his incantations might increase their herds. When he failed to accomplish his laudable purpose offhand, they became violent, and threatened to burn him alive. On the homeopathic principle an abnormally dry and scorching spring came to his rescue. Some species of noxious insect, whose bite was fatal to horses and cattle, multiplied exceedingly, and the tribe lost half their stock. A wily candidate for the chiefship spread the notion that the white god had caused this misfortune, and that the person who really ought to be burnt alive was the chief who counselled the raid. This was duly done, and heavy rain fell that night, effectually disposing of the insect pests.

The new chief, who would have been an acquisition to certain political circles in more temperate climes, saw that, although he had scored heavily, the dangerous wonder-worker might be associated with evils yet to come; so, on his suggestion, Power was taken through the mountains by a secret pass, and left on the eastern slopes of the range to fare as best he might.

The Indians were afraid to gratify their instincts by murdering him outright; but, seeing that he was absolutely unarmed, and without a scrap of food in his possession, there was no misunderstanding the malevolent grin with which their leader pointed out the path he must follow. These very aborigines, despite their animal lore concerning edible roots, and their readiness to dispute with vultures for a carrion meal, knew that no man could traverse those leagues of foothills without arms and a commissariat of some kind. No semblance of a track existed. Power and his guards stood on a scree of loose stones and shale not far below the snow line, and well above the first precipitous valley in which even the hardiest pines reached a stunted growth. The steep hillside was covered with the strange snow shapes known to Spanish South America as penitentes, weird wraiths like sheeted ghosts, and more than one broad track tore through these awesome sentinels showed where avalanches of rocks and ice had thundered down from the heights that very day.

Power looked out over the appalling vista of barren hills and tree-choked ravines which lay in front. In the direction shown by the Indian he saw a slight depression in an otherwise unbroken ring of unscalable mountains, and it was reasonable to assume that the milk-white glacier stream flowing through a canyon a thousand feet beneath must find its way to the sea through that gap. It was so long since he had glanced at a map of South America that he had only the vaguest notion of his whereabouts. As a rough guess, beyond those tremendous highlands lay the plains of Lower Argentina—the black, wind-swept, semi-desert pampas. At the lowest calculation, he was three hundred and fifty miles from the Atlantic, and fifty of those miles offered such difficulties to man's endeavour that well-equipped expeditions had turned back time and again from attempts to find new passes through the Andes in that region.

GALLEY SEVEN—TUESDAY . .

To try and reach the eastern coast meant almost certain death; but the scowling faces of the Indians showed that the effort must be made, unless he was prepared to fall under their weapons then and there. The uncouth tongue he had acquired on the Trans-Andean slope was not of much avail with his present custodians; but, when he asked the leader of the party for a spear, he was understood.

By nothing less, in Power's view, than the direct intervention of Providence, the man was minded to treat the matter as a joke, and handed over his own spear, a nine-foot shaft of tough and limber hickory, tipped with a flat blade of iron about eight inches in length and two in width at the widest part. A stout shank was gripped by the split wood, and strongly bound in its socket with a thong of hide. Singularly enough, these savages had never searched their prisoner's pockets. Probably, they were afraid to touch him, lest he laid some evil spell upon them; so he was able now to produce a silver dollar, which he gave with a smile, indicating, of the same time, his willingness to purchase a couple of strips of the dried meat carried by some members of the escort.

This request was refused peremptorily, and a distinctly threatening gesture warned Power that the parley was at an end. He turned resolutely toward the rising sun, and began his lonely and affrighting Odyssey. He admitted afterward that he knew what fear meant during the first few strides across the broken ground, because he was suspicious lest the Indians might have planned to spear him from behind. Indeed, some such barbaric pleasantry may have occurred to them. A fierce clamour of talk broke out suddenly; but a swirl of snow swept down from a neighbouring glacier, and then these hardy savages had no desire to be caught on that dangerous scree in a snowstorm. So the hubbub died away as quickly as it had arisen.

Fortunately, the snow did not fall so thickly as to be actually blinding. The hapless fugitive could discern his bearings, and he moved as speedily as possible to a point he had already fixed on as being out of the track of avalanches. He reached this landmark, a hump of rock, and perforce remained in its shelter till the weather cleared. During this vigil he heard the dull roar and rumble of falling debris, and, when the snowshower ceased, he saw that two fresh lanes had been ploughed through the serried ranks of the penitentes. Of the Indians there was neither sight nor sound.

It was then about noon on a spring day. He had not troubled to keep any reckoning of the calendar; but he knew that the month was late October or early November. So there still remained six or seven hours of practicable daylight, and he resolved to push on boldly, and reach a less perilous altitude before night fell.

He had two vital problems to solve. The first was the food difficulty; the second, to find a road where road there was none. The awful solitudes of the higher Andes and the dank forests which cumber the lateral valleys are singularly devoid of animal and bird life. It is a land of decay and death. The very hills disintegrate so rapidly that rivers which flow into the Pacific in one century may empty themselves into the Atlantic in the next. The constant falling away of precipices, and the luxuriant growth of trees and brushwood amid a tangle of rotting timber, render continuous advance by way of the ravines absolutely impossible. Hence his only chance of escape lay in keeping to the highlands, trusting to luck and the lie of the land when an occasional crossing of a canyon became necessary in order to avoid doubling on his tracks and being driven back to the white wilderness of the inner chain.

Happily, he was better equipped than most men for an undertaking which was almost comparable with the plight of an explorer lost in the Arctic. Though enfeebled by his recent illness, and already in need of a meal, four years of exposure to hardships which would have killed a weakling, and daily living in the open in the worst of weather, had hardened his frame and toughened his constitution to that degree of fortitude with which Greek historians loved to invest Mithridates Eupator. Moreover, he was suitably clothed in skins, and his feet were encased in moccasins. Above all, his was an equable heart. Death had hovered near many a time and oft during those wild wander years. He had heard the very fluttering of its sable pinions when he turned his back on the pitiless Indians; but he was firmly resolved not to lose faith while he could stand square on his feet. Time enough to lie down and die when movement was no longer possible. Meanwhile, he would struggle on.

Progress, of course, was slow. Every yard of the way was difficult, every second yard hazardous. As an alpenstock, the spear was invaluable. But for its aid he would have slipped and fallen a dozen times on that treacherous mountainside. After a couple of miles of fairly straight going, he was faced by the need of crossing to another range. Choosing a line which seemed practicable, he climbed down a broken rock face, plunged into the medley of fallen logs which cumbered the nearer slope of the intervening canyon, and ferried a torrent by the precarious bridge of a rotting pine, the only one, among hundreds which had fallen, long enough to reach the opposite bank, and so slender and brittle at its apex that it crumbled beneath him just as he sprang to safety on a rock slippery with spray.

MRS. EDDY A LEADER IN MOVEMENT FOR TEMPERANCE

Author of Christian Science Active in Reform Work--Interesting Details

Research of the writings by Mary Baker Eddy reveal the following account of the experience from which Mrs. Eddy has dated her great work as Leader of the Christian Science movement.

The people of Lynn and Swampscott who best recall Mrs. Mary Patterson are those who were then working stoutly in the cause of temperance. Into this work Mrs. Patterson entered with characteristic energy and devotion. It is recalled that she could always be depended on to speak at the meetings, when few were ready to fill the allotted time. Her earnest support of this cause is still remembered appreciatively. She spoke forcefully; she roused and impressed. Her manner was her own, and her way of phrasing what she said. Her ability and her intense conviction were evident, as was also her superiority.

One of the published poems by Mrs. Patterson was written for the dedication of the new temperance hall in Lynn. She speaks of

"A temple, whose high dome
Rose from a water-cup." (Poems, p. 89.)

How little could she or any of them then have foretold that a temple with a lofty dome would one day be reared in Boston, a testimonial to the work of this woman, who later wrote: "Millions of unprejudiced minds—simple seekers for Truth, weary wanderers, athirst in the desert—are waiting and watching for rest and drink. Give them a cup of cold water in Christ's name." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 570.)

The orderly unfolding of experience brought this inspiring leader of temperance meetings to a post of world-wide leadership. It is quite in order, then, that the incident which led to her discovery of Christian Science came when she was intent on this chosen duty, "faithful over a few things." She was returning from a temperance meeting on a wintry night when she slipped on the street and fell. She was carried to a house near by and, next day, to her home to Swampscott in what was supposed a dying condition. George Newhall, who now resides on Paradise road in Swampscott, remembers the occasion. He was then a farmer lad and had driven into Swampscott with his milk cans. Mrs. D. H. Millet, a well-known resident, told him when he reached her house that cold February morning in 1866, that Mrs. Mary Patterson was very ill, perhaps dying, and that he must drive down to tell the Rev. Jonas B. Clark, so that he might go to see her.

Mrs. Millet was a friend of Mrs. Patterson and active in church and temperance work. The Rev. Mr. Clark is still honoured in Swampscott for his ministry in the Congregational church, which Mrs. Patterson attended. George Newhall drove down to the northern part of Swampscott, now Beach Bluff, to notify Mr. Clark. He recalls the circumstances of the drive, the scene of the memorable event, which Mrs. Eddy describes in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 24), as follows: "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." This knowledge came to be in an hour of great need; and I give it to you as death-bed testimony to the day-star that dawned on that night of material sense. This knowledge is practical, for it wrought my immediate recovery from an injury caused by an accident, and pronounced fatal by the physicians. On the third day thereafter I called for my Bible and opened it at Matthew ix. 2. As I read, the healing Truth dawned upon my sense; and the result was that I rose, dressed myself, and ever after was in better health than I had before enjoyed. That short experience included a glimpse of the great fact that I have since tried to make plain to others, namely Life in and of Spirit; this Life being the sole reality of existence." —Boston Monitor.

How Hammer of Death Struck James.

The old parish church of Plumstead is probably at least 1,000 years old. The picturesque churchyard, a cherished haunt of the poet Bloomfield during his visits to Shooters Hill, contains a delightfully choice "derangement of epitaphs." One of these, on "Master James Darling, aged 10," teaches a lesson of moderation during the cherry season to the youth of other places besides Plumstead. Speaking from his tombstone, Master Darling exclaims:

The hammer of death was give to me
For eating the cherries off the tree.

STREETS CAVE IN

Pedestrians and Taxicab Are Swallowed Up in Paris

STORM BURSTS THE SEWERS

PARIS, June 16.—Several streets gave way last evening in the vicinity of the Boulevard Haussmann and the Rue Auber and the Place Saint Augustin after a severe rainstorm. A taxicab completely disappeared. It is feared that a number of pedestrians were engulfed.

Another serious cave-in occurred at the Place St. Phillippe due Roule. When the storm was at its height 500 square feet of the roadway heaved up and sank, carrying with it a number of persons. The whole district became a veritable river. Gas mains, telephone wires, and the electrical supply were broken off.

The quarter was immediately isolated and the prefect of the Seine with large detachments of police was hastily summoned, but for a long time nothing could be done owing to the darkness. Firemen arrived with powerful gas lamps, and with the assistance of gangs of laborers began exploring the wrecked street.

President Poincare sent a member of his military household to the scene, and troops were ordered to aid the police and firemen.

About the same time a large section of the roadway in the Place St. Augustin suddenly collapsed. A passing taxicab was engulfed. Eye-witness saw a woman's hand waving from the vehicle, and the head of the chauffeur as the taxicab disappeared. Almost immediately a great block of stone fell upon it. A large wagonette just missed the same fate, the hind wheels sinking axle-deep in the soil, but the occupants made their escape.

Almost at the beginning of the storm, the roadway at the junction of the Rue Tronchet, the Rue Auber and the Boulevard Haussmann, one of the busiest sections of Paris, disappeared, leaving an opening thirty feet long and fifteen feet wide into which the water from a broken main poured in a torrent. A pedestrian fell in, but was quickly dragged to a place of safety.

A sewer burst alongside the subway in the Rue de Rivoli, putting it out of commission. Another burst in the Rue Boissy d'Anglas, carrying away many feet of the pavement and flooding the new subway line under the Place de la Concord.

The thunderstorm was one of remarkable violence and raged over Paris for three hours. It caused enormous damage to property.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. A. T. B.: You are not shampooing often enough and may not use the best shampoo. Try my favourite, which is canthrox—just dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and rub briskly as you pour it on the hair and scalp. This makes an abundance of rich, cleansing lather that is very soothing to tender, itchy scalps. Rinsing leaves the scalp immaculately clean, and each strand of hair will be soft, shimmery and full of health. Canthrox shampoos are splendid for correcting oiliness, dryness or profuse dandruff. I like its drying qualities, too.

Mrs. G.: The symptoms you describe, pains and aches in the limbs and small of back, loss of appetite, lack of strength and ambition, are danger signals—warning your blood is laden with poisons which will cause serious sickness if not eliminated from the system. The hardene tonic of grandmother's day is excellent to use, and can be prepared at home at little cost by dissolving 1 cupful sugar and 1 ounce hardene (which you can get at your drug store) in ½ pint alcohol (not whisky), to which is then added hot water to make a full quart. A tablespoonful before meals is the dose. The timely use of this tonic frequently saves serious ills.

Marie: Yes, you can cure your weak, watery eyes with a soothing, healing, strengthening eye tonic which can be made at little cost by dissolving an ounce of eryston in one pint clear water. If you will put 2 or 3 drops in each eye daily it will relieve the inflammation and soreness and reduce swelling. This eryston tonic is especially fine to make the eyes sparkle and give them expression.

Society Girl: Here is that weight-reducing treatment which she told you would work without danger or inconvenience: Put 4 ounces parnotin (which you can obtain at any drug store) in 1½ pints hot water. Strain when cold; take 1 tablespoonful before meal. Keep up treatment until weight is sufficiently reduced. Parnotin is gentle in action and positive in results, and leaves the flesh and skin firm and smooth.

Girlie: It is easy to make an inexpensive hair tonic at home by mixing 1 ounce quinsoin with ½ pint alcohol, then adding ½ pint water. The scalp should be massaged once or twice a week with this quinsoin tonic. Its regular use will quickly banish the dry, scaly condition and correct excessive oiliness, and when this is done the natural colour and silky softness returns and the hair will grow in long and thick and have a beautiful sheen.

Marge: Friends tell me I have every reason to be proud of my complexion, which is the result of discarding powder and using spurmax lotion. This is inexpensive and easily made at home. I just dissolve 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch-hazel or hot water, then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, and it is ready. I apply this lotion sparingly and rub lightly for a moment until it dries and seems to become a part of the skin, to which it gives a velvety smoothness and refined colour that is delightful.

O. T.: The wrinkles of which you speak will soon vanish if you apply almentin cream-jelly and massage the lotion way of the crevices. This simple treatment tends to vivify the dormant tissues, causing the crevices or lines to fill out. To prepare the cream-jelly put 1 ounce almentin (which you can get at your drug store) in ½ pint water and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let remain overnight before using. As a skin cleanser and beautifier this greaseless cream jelly is not equalled.

Malay Superstitions.

A Malay child has to be sturdy to survive the perils of his birth and babyhood. Only an iron constitution could bear the balls of rice that are stuffed into his mouth or the cold bath which greets him immediately on his appearance in the world. But it is not that a Malay mother is indifferent to the physical welfare of her offspring. When her child falls ill no one could be more solicitous. The house and the village are ransacked to find the cause of the sickness. If it is suspected to be in the interior of the house the services of a native doctor are obtained. After concentrating his thoughts upon the pit of his stomach for a time he will probably call for a "female cocoanut." Taking then a knife of a peculiar shape, he mutters incantations in a forgotten tongue and proceeds to shave the nut. If the person who has bewitched the child is living in the house he will awake the next morning with a skull as bald as the cocoanut itself.

The Long Arm of Coincidence.

Lady Macdonell in her reminiscences tells of a curious incident which occurred thirty-six hours after leaving Southampton. A large bird perched itself on the summit of the mainmast, a sailor went up and caught it and brought it down, and it proved to be a brown owl!

"I am superstitious about owls," says Lady Macdonell, "and was very depressed, especially as I had left my favorite sister ill. The sailors tied a string round the poor, dazed creature's leg and were rather ill treating it, so I offered them 2 shillings for the bird, which they accepted, and I then let it out of my porthole. The captain told me that they often caught even smaller birds on the mast, especially when the wind was blowing off the land. On arriving at Lisbon we received a telegram to say that thirty-six hours after my departure my sister had passed away and also Lady Macdonell, the wife of General Sir A. Macdonell, my brother-in-law. It was a strange coincidence."

Offered Him Shelter.

"One of the characteristics of my old comrade, Amos Stillman, was bravery in actual fighting service," said the old soldier. "Another characteristic was a sense of humor, which stood him in good stead, even in the face of danger and contributed not a little to the gayety of his comrades.

"At the battle of Cold Harbor, just before making the charge and while under the Confederate fire, our corporal, who was over six feet high and scarcely bigger around than a gun barrel, became excited as the enemy's bullets plowed up the earth about him.

"'What kind of a place is this to keep a man in?' he demanded. 'Absolutely without protection!'

"He had no more than spoken when Private Stillman stuck his ramrod in the ground.

"'Here, corporal,' said he, 'get behind this.'"—New York Globe.

Easy Borrowing Terms.

In the course of a lecture on "Government Finances and Social Life in Japan" before the Japan society in London, Mengo Mori, financial commissioner and attache for the imperial Japanese government, said that in the olden days gentlemen tried to keep aloof from all money transactions. Of course there were borrowers and lenders then, as there are today, and even among the Samurai class. But their agreements, if written at all, were always worded in a manner characteristic of the spirit of the times. One such agreement ran: "Dear Sir—I hereby confirm that I borrowed from you the above mentioned sum of money. Should I not repay the sum you are entitled to laugh at me in public."

Women Barbers.

In Gay's "Journey to Exeter," published in 1715, it is told how after passing Morcombe's lake the travelers reach Axminster, where they sleep. The next morning—

We rise; our beards demand the barber's art.
A female enters and performs the part.
The weighty golden chain adorns her neck,
And three gold rings her skillful hands bedeck.
Smooth o'er our chin her easy fingers move,
Soft as when Venus stroked the beard of Jove.

ODDS AND ENDS OF TIMELY INTEREST CABLED FROM LONDON

ELEMENTARY SCHOOL WILL NOT TEACH SEX HYGENE

Controversy Over Whether or Not Young Should Be Instructed Into Origin of Life Ends in Negative Report by Board of School Mistresses.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

FOLLOWING the recent controversy arising out of the charges brought against a schoolmistress for instructing young girls in the origin of life, a voluminous report has just been issued by the London Education Committee, consisting of the evidence they took from a dozen headmasters, headmistresses and school superintendents.

Only one of these, Miss T. E. Bonwick, headmistress of Enfield Road School, regards the teaching of sex hygiene in elementary schools as imperative: "in order that the growth of wrong conceptions of love and of some of the most important things in life, both physical and mental, may be prevented, and that thus undue familiarity between girls and boys and men arising from ignorance may be prevented; secondly, to protect children from those of evil mind or intent trying to poison the minds or injure the bodies of both boys and girls, individuals to be found not only in the streets, but also in shops, lodging houses, or even in the very schools as agents; thirdly, for the improvement of the race, by leading children to understand, so far as their mental development will allow, something of the importance of good marriage, and of injury to themselves, their children, and the race of unhealthy marriages or illicit union."

Miss Bonwick urges that these aims can best be achieved through school teaching because "the majority of parents are incapable, sometimes morally, sometimes physically, or teaching their own children; secondly, the suitable class teacher understands how to adapt herself and her instruction to the minds of her pupils, and, thirdly, it precedes the wrong impressions which are otherwise almost sure to be made from without, and of which the teacher usually knows nothing."

Of the remainder of the witnesses, Mrs. E. M. Burgwin, "special school" superintendent, is non-committal. She found, she said, that women more than forty years of age have been all against such teaching in schools, and women from twenty to thirty all for it.

On another important point the majority are in cordial agreement. That is that the greatest danger to girls arises out of their leisure and their pleasure more than out of their work or employment.

The result of the whole m atter is that the committee has decided that sex hygiene is not to be taught, either directly or indirectly in elementary schools. But, recognising the importance of the subject, they have produced two leaflets for distribution among schools and teachers, containing information for the use of girls on leaving school, and information for parents, teachers and ministers of religion for the purpose of safeguarding girls seeking employment."

These two memoranda are to be distributed among girls who leave elementary schools in London every year. They tell how to make sure that employment is respectable; but on the question of behavior "in parks and open places," or on the other pitfalls that may beset girls the committee shows no desire to impart information.

Beautiful Women of America as Seen by London Bystander Critic

He Finds Much, of Course, to Discuss, and the Bystander Prints It.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

THE London Bystander sent Mr. Francis Toye to the other side recently to write about the American woman and her rivalry of Venus. Here is what Mr. Toye discovered:—

"There have always been certain cities famous for the beauty of their women, and most people who know America will have no difficulty in deciding which one may especially claim the honor to-day. Not so much because of the beauty of the wealthier women, though you can see some of the loveliest faces in the world among them. But—tell it not in Gath—many American ladies of fashion are too plump and soft looking to be really beautiful. Despite recent reaction, I think the American woman of the upper class is, physically, the laziest in the world. With the advent of the automobile there seems to be some danger of her losing the use of her legs altogether. Indeed, on the analogy of her ancestors' tails, she may end by being born without any at all. But that is mere theory.

"Still, speaking personally, I am bound to say that even the average American woman of the upper class seems to be distinctly prettier than any of her European sisters. But about the average American woman of the middle classes there can, I am sure, be no doubt at all. She is incomparably the smartest, most elegant and beautiful thing that exists under heaven. You talk of the pretty faces of English girls, the distinction of Parisian midinettes, the dash of Slavonic women—why the American girl combines all these qualities and improves on them too.

"Her face ... rather one type of it, has been immortalized by ... Gibson. It is not always a ... complexion she ... but knows how to ... the best possible ... tation. Her clothes are so smart that ... you wonder how on earth she can afford ... buy them, till you remember that ... erica generally is famous for the excellen... of its ready made costumes. Her blouse is always spotlessly clean; her ... effectively dressed. And the ... of American woman are acknowledged to be the finest in the world.

In short, if you are a young man of susceptible tendencies you had better give America the go by—or insure heavily against matrimony.

"It is not, to emphasize the point once again, of the women of fashion I speak, though many are, heaven knows, lovely enough. Nor yet of American actresses, who do not seem to ... to ... on the whole nearly as good looking ... their English colleagues. It is the ordinary, everyday go to work girl who runs ... catch a trolley car, jostles in the subway ... patronizes what you call the cinema ... and she calls the 'movies.' It is, in fact, the goddess of the typewriter, the fairy of the newspaper office, ... grace of the telephone that ... every time I see her I am more ... amazed at her ... ge loveliness.

"Let this ... not be suspected of mere infatuation. ... will be, perhaps, just as well to make a confession. Contrary to the usual ideas on the subject, I do not, so far as generalization is possible at all, like the American woman nearly as much as the comparatively plain looking average American man. Either literally or metaphorically, sometimes both, she is too liable to be discovered unexpectedly in the act of chewing gum—a most distressing habit for a goddess to possess. Thank heaven, by the time these lines are printed there will be half the ocean between her and me. The hatpin in America looks even longer and sharper than in London."

William Ireland's Forgeries of Shakespeare Offered at Auction

Part of Hodgkin Library, Which Passed to Mr. Maggs, Contains Remarkable Spurious Documents Which Deceived the Public and Brought Forger a Small Fortune.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 12.

JUST about a year ago the world was ringing with the controversy over the selling of the love letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett, which fetched nearly $33,000 at auction. Universal comment has lately been made on the letters which have been revealed as passing from Parnell to his affinity. Now, by a curious twist of fate, it is decreed that another literary forgery, of much greater dimensions, should be revived in the sale of the Hodgkin library, in which a dossier of papers, relics and facsimilies connected with the forgery of Shakespeare's plays by a youth of seventeen, William Henry Ireland, at the end of the eighteenth century passed to Mr. Maggs for $545.

Ireland confessed, and it was a swaggering confession. For his inventions were works of art. He had begun by deceiving his own father, a respectable bookseller, and ended "by deceiving the devil himself." As new proofs were demanded to substantiate his forgeries, he slickly produced them.

Mr. Maggs has now the original forged document of Shakespeare's agreement with his publisher, Condell.

Ireland next invented an ancestor-namesake to whom Shakespeare made a deed of gift of manuscript plays. This was also included in the Hodgkin lot, and one can see what a gold mine it must have been to Ireland. For it enabled him to produce, ad libitum, his precious literary ore, the most stark-staring output being his complete Shakespeare manuscript of Lear, with saucy fragments of what he was pleased to call "Hamblette." These skilful manipulations of the pen are in the British Museum.

Feeling that "Ann Hatherreway" must have her proper place in this fantastic nightmare, Ireland duly twined a lock of her hair and gave his ancestor authority for the statement that she had given it to her spouse.

Ireland's publications of his manuscripts and documentary evidence brought him a small fortune, and some of these 1796 lucubrations were also included. In one of these volumes his version of "Lear" "from the original manuscript" was given in extenso, winding up with the Duke's speech:—

"The weighte of thys sad tyme we muste obeye
Speake thatte wee feele notte thatte wee oughte too saye
The oldest mousie have borne wee thatte are younge
Shalle nere beholde see muche merre live see longe
Here endethe mye Playe off Kynge Lear.
WM. SHAKESPEARE."

Conscious that this required extra substantiation, young Ireland composed a letter from Shakespeare returning the lock to her for her to kiss before he puts it away for posterity—and the Hodgkin collection:—

"Dearest Anne,

"As thou haste always founde mee too mye woode meete trewe as thou shalte see I have strycte kepte mye promyse I praye you perfume thye mye poore locke with thya balmye kysses ferre thenne indeede shall Kynges themmselves bowe and paye hommage too itte."

Yet for matchless impudence the palm must be awarded to a letter which Ireland indited as coming from Queen Elizabeth to Shakespeare, summoning him to pass a Bank Holiday of the period at Hampton Court.

"Wee didde receive youre pretty verses goode Masterre William through the hande off oure Lorde Chamberlayne andde wee dee
Complemente thee onne theyre greate excellence
Wee shalle departe fromm Londonne for Hamptonne for the holydays where wee shall expecte thee with thye best Actorres thatte theu mayste playe before ourselfe too amuse usse bee notte slowe butte comme too usse bye Tuesdaye nexte asse the Lorde Leicesterre will bee withe usse.
ELIZABETH R."

AT THE PARIS DOG SHOW.

There was a huge attendance at the Paris Dog Show held in the Tuileries Gardens. Despite the hot weather an unceasing stream of visitors admired the numerous exhibits, the prize winning dogs attracting special attention, for the judges' awards had been duly posted up.

An interesting side show in the open air on the terrace close to the Place de la Concorde was the dog market, where all sorts and sizes of dogs were offered for sale. Although the public thronged to the terrace, prices apparently were deemed rather high, and comparatively few purchases were made.

"UNLUCKY 13" LEAVES DISASTER IN ITS WAKE

Superstitious Englishmen Point to Long List of Deaths Attributable to This Numerical Hoodoo Which Claimed Victims Under Its Spell.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

THE superstitious are to-day pointing out with unholy glee to their friends the latest recorded triumph of Unlucky Thirteen.

Last November thirteen persons sat down to a rent audit dinner given to Sir John Goldney's tenants at Corsham. Less than a week later one of their number died suddenly and mysteriously. There was nothing particularly remarkable in that, but the other day another audit dinner took place on the same estate, thirteen again sat down, and the next day one of their party fell ill and died.

When it is remembered that this was in the month of May (the most unlucky of the twelve), that the May blossom was out (another unlucky circumstance), that the cuckoo was singing (a third certain misfortune), when the victim of this hapless audit dinner was engaged in drinking the health of a friend—a fourth disaster due—the superstitious are rubbing their hands and saying, "Now, what do you think of that?"

"How do you account for all these things?" asked a visitor of a prominent member of the Psychical Research Society.

"Oh," said he seriously, "we have long ago thrashed the question out. It is all a matter of coincidence—coincidence mingled with a very considerable amount of imagination. Your really superstitious man is a man of more or less abnormal imagination. He can think himself into any disaster, from a broken leg to a cancer or corns or chilblains or anything like that.

"If by some fell chance he walks under a ladder, cuts his nails on a Friday, sees the new moon through glass, meets a cross-eyed man without bowing to him or passes a funeral without raising his hat, or a hundred and one other things in the established category of the superstitious, he is instantly smitten with the fear that something uncanny is going to happen to him.

"His whole personality is stripped bare to the blast of misfortune. He is asking for trouble—and so he very often gets it."

The expert took down one of a pile of volumes in which the whole matter is analyzed.

"Now here," he said opening it, "are many uncanny things which, if they had been sifted to the bottom, might have led the most stolid unbeliever to believe."

"I observe," said the visitor, "that there are exactly thirteen of those volumes. Is that an intentional number, or is it a deliberate act by your case hardened society of flying in the face of superstition?"

"By no means," was the reply, and he closed the book without reading from it. "Other volumes were intended, but—but—at the completion of the thirteenth volume something rather—er—hindering happened to the editor"——

"And that was"——

"He died, suddenly!"

London's Latest Club Comforts

The Carlyle, Soon To Be Opened, Offers Complete Liberty of Thought and Action.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

LONDON is about to be presented with a brand new club in the throbbing heart of the metropolis. It will be known as the Carlyle, at No. 211 Piccadilly. It is already fully equipped, and only awaits the inaugural word to be spoken.

"Believe me," said a proud member, "it is the final word in clubs. The master mind is one of those intensely alert, high strung business men commonly supposed to be indigenous to the United States. He happens, however, to be an Englishman who has received big offers to manage American concerns and has declined them."

The Carlyle Club, within the boundary of license, offers complete liberty of thought and action. You may talk politics, but the radical will be as welcome as the tory, the only stipulation, after the payment of $75, is that you must behave like a gentleman and a sportsman. There is a room full of cosey corners, where you may discuss, especially if you come from the country, a business deal or a Stock Exchange coup. This alone is likely to horrify Pall Mall or lower Piccadilly.

It has forty-one telephones. Valets and messenger boys are at your constant service. The hall porter is to be a perfect encyclopaedia of the geography, the amusements, the traffic facilities of London. You may sit on a sofa, grasp the receivers of an electrophone and hear Tetrazzini or George Robey as your taste suggests. Women may call, and will find a drawing room where they may wait for their husbands and take tea at the expense of the club.

The club servants are old family retainers. "No waiters under forty need apply," was the dominant idea during the engagement of the staff. There is no restaurant—Piccadilly is too full of them—but dainty "snacks" are to be available for the free use of members and their guests.

You enter the club six doors from Piccadilly Circus and are ushered into the mediaeval atmosphere of a fine old baronial hall graced with cunningly contrived twentieth century improvements.

A restful silence, strange to Piccadilly, has been obtained by double windows, and as for the "Carlyle" room, its atmosphere is appropriate enough. It contains a fine copy of Whistler's masterpiece, while scenes from the "History of the French Revolution" adorn the wall. It is a home lounge.

THE KAISER, ART CRITIC.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

"I AM a human being; I am interested in things and like to improve my knowledge. But for that purpose one must be undisturbed," said the Kaiser when visiting an Impressionist exhibition. "I shall come again, but very early, for if I come during the day there are always two hundred people round me, and that is unpleasant."

This is among some characteristic anecdotes of the Kaiser which are related in the memoirs of the famous Munich painter of women's portraits, Professor von Keller, who celebrates his sixty-ninth birthday to-morrow. The Kaiser was indignant when invited to inspect an Impressionist picture of blossoming trees from the other side of the gallery. "Who has rooms big enough to look at pictures from such a distance?" he demanded. "What is the use of pictures that are no good unless you can examine them ten paces away?"

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

JUST before the Duke of Devonshire felt compelled to sell the rare Shakespeare quartos in his library at Chatsworth in order to provide for those modern plagues to owners of estates in England, the death duties, a rumor ran through the art world that the Earl of Pembroke was seeking a purchaser for that famous relic of fourteenth century British art, the "Wilton Diptych," painted for Richard II. to commemorate his visit to the shrine of "Our Lady in the Few," before he set out to quell Wat Tyler and his tribe.

For the time being this great art treasure is spared, but the Earl, for reasons similar to those which actuated the Duke of Devonshire, finds himself forced to part with a considerable portion of his renowned library.

On June 25 and 26 the books selected for sacrifice will draw collectors from all parts of the world to Sotheby's, unless in the meantime some adequate offer is made for them en bloc. Such an offer for the 311 prizes of incunabula will have to be big indeed, as the array of early printed books comprises examples no longer to be found outside great national collections.

The day has gone by when the "foundation stone of every gentleman's library" was the first printed Homer, Florence, 1488. Even collectors have begun to look askance at the early classics, but the rarity of the Pembroke examples will again compel interest. The first book printed in Greek is here, the 1476 Milan Lascaris Greek Grammar, and for those who like the younger Pliny and seek solace in books from worldly cares there is an unknown edition of that comforting work by Boethius, the "De Consolatione Philosophiae." Dean Colet's fight against "all barbary, all corruption, all Latin adulterate, which ignorant blind fools brought into this world" is recalled by his favorite Lactantius, who is represented in the Pembroke library by a 1465 edition, being the first book printed in Italy with a date.

Earlier than this, but undated, is the Cicero "De Oratore," without printer's name or place, yet admittedly the first printed Latin classic. A copy of Cicero's "Epistolae ad Familiares," dated 1469, is the first book printed in Venice, and the library teems with scarce classics, such as the commentaries on Virgil, by Servius Maurus Honoratus, the earliest book printed in Florence, 1471 (of which there is no copy in the British Museum), and the works of Hieronymus and Aristotle, the first and second books printed at Oxford, 1481-82.

Students of typographical monuments will, however, be attracted chiefly by Fust and Schoiffer's "Durandus," the 1459 vellum edition, matched only by that in the Spencer-Rylands library; by the 1460 Gutenberg "Catholicon," of Joannes Balbus, an example of which was one of the prizes in the Amherst of Hackney sale, and by five rare specimens of early block books illustrating the struggles of wood engraving to become printing.

The Nuremberg "Apocalypsis," issued about 1460, is probably more valuable than the $5,000 Huth copy, and the "Ars Moriendi" in its first xylographic form realizing $5,500 in the same dispersal. An early fifteenth century "Biblia Pauperum" and two Dutch block books of the "Speculum Humanae Salvationis" complete a set which will make a strong appeal to the wealthy modern collector.

To Make Dances More Agreeable

Sir Philip Burne-Jones Pleads for Abolition of Custom Forbidding Introductions.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

AT the best dances in London it has been de rigueur for many years past not to introduce young persons to each other, it being taken for granted that everybody present knows everybody else. And it would be a gross breach of etiquette for any one to address another without introduction. A young man wishing to dance and not having a partner would be liable to a snub if he dared to address a girl whom he did not know.

In a letter to the Times Sir Philip Burne-Jones pleads for introductions at society dances.

"It is ridiculous to imagine," he writes, "that among the rabble of guests which constituted a big London ball, say at the Ritz or elsewhere, when the majority of the men are unknown, even by sight, to the hostess herself, any but a very small percentage of those invited are personally known to each other. To pretend anything else savors of affectation or snobbishness. It has become even a fashion among some of the younger men to resent introductions and to regard them as an interference with their personal liberty.

"The result is that many a young girl who might and ought to have had an enjoyable evening goes home with regretful instead of happy memories—having been compelled to sit out dances which she would gladly have taken part in if she had known any one to dance with—and this, too, with a horde of youths in exactly similar case, in front of her, idly blocking up the doorways, because they were too lazy or too proud to admit that they also were friendless."

Will not some big hostess, Sir Philip asks, come to the rescue and make introductions fashionable? It would often save the maidens from needless humiliation and at the same time would afford the young men a chance of honorably earning their supper.

An Actual Demonstration by Young Scientist in London Surprises Inventors Who Witness Reproduction of a Picture Through Ordinary Wires.

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 12.

QUITE casually, toward the end of a lecture before the Institute of Automobile Engineers, Dr. A. M. Low, a young scientist, already of some fame as an inventor, announced that he would demonstrate for the first time in public a new apparatus invented by him for seeing by electricity. By the invention, he added, it would be possible for persons using a telephone to see each other at the same time.

It was not on the programme—it was, indeed, quite unexpected—but Dr. Low made his preparations and invited the chairman to inspect the result. The chairman saw, to his surprise, that a picture shown to the transmitter was reproduced by the receiving apparatus.

Calling upon Dr. Low at his London residence later, a correspondent heard more details of the invention.

"It may be remarkable, but really it is quite simple," said Dr. Low, "and I am sure that some day people on a liner at sea will be able to witness a spectacle taking place ashore transmitted to the ship by wireless in the way news is now. They will say, 'Our forefathers could not see each other when in different places without taking trains.'"

Dr. Low explained that he had been experimenting with the reproduction of pictures at a distance electrically for five years. He had been successful already over a distance of four miles, using ordinary telephonic and telegraphic apparatus.

The adjunct to the usual gear, to speak popularly, is the control and transmission of light in its various degrees—no more marvellous, of course, than the way in which the tones of the voice are reproduced distantly.

For this purpose Dr. Low has devised a screen, which is built up of a block of cells, made of selenium, or of any diamagnetic matter. A roller, made up of alternate conductive and insulated sections (and these again operated electrically in any order by a sector on the roller), moves with great rapidity over the face of the screen, reproducing the amount of light falling on each cell at the receiving end of the apparatus.

The whole makes a picture which naturally flickers through being formed in the mechanical way that a long series of photographs combines to form the now well known living picture.

It is really a picture formed of a series of small squares. This is a development of that experiment already well known by which light thrown on a screen in Paris was reproduced in London, only now the light can be controlled to reproduce a scene at a distance.

Dr. Low admitted that the experiment was expensive, and that at present the invention was not perhaps commercially possible.

LONDON'S FLOWER DIET CRAZE

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, June 13.

THE ingenuity of this season's London hostess is taxed to the utmost to meet the demands of the fads and fancies of to-day. The gastronomic art is looked at askance by the weary society hustler, whose main business in life is to appear at two or three fashionable functions every afternoon and evening. The truth is that his nerves and his digestion both want a rest, though he will not admit it.

The most up to date hostesses now provide not only the ordinary buffet or hot supper for those who grace their ballrooms and reception rooms, but vegetarian tables and nutriment for the votaries of the latest craze, flower eating.

At a recent ball in Belgrave square a guest told how his supper consisted of a plate of specially forced chrysanthemum petals with a sauce piquante—a salad of lily of the valley seasoned with marshmallow—roses a l'Oriental, arranged with a delicious syrup, and violets in marmalade. The latter was really an innovation, and a trifle too strong for the strict flower eater.

Princess Bariatinsky really first set the fashion of flower diet some months ago, but it is only within the last few weeks that the demands of her followers induced the society hostess to provide these delicacies. The Princess lives on raw vegetables—baby carrots by preference; hay soup, which is very nutritious, and flowers and fruit. The flower eaters look astonishingly well, and not at all wan or too ethereal. Perhaps a bit of sunshine enters their blood with the consumption of nature's jewels.

KAISER'S BAD GERMAN.

(Special Dispatch.)
BERLIN, June 13.

THE language used by the Kaiser in his farewell letter to Prince Wedel, the retiring Viceroy of Alsace-Lorraine, has aroused the anger of both the super-patriots and the sticklers for German grammar.

The super-patriots who make a specialty of combating such heinous practices as the use of French menus at German dinners object to the Kaiser describing himself as Prince Wedel's "wohlaffektionirter [very affectionate] Emperor," the adjective being a mixture of French and German.

The grammarians are up in arms because the Kaiser used the antiquated phrase "und verbleibe mit ... instead of einbleibe," beginning a new sentence with the words "I remain." They say he has done the movement for correspondence irreparable harm by falling back into the obsolete and "most detestable business language," which is interpreted by writers unsure, but is really "bad German" and never used in conversation.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FROM LUCILE'S DIARY

My love of beauty and sympathy with the subtle appeal that nature makes in some of its forms led me to express my admiration for an azalea in Louise Erwin's home.

"Yes, isn't it lovely?" said Louise. "Just think, I've had it ever since Easter, and by taking good care of it I hope to keep it still beautiful for my birthday next month. I'm so glad it wasn't in full bloom when it was sent to me." Louise leaned over the plant and allowed some of the blossoms to brush her cheek lightly. It was really pathetic to see how much touched and pleased she was with her azalea. I wondered who gave it to her, but I did not ask, as I didn't care to show too much interest.

The next morning when I was planning the details of a little dinner I was getting up for the Baughmans, of Milwaukee, and the Nodines, who happened to be also in town, it suddenly occurred to me that Louise's azalea would be charming in the centre of the table, with pink ribbons flowing from it to each plate bearing the dinner cards.

"Louise," I said, calling her over the telephone, "knowing what a dear, good friend you are, I'm not hesitating to ask you to lend me something."

"Why, what is it you wish, Lucile?"

"Well, you see," I went on, "I'm having an extremely small dinner for some out of town friends and I have just thought how perfectly lovely your azalea would be as a table decoration. You won't mind my taking it, will you dear? I have so often heard you say that the way to enjoy one's blessings that most fully is to share them, that I feel sure you'll be glad to lend me your pink posy for to-night."

"Yes, you may take it, Lucile," she answered, with what I might have thought was a trace of reluctance, had I do not know what a generous creature she is.

I should have liked rather to invite her to the dinner, but she would have made an odd girl, as there wouldn't have been room at the table for another man for her and it would have been awkward in the evening, too, as I had planned to roll away the rugs and dance. Of course, she could have played the piano for us, but Cousin Fannie does that very well and never expects to be included in the dancing.

I told Tilly that I would wash the breakfast dishes for her if she would go over to the Erwins for the plant, but when I found there were no rubber gloves in the house of course I couldn't wash the dishes. It is really absurd to spend money on a manicure every week and then ruin one's hands in dish water. So I had to ask Cousin Fannie, who has no regard at all for her hands, to wash them and let me dry them. Just as we were about to begin I remembered that I ought to call up George Requier before he became engulfed in the business of the day, and ask him to bring some of the new music that he likes for the hesitation waltz, over which he is so enthusiastic. It just happened that he wasn't busy, and being in a talkative mood I couldn't easily close the conversation quickly. When I returned to kitchen Cousin Fannie looked just a wee bit sour, I thought.

"I'm so sorry I was detained," I began, "but you know how—"

"Yes, I know your prolonged telephone habits," she interrupted me shortly.

The dinner went off very merrily and every one admired the table decorations.

"What a lovely azalea!" said Janet Maughman. "And it's late for azaleas now."

"This has lasted over since Easter," I answered.

"I wish," said George in an envious undertone, "that I had sent you a plant instead of violets." Of course I just smiled.

"Are you really going back to Brownhurst tomorrow?" I asked Tom Nodine, when he and Coral were saying good night. "I really envy you. The country is so delightfully refreshing in the springtime."

"Why don't you come along with us and gather in a supply of fresh air and sunshine?" he asked cordially.

"Oh, I wish I could."

"We must make her come, mustn't we, dear?" he turned to Carol.

"Yes, do come," seconded Carol, and I promised to meet them at the station the next morning.

Although it was dull at Brownhurst I remained a week because mother had a seamstress doing some work for herself and grandmother and dressmaking in the house always gets on my nerves dreadfully. So I just stayed and made a sort of rest cure of my visit, sleeping late and napping every day.

"Lucile," said mother the moment I arrived home this afternoon, "it's most mysterious about Louise's azalea. She dropped in yesterday and said she would carry it home with her and although we turned the house inside out we couldn't find it anywhere. I supposed you had arranged to send it home, so I was awfully surprised when I learned it was not at Louise's. She was really distressed about it."

"Why, I put it in the back hall closet, where I thought it would be cool. I intended to ask Tilly to take it to Louise, but in the excitement of going away so suddenly it escaped my mind. But I dare say it's all right."

"All right!" echoed mother, "it has probably perished for want of water and air."

And sure enough we found it dead. I think azaleas must be extremely sensitive plants.

I suppose Louise will be very much annoyed. She is so likely to overvalue her things, but if my allowance holds out I shall try to send her a nice pot of primroses on her birthday, which I hope will soothe her wounded feelings.

DELAY RILES LORDS.

Lansdowne Will Present Motion To Censure Government.

LONDON, June 16. — The Home Rule bill will enter upon a new phase to-day, when it will be the subject of a vote of censure on the Government at the instance of Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition.

When the Lords reassembled yesterday, Lord Lansdowne enquired of Lord Crewe when the amending Home Rule bill would be produced. Lord Crewe replied on behalf of the Government that the amending bill would be introduced next week, so as to be in the hands of the peers prior to the consideration of the second reading of the original measure provisionally fixed for June 30. Lord Crewe indicated that the interval before the production of the amending bill would be available for further conversations with a view to an agreement. He invited the co-operation of Lord Lansdowne in the final drafting of the amending bill, and he promised that the measure in any case would be brought down before the peers would be called upon to vote on the main issue.

"How," asked Lord Lansdowne, "could the Home Rule bill be taken up on Tuesday, June 30, when the terms of the amending bill might only be known on June 27? We shall not be prepared to go on with the discussion of the Home Rule policy of the Government if we are only to have an off-chance of getting a look at the amending bill three or four days before the noble marquis proposes to take the debate on the main bill."

Wilson Signs Repeal Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16. — President Wilson yesterday signed the Panama tolls exemption repeal bill as amended in the Senate and agreed to by the House.

Skin Trouble On The Scalp

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

The "Gospel Trumpet" on the Licensed Saloon

Suppose it cannot be, the State would have at least cleared its skirts of complicity in the traffic But the fact is that such laws can be enforced.

Our opponents ask for specific cases. They are thick as daisies in a meadow. Immediately after the earth quake in San Francisco, lawlessness became so rampant that the Mayor, Chief of Police and Military Commander were compelled to close the saloons. They were closed tight for a month. Lawlessness immediately ceased and the city was almost free from crime. So great was the change that the Chief of Police was changed from an open supporter of the saloon to an enthusiastic prohibitionist and visited surrounding towns to urge them to follow the example of the greater city.

A few years after the enactment of the prohibition aw in Kansas, letters were sent to the county officials asking if they were able to enforce the law, and what the effect was upon the people. The officials of ninety-seven counties replied. Ninety-four said that there were no saloons, and ninety-two reported the use of intoxicants greatly diminished. Here are a few samples of the replies: Judge Gill of Jewell County: "Drunkenness has been reduced ninety per cent." Judge Smith of Jefferson County: "There is not a saloon in the county; drunkenness has been reduced fully seventy-five per cent. over the entire state. For eighteen months there has been but one prisoner in our county jail, and he for attempting to sell liquor in violation of law" Judge Quinlin of Shawnee County: "There is not an open saloon in this county and a drunken person is a rare sight."

Judge Fowler of Marshall County: "Drunkenness has been reduced ninety-nine per cent." Judge Rowney: "There are no saloons and not a drunken person is seen where fifty were formerly seen."

These are but a sample of the statements made by the Judges of the ninety-seven counties reporting, and were made a few years after the law was enacted and when law enforcement would be very difficult As the years have gone the change has been more marked.

The loss of revenue is more than compensated by the reduction of taxes.

The plea that the city will be embarrassed by the loss of license fees is scarce worthy of notice. There might be a little embarrassment for a short time during the transition, but the decrease in expense would soon far more than replace the loss. Our courts and prison officials declare that three-fourths of our taxes are made necessary by the commission of crime and the existence of poverty and that drink is the chief source of these. The letters from the Judges from Kansas, referred to above, without an exception, stated that the loss in revenue had been more than made good by the decrease in taxes. Here are a few of the answers:

Judge Hoffman: "The saloon revenue under license is not to be compared to the decrease in crime and the reduction of cases in the criminal court".

Judge Dill: "The loss of revenue has been more than made good by the reduction of taxes"

Judge Bridges: "The loss of license fees has been made good ten times over by the decrease in the lowering of taxes because of the decrease in crime".

Judge Gardner: "This county owns a poor-farm worth $12,000 There has not been a person sent to it for more than a year; neither was there a criminal case on the docket for the last term of court"

Judge Rowney: "Since the prohibition amendment went into effect, the docket of the police court has been comparatively free of cases of drunkenness, and the police courts scarcely pay the rent of the office and the jail is empty"

This condition is more marked after many years of prohibition.

These are a few of the facts which we offer as an argument for refusing to license the saloon. But I insist that there are things more important than business. The boys and girls of our city are a greater asset than our commercial enterprises, and it is not right that they should be sacrificed to increase the wealth of a few men. Men are more than things. Folks are worth more than real estate. Manhood values are more than money values. To support the present saloons of Pittsburgh requires one boy out of every five and many of our girls. They who are not willing to give their boys and girls to support the saloon have no right to give some other person's boy and girl for that purpose.

—James D Rankin, in "The Christian Statesman".

BIG DREDGE FOUNDERS.

One Man Drowned and Seven Not Yet Accounted For.

PORT DALHOUSIE, June 16.—The big dredge Delver, owned by the Dominion Dredging Co., having the contract for No. 1 Section Welland Ship Canal, in tow of the tug Alice, capsized outside Port Dalhousie harbor just before 11 o'clock last night, and sank, while endeavoring to take shelter in Port Dalhousie harbor.

The dredge was at Port Weller, with the dredges Dominion and Fundy, when a heavy sea arose. The tug, Meteor, in charge of Capt. McGrath, attempted to take the Dominion to the shelter of Port Dalhousie, but she broke all lines, and was driven toward the shore.

When the Delver capsized, Capt. Howe of the Alice displayed distress signals, bringing the tug Meteor to her assistance. The two tugs saved ten of the crew of the Delver after considerable difficulty.

Although the Delver's crew consisted of eighteen men, some of the number are believed to have been left ashore, and only one man, Walter Burt, married, of Port Dalhousie, is definitely known to have been drowned. The survivors were taken ashore and placed in bed at the Lincoln House.

The sinking of the Delver represents a loss of $100,000. It was believed that the Dominion, too, was lost, but now that the storm has somewhat abated, it is thought that her breaking away from the tug saved her from that fate, for when she drifted in towards the beach her anchors were got out by the crew. It is not yet known how badly she was damaged, but it is believed that all on board are safe.

Word of the accident spread like wild-fire throughout the district. Everyone was greatly excited and it was hard to get details of how the accident occurred. Of the crew of eighteen, seven have not been located. With Burt drowned and ten rescued, the seven still are to be accounted for. The officials of the company and captains of her dredges and tugs are confident that the seven have been rescued and are either on board one of the tugs in the harbor or at a farm house along the shore. At midnight several parties were sent out to visit every house in the district to see if any trace of the seven missing men could be found, but up to a late hour no word has been received from them.

You Can Quickly Free Your Skin From Hairs

(The Modern Beauty)

Here is a hair-removing treatment that is free from pain or danger and requires very little time: Make a paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread this on the hairy surface and in about two minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. Excepting where the growth is unusually stubborn, you will find a single application sufficient to banish every hair. To guard against disappointment, it is best to get the delatone in an original package.

Sizing Up Commissioners' Office.

LONDON, June 16.—In the course of an interview yesterday, Hon. G. H. There was a good demand for feeders and stockers, and prices were firm, but not any higher. Choice feeders sold at $7.50 to $7.75; good at $7.25 to $7.50; medium at $7 to $7.25; stockers at $6.50 to $7.25.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was very firm. Choice veals sold at $9.50 to $10.50; good calves at $8.50 to $9.50; medium at $7.50 to $8.50; and common eastern calves at $7, while "bobs" are now worth from $4 to $5 each.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of 136 sheep and lambs found ready sale at firm prices; light ewes at $6 to $6.25; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $4.50; spring lambs at $5 to $10 each.

Hogs.

Receipts were large and prices smaller but still very high. Selects fed and watered, $7.85; $7.50 f.o.b. cars, and $8.10 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, June 15.—The following were the prices quoted at the Montreal Live Stock Market to-day: Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.75 to $9.35; butchers' cattle, medium, $7 to $8; butchers' cattle, common, $5.75 to $6.75; canners, $4.50 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.75 to $8; butchers' cattle, medium, $6.75 to $7.50; butchers' cattle, bulls, $6 to $8; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $90; milkers, common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $65 to $80; sheep, ewes, $4 to $5.50; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.50; lambs, $7.50 to $7.75; hogs, off cars, $8.65; calves, $3 to $10.

Hogs—Receipts, 20,000; market, steady; light, $8 to $8.37½; mixed, $8 to $8.30; heavy, $7.45 to $8.30; rough, $7.55 to $8; pigs, $7 to $7.75; bulk of sales, $8.15 to $8.35.

Sheep—Receipts, 15,000; market, steady; native, $5.30 to $6.35; yearlings, $6.30 to $7.45; lambs, native, $6.50 to $8.60; spring lambs, $7.25 to $9.50.

A Triple Tragedy.

KEEWATIN, Ont., June 16.—Frank Mext, Galician, Sunday evening murdered his wife and two-year-old child, and then drowned himself, a two weeks old infant being the only surviving member of the family. Mext, who was employed on the Government road being constructed to the Manitoba boundary, was seen to strike the child over the head with a stick and throw the body into the race way. When the mother tried to protect the child he threw her into the water and then jumped in.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

VOTE FOR ME

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy mayonnaise diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of them a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 42 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1914.

Big Mass Meeting At The Grand Opera House Thursday Evening To Be Addressed By N. W. ROWELL, K. C., and G. A. GILLESPIE.

TWO GILLESPIE MEETINGS IN SMITH WERE LARGELY ATTENDED AND MUCH ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

Half Audience at Second Line School Were Ladies---Rev. Mr. McLaurin Never Voted For a Liberal But Has Faith in Rowell.

FINE RECEPTION

George Gillespie was back among old friends last night on the second and fourth lines of Smith. Years ago, when as a young cheese maker, he was learning the ground floor work of the dairy business, he made many friends among the patrons of the factory and the other farmers around the neighbourhood. He needed no introduction to the people last night, but he wanted to tell them why he was a supporter of Mr. Rowell and why he accepted the party nomination. There were no fireworks, no flapdoodle in his remarks. Just an earnest, straightforward statement based on personal conviction, a staunch faith in Mr. Rowell and a response to public sentiment that is seeking higher ideals.

"I have not sought to be a candidate in this election," Mr. Gillespie said. "A month ago I would have told you that I would not undertake it. I told a represetnative of Mr. Rowell who visited Peterborough that I had no desire to accept it. At the Liberal nomination I said I would not take it. The fact that persuaded me to look upon the matter in another light was the presence of quite a number of young men at that meeting who urged me to be a candidate. I was pressed to run on this great issue, and I was influenced particularly by the requests of the young men. I was not afraid of being defeated, but on such an important question as that of the abolition of the bar, I felt that a strong man should be selected. I hesitated when the convention unanimously offered the nomination to me, but I decided to do the best I could."

Sincerity Predominated.

There was nothing theatrical to Mr. Gillespie's statement. It was matter-of-fact and the manner of the acceptance of the nomination was just what the fourth liners would have expected of the man.

His appeal for support was in the same strain.

"If you elect me," he remarked, "I shall do as I have always done. I will work for the best interests of the people at large. There are other important questions besides that of temperance, but it is foremost. I have met with a great deal of encouragement. Quite a number of Conservative temperance men have voluntarily told me they intend to vote for me. I believe in a man using his own judgment and being guided by his conscience. If after carefully considering this great question you decide to elect Whitney instead of Rowell, if you choose Mr. Soden rather than myself, I will accept the issue good naturedly."

Two Good Meetings.

There was no equivocation on the temperance question, but there was a clear cut, well defined position. The Smith electors grasped immediately the Gillespie platform and furthermore they felt the motives behind it. No matter how they mark their ballots they know precisely where George Gillespie stands and they know they can trust him.

Mr. Thos. D. Young was chairman at the second line meeting. It was held in the little red school house that looks down upon Lily Lake on the road to Omemee. The North Monaghan councillor was a splendid choice for the chair. The school was comfortably filled, half the audience being women. At the fourth line meeting the gentler sex were not represented. Mr. Gillespie was accompanied by Mr. Jas. Middleton, Mr. John F. Thornton, Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. F. E. Ellis. At the fourth line meeting he was assisted by Mr. H. B. Cowan and Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mr. Young's Remarks.

Mr. Young is one of those farmers who find time to read the papers and keep posted on how the world is moving. He is a ready, sensible speaker, and apparently does his own thinking.

"Having been a temperance man all my life," said Mr. Young, "it may be that I am more interested in the temperance question than most men. It seems to me that all the other questions just now are as nothing compared to this. Think of the homes in this Dominion affected by this traffic, of the temptation awaiting in the cities wherever there are these bars. Go into town of a Saturday and see for yourself young men drinking at

SPLENDID MEETING OF BROTHERHOOD

Of Maintenance of Ways G.T.R. Employees in the Woodmen of the World Hall Last Night—Aims of Organization.

A PROGRESSIVE FRATERNITY

Last night an enthusiastic meeting of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Ways employees was held in the Woodmen of the World Hall, and two splendid addresses were delivered by (Mr. A. B. Lowe, Past President, and Mr. Jos. Mainhood, General Chairman of the Brotherhood. The chair was ably taken by Mr. Chas. Noyes, who in a brief speech before the visitors took the floor, told of his experience with the Brotherhood and remarked on the success with which it had been continuing.

The purpose of the meeting last night was to explain the aims of the organization and describe its inner workings to those G.T.R. employees of the district who are members, and to those who contemplated joining with the others in the Brotherhood. The local lodges of the Brotherhood are at Lindsay and Belleville, so that local employees do not get a chance to attend these meetings. Last night employees from Fraserville and Millbrook, as well at the local G.T.R. men were on hand to hear the speakers.

Mr. Lowe was the first organizer to engage in this work, and has travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific three times on hand car and on foot for the purpose of organizing the employees of the Transcontinental Railway.

Mr. Mainhood, too, is a prominent man in this connection, and their addresses to the men last night were full of interesting and convincing information as to what the Brotherhood was doing for its members. Their message included a review of the convention held in Montreal last winter, and which was followed by the general increase in wages, effecting every part of the Grand Trunks lines. The speakers told, too, how the officials of the G.T.R. of late had taken a more kindly attitude to the Federation. Formerly it was as much as a man's position was worth to let it be known to the officials that he was a member of the Brotherhood. But now the situation was vastly different and the Brotherhood was encouraged at the headquarters of the railway.

During their stay in the City Messrs. Lowe and Mainhood were guests at the White House. Yesterday they visited the Lift-Lock and were greatly pleased to see and understand this wonderful link of the Trent Canal system. They also spent a few hours in seeing the City, and complimented the City fathers on their course in paving the streets and on the laying of cement sidewalks.

Utilities Commission in Session

On Monday afternoon the Public Utilities Commission held a meeting with the following members present: Mr. T. F. Matthews, (chairman); Mr. W. H. Moore and Robert Hicks.

A letter was read from J. Kelly, Clerk of Smith, re plan for a drain on River Road. The plan, as submitted, was satisfactory, provided a water-table was made on the east side, and it was drained by a pipe under the road. The Clerk was instructed to write that owing to probable change in superintendents the matter will stand over a while.

Several applications were made for the position of Superintendent of the Waterworks.

A letter was read from the local Board of Health recommending that water mains be laid on Jackson and Lafayette Avenues. The Secretary was instructed to lay the main as soon as a properly-signed petition for it is presented.

A letter was read from E. H. D. Hall, saying he had registered by law No. 1, regarding the laying of mains on streets on Victoria Heights.—Received.

A letter was read from W. Naish for water on Concession Street, north of Hunter Street.—Received.

A report was read from Dr. MacPherson, M. H. O., on the examination of the water, made in May.—Received.

A report, accompanied by a plan, was read from J. W. Fitzgerald, O. L. S. of a survey to define the limits of Smith River Road in front of and for some distance east and west of the pumping station.—Received.

GREEKS ARE MASSACRED

War Between Greece and Turkey Now Said to be Imminent—Prince William Defends His Capital

AND IS WOUNDED

Examiner Special:

ATHENS, Greece, June 16—News has been received here of a terrible massacre of Greeks by the Turks in Asia Minor. War is now thought to be again imminent between Turkey and Greece.

DURAZZO, Albania, June 16.—Prince William of Wied, recently appointed by the great powers to rule Albania, commanded his troops this morning in a brilliant defence of his capital from the attacks of Musselmen insurgents. There was a brisk artillery duel and many casualities, and it is said William is wounded. An international force from the European warships, in the harbour, are surrounding the palace and the Consulate to protect the women and children.

ONLY ONE LIFE LOST IN THE WRECK OF DREDGE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

ST. CATHARINES, June 16.—It is now known that only one man lost his life in the wreck of the dredge "Delver". The rest have turned up safely, having been rescued by tugs.

A NOTED WORKER TO GIVE ADDRESS

Miss Lucy Broad, a world's worker for the W.C.T.U., who has travelled 250,000 miles in this cause, and worked in fifteen different countries, is now visiting in this City. She will give a costume lecture in the George Street Methodist school hall on Wednesday evening, June 17th at 8 o'clock. This is a union meeting to which all the churches are cordially invited.

The speaker will wear the dress of a Korean bride and will tell her experiences and will also show some curios of the country.

A free will offering will be taken at the close.

Press Jottings.

"Miss Lucy Broad delighted everyone with her interesting talks of foreign lands. All her word pictures were forcible and intensely interesting."—World's Temperance Centennial Congress, Saratoga, U.S.A.

WATCHING MR. SODEN

County Temperance Officers Want to Make Sure They Did Not Err

HIS LATEST "WOBBLES"

A representative of the County of Peterborough Temperance Association attended Mr. Soden's meeting at Young's Point last evening in order to hear what pronouncement Mr. Soden might make on the temperance issue. Mr. Soden did not give any reason to believe that he would support the "Abolish the Bar" policy. Instead, he spoke against it. The following extracts are from his speech: They show that the County and City Temperance Associations are fully justified in the stand they have taken that Mr. Soden would not make an acceptable candidate.

"Rowell stands on abolish the bars and club licenses in Ontario. He stops there. With the shops he deals not at all. A man can get drunk out of a bottle but not over the bar."

"This measure may be good enough in itself, but Mr. Rowell should go further and include shops and distilleries. But as he has so carefully guarded the shops naturally he must leave the distilleries as their source of supply."

"To be effectual we must have a whole way remedy and the people must approve of each step. It does not do to create a revolution over night."

"It is almost impossible for a boy under 21 to get a drink over the bar, but the boy can get drunk from a bottle procured from a shop by an older friend. For more boys learn to drink out of the bottle than at the bar. "Whydoes Mr. Rowell shield the shop? Some say because of elements in his own party which will not consent to the abolition of the shops. It may be that he is unacquainted with conditions."

"My contention is that there will be more drinking under Rowell's policy than there is at the present time."

I say the three-fifths' clause is the best thing that ever happened to this country.

"Whitney said Local Option is no good unless the people are strongly behind it. If 60 per cent. of the people will vote bars, shops and clubs out of existence we will see that it is done. At the end of nine years there are 150 municipalities under local option, few repeals and the law is enforced. How can we accuse Whitney of not being in favour of temperance?"

The foregoing statements show what kind of a temperance candidate Mr. Soden would make.

Mr. Rowell On Thursday

Opera House Will Be Crowded on Occasion of Leader's Visit

It is expected that the Grand Opera House will be crowded to its utmost capacity on Thursday night when Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, as well as leader of the fight against the drink evil, will address the electors. The greatest interest is being shown in the appearance here of Mr. Rowell and a treat is assured all who attend. The Liberal leader is a magnetic speaker and he has a fascinating message to bring before the people of the district. Mr. George A. Gillespie will also address the meeting, as will other speakers. The place—the Grand Opera House.

CELEBRATED THEIR SILVER WEDDING

On Wednesday evening, June 10th, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Ridyard, 26 Park Street, celebrated their silver wedding in fitting style. About 20 guests were present, and Mr. and Mrs. Ridyard were the recipients of many congratulations from Moose Jaw, Calgary, as well as of handsome gifts. After a dainty supper, songs and solos were given and the party broke up at midnight.

Mr. and Mrs. Ridyard were married in Bootle, Liverpool, England, on June 10th, 1889, by the Rev. George Scott.

LOCAL BOY APPOINTED

Mr. Ross L. Dobbin is the New Superintendent of the Peterboro' Waterworks Department

HAS HAD EXPERIENCE

Many friends in the City will be pleased to learn of the appointment of Mr. Ross L. Dobbin, son of Ald. F. H. Dobbin, by the local Public Utilities Commission to the position of superintendent of the waterworks of this City. He has latterly been in charge of the putting up of the steel work on the big Royal Bank building in Toronto, at the corner of King and Yonge Streets, the highest building in the British Empire, and the only one in Canada of at all similar proportions. Previous to this he was engaged in the construction of the Moose Jaw water supply system, that city expending nearly half a million dollars to secure water. Mr. Dobbin had charge of the construction of the head works, reservoir and pumping station and the mains laying for a distance of eighteen miles, completing the work in two years and finishing December last. He will begin his new duties early next week.

The appointment was made by the Public Utilities Commission at its meeting yesterday.

FISHING SEASON OPENED TO-DAY

The fishing season opened auspiciously this morning and although the weather was cold and a heavy wind blowing over the lake and river, a regular flotilla of all kind of craft was to be seen. The strikes this morning were few. Among those who were successful in landing some nice lunge were Messrs. A. Knott, Rogers Street, J. Stevenson, the inventor of the basswood canoe, and Mr. Windsor, Fishery Inspector. Others were caught, but about 10 fish would be the limit.

A fine bass was caught off the Hunter Street bridge at noon to-day.

APSLEY NEWS

APSLEY, June 15.—A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday last when Miss Katie Woodbeck and Mr. Morley Nickleson were joined in Holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony took place at the residence of Mr. Duncan Brown, of Apsley, and was performed by the Presbyterian minister of Apsley. The happy couple left on Thursday for their home in Oak Lake, where they will reside in future. Their many friends wish them many happy days.

Mr. Daniel Whitmore has erected a new fence.

If any person can tell any remedy for grubs I wish they would let those that are being nearly eaten up know. They are making short work of potatoes and corn and carrots, and beets never see the light of day at all.

Miss Ellwood Nesbitt, was in town on Friday last.

There were numbers of children christened at Grace Church on Sunday last by Rev. Mr. Prosser, of Apsley.

There is every prospect of a grand picnic in Methuen on the 24th of June.

HAVELOCK LACROSSE TEAM ON FRIDAY

Mr. Frank Doyle, Secretary of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, will referee Friday's game here with Havelock. He will officiate in Hastings to-morrow in the game with Campbellford, and how these towns love one another, Mr. Doyle will have his hands full there. The Havelock game with the Petes will be played at 4.45 o'clock, and it is believed a big attendance will be out to see the game. The blue and white showed class when they put it over Hastings and if the same team works they will give Havelock a run for their money.

EMPRESS INQUIRY WAS COMMENCED THIS MORNING

All the Interested Parties Were Represented When Lord Mersey's Court Was Opened at Quebec To-day

SCENE A GRAVE ONE

Examiner Special:

"COURT HOUSE," Quebec., June 16.—Shortly after ten o'clock the inquiry into the Empress of Ireland disaster opened in the court house today. The scene in the court room was impressive in its gravity. The three members of the Commission, Lord Mersey, Judge Routhier and Judge McLeod, with assessors, seven in all, filled the judical bench. Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was also present. The well of the court was filled with attorneys and counsel. The Federal Government, the C.P.R., the officers and engineers of the Empress, the owners and officers of the Storstad, the Dominion Coal Company, the Sailors' and Firemen's Union of Great Britain and Ireland also had its representatives. The proceedings opened with the formal reading of the Commission. L. E. Newcombe, K.C., for the Dominion government, then gave an outline of the accident.

QUEBEC, Que., June 16.—Captain Kendall related his story of his own whistles and the Storstad's whistles before the collision. But somehow or other there was a misunderstanding. Seeing a collision inevitable he said he ordered First Officer Jones to get out boats and call all hands. He shouted through a megaphone to the Storstad's captain to keep his vessel in the hole in the Empress' side. He ordered all bulkheads closed.

Lord Mersey—"That was after the ships struck?"

Captain Kendall—"Yes."

Kendall said he telegraphed to the engine room to make all speed ahead with the object of beaching his ship, but he received word that all the steam was gone. The engines and bulkheads had been put out of action by the shock of the collision.

Kendall said he dropped his pilot at Father Point. The weather was fine and clear.

It took several several hours for the lawyers of the various interests to make statements. Lord Mersey ruled out much of what was said as irrelevant, and showed some impatience to get down to the witnesses and their evidence. He declined to accede to adjournments and asked that the witnesses be called. Captain Kendall was first. He limped badly and was given a seat in the witness box. Captain Kendall said he had held Master's Certificate for twelve years. Four of his six Navigating Officers also held Master's certificates. Kendall said he was on the bridge, himself from the time the vessel left Quebec till the collision occurred, except when he went below to get a cup of tea. Between Quebec and Father Point they ran into a fog bank and reduced speed and got safely through.

"And from this time onward you having dropped your pilot, did you remain in charge of your vessel?"

"I did. On the bridge was myself, First Officer Jones, Third Officer Moore, the Quartermaster at the wheel, a quartermaster standing by and the messenger."

"Of these six who were on the bridge, how many have been saved?"

"Three."

"There is yourself?"

"Yes, the first officer and one quartermaster."

SHOULD LEARN TO SWIM WELL

That Is the Great Lesson Taught the People of Canada by the Empress Disaster

DR. GRANT'S REMARKS

Special to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, June 16 — "The great lesson taught the people of Canada by the Empress of Ireland disaster is obvious," said Dr. Grant, the doctor on the Empress on her last voyage. "Every boy and girl in the Dominion who cannot swim should be taught in connection with the Public school and should also be given a course in life saving. Hundreds of those who perished in the icy waters of the St. Lawrence would have been saved had they been able to keep above the water for a few moments." Dr. Grant arrived in Quebec last evening to give evidence at the inquiry into the disaster being conducted by the Royal Commission.

MRS. STEVENS WILL SPEAK ON TEMPERANCE

Mrs. E. A. Stevens, provincial president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union will address the ladies of Peterborough in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, on the temperance question. A large audience will undoubtedly hear Mrs. Stevens.

The Prime of Life.

A Chicago man, a leader in the mommercial life of that city, is quoted as saying: "Among the men I hire nine out of ten are better workers at 45 years of age than are the men of 28 or 30." This man firmly believes that the man of 45 or thereabouts is at the prime of life, physically and mentally. He also holds that men of mature years are more reliable and less apt to become restless after a year or two in a position and to seek new fields. The average young man, he says, is seeking a "soft snap" and is not the sort of employee who will stick to his employer through thick and thin until his services become highly valuable and in many cases indispensable. We often hear young men complain of their inability to get settled. That is largely because they do not settle, do not seek to adjust themselves to their work and make the most of their opportunity. Opportunity seldom knocks at our doors. We must knock at the door of opportunity and be prepared to push the door a little if necessary.

ROWELL AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Daily and hourly developments in this riding and in the province give increased importance, magified momentum and intenser interest to the campaign Mr. N. W. Rowell and his supporters are waging to put the province on a higher plane.

Therefore local interest deepens in the matter of his coming to Peterborough. Men and women in hundreds will want to hear the man, whose ears must burn; for he is the most discussed, the most talked of man in Ontario to-day—bulks most largely in the public eye and in the eyes of both friends and opponents.

Mr. Rowell will be at the Opera House on Thursday night, June 18th, which will no doubt be thronged with expectant hundreds. Thursday night, June 18th, is the ninety-ninth anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo; but if we can judge by the trend of events at home and throughout the province, the date of Mr. Rowell's visit here will not be prophetic of his Waterloo, but of the Waterloo of the licensed bar and reactionary political forces and influences. Go early, if you want a seat to hear Rowell and Gillespie his candidate in this riding.

MORE CONSISTENCY.

Sir James Whitney has set his face like flint against tax reform. He even won't allow municipalities to decide for themselves how they shall impose taxes. He denies them the right to assess lands at a higher rate than improvements, so that the working man who wishes to build a house of his own won't be fined by burdensome taxation while vacant lands, his building improves, escape fair taxation.

His refusal to grant this great reform has been condemned by prominent Conservative journals and great statesmen. Mr. J. N. Burnham uttered these words in condemnation of Sir James Whitney's attitude:

"If Sir James Whitney realized that to take off the tax on buildings meant the virtual obliteration of the slums; if he knew that much of the two per cent. of the municipal tax would go to the tenant of the tenement, he might talk less about wrecking homes by tax reform. But he will neither do it, nor allow those who pay the taxes to do it."

But when party interest intervenes and he has a chance to penalize the Whitney Government for its obstinate attitude to tax reform, Mr. Burnham mounts the platform and preaches his best to retain the man and government he condemns. But we don't expect consistency from Mr. Burnham and we are not disappointed.

He can consistently be inconsistent when he appears in support of Mr. Soden, who is courting the support of the temperance party and the liquor interests at the same time. He is the candidate of a keep-the-bar government and asks support from the temperance party that wants the bar removed.

So Mr. Burnham is gauging his eccentricities to those of the man he supports. Mr Soden and Sir James Whitney oppose tax reform. Mr. Burnham favours it; yet he is fighting to help two men who oppose what he supports. Sir James opposes the policy of the abolition of the bar and favours anti-treating, which he refuses to enact. Mr. Burnham supports him in this by helping to return a supporter of Sir James with a policy of abolition of the bar and every form of the traffic.

THE PULPIT AND POLITICS

No wonder Hon Mr Duff, Minister in the Whitney Cabinet, thinks it a degradation for ministers to mix in politics. Especially in this campaign, where the moral issue is supreme, the minister, as the custodian of morals, and spiritual expert in morals, has a right, has a duty to be in the thick of it.

There is no more odious and destructive doctrine held or promulgated than that religion, and what it represents, is a thing to be confined to the church walls; that ministers, who see their flocks, or parts of their flocks, swept downward by the drift of the drink avalanche, becomes degraded when he steps out of his pulpit to fight the power of drink upon its own ground—the political arena.

The mightiest influence against the Church and its work in regenerating and upifting mankind—is the drink traffic, a political creation legalized by solemn act of political bodies; kept in being, kept in commission, kept in perpetual fighting and destroying condition by political bodies

When a Government shares the profits of the drink traffic and becomes an actual business partner in the unrighteous business, it seems to be time that the moral element of the state, the custodian of national morals—the Gospel ministry—should rise in its wrath to end the unholy compact.

The present Government, like preceding governments, maintains the liquor traffic as a national institution — sheltered, protected, fostered, licensed—a condition, judging by the fruits of the traffic, no less illogical and iniquitous than licensing piracy, prostitution or highway robbery.

We have become so accustomed to this condition that we have, some of us, ceased to be shocked by its monstrous inconsistency. We have come to regard the money derived from license fees, as legitimate spoil; but when a Government actually enters into partnership with the traffic and passes a law, as the present Government has done, demanding a share of the "swag" in the name of the people—a share of the money paid ove the bar—money misspent, that represents the degradation of manhood, the bread of chidren, and even the boots of the babies—when a government passes a law to do this—forces churches and congregations to be partners in the traffic, a minister of the Gospel is recreant to his trust, if he fails to enter a conflict where is involved the perpetuation of a demoralizing influence that, more than any one other thing, neutralizes the influence of the Church, and drowns the voice of the pulpit.

The issue involved in this contest is a political issue forced upon the people, forced upon the pulpit. The elector who thinks, who can feel and reason, who believes in Christianity and the Church, will not blame his pastor if he takes his place alongside of pastors in other places, who have ranged themselves in line with the moral forces that are fighting for the policy of abolish the bar. He will be interested in reading, in another column, the opinion of clergymen who are on the platform of, and with, Rowell candidates.

The good Christian, regarding his consicence and his moral obligations, cannot afford to be neutral, not to speak of antagonising the proposal to wipe out the traffic in strong drink. We shall find no friend of the liquor traffic splitting hairs and scraping heaven and earth as with a fine-tooth comb, to find excuses for not voting against his party. Every one of them, Grit and Tory, will stand by the bar and vote for the bar. Can any man, who believes in the immense moral uplift implied in the abolition of the bar, afford to line up at the polling booth in company with the supporters of the traffic? He must do one thing or the other—either vote against the drink traffic or for it.

No matter what excuses the enemy of all good may suggest, the duty of the good man, the good father, the good head of a family, as hundreds in this riding and contest see it, is plain. The matter is between him and his conscience; and if he goes against his conscience, on some frivolous excuse, he will do so in view of this divine declaration:

Judgment will I also lay to the line and righteousness to the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies and the waters shall overflow the hiding place.

ROWELL'S POLICY MEETS DEMAND OF TEMPERANCE MEN

Rowell's "Abolish-the-Bar" Policy an Answer to the Full Demand of Advanced Temperance Interests

The Presbyterian of this week, after referring to the condition of things as affecting temperance in this province, after the Ross referendum, says:

"The terms of the referendum not having been fulfilled, the government felt itself free from obligation to pass a prohibitory law. But there was a widespread feeling that so large a vote with so decisive a majority constituted a clear mandate for a long step in advance. A large conference, representing all sections of the province and varying shades of temperance opinion, met in Knox church, Toronto, at the end of December, and the following resolution, moved by the Rev. Dr. Carman and seconded by Principal Caven, was carried with the utmost heartiness.

"That in view of the recent expression by the electors of the province of Ontario in favour of the Liquor Act of 1902, we deem it advisable to appoint a deputation to wait upon the government and request that effect be given to the said vote by the abolition of the public bar, the treating system, and drinking in clubs, and the imposition of such other restrictions on the liquor traffic as shall most effectively curtail its operation and remedy its evils."

The resolution so passed was taken up in substance by the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance and embodied in its platform. It was approved by the highest courts of the religious denominations. We quote from two deliverances. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church, while affirming its belief that total prohibition must be the goal of temperance reform, recommended as a step thereto "the abolishment of the bar-room (i.e., the sale for consumption on the premises), and the public treating system associated therewith." A report from the committee on temperance adopted by the General Synod of the Anglican church says: "In glancing over the several provinces of the Dominion, it is manifest that there is a great consensus of opinion concerning the bar under our present licensing system, namely, that it is a public menace, and your committee would urge upon the Synod that it is the duty of every man to endeavour to further the effort to abolish the bar."

Mr. N. W. Rowell, as leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, has accepted the platform which was set forth and confirmed as we have just stated. In the forefront of his programme stands "the immediate abolition of the bar, including therein the abolition of all hotel and club licenses and therewith the treating system." And now Mr. Rowell issues this challenge:

"If the organized temperance forces of this province, if the Christian churches of Ontario, really want the bar to go, they can say so on the 29th of June. If the bar does not go, where does the responsibility rest?"

To that challenge there can be but one answer. Those who believe that the liquor traffic, whose stronghold is the licensed bar, is a menace and a curse, those who accept, on moral issues, the leadership of the Christian Church, are bound to vote only for candidates who can be relied upon to support such legislation as Mr. Rowell has pledged himself to enact.

In the above, the Presbyterian fully and satisfactorily answers the charge that the "abolition of the bar" is an election cry, and shows that Mr. Rowell has merely answered the challenge of the Christian churches and of the highest temperance organizations in taking the course he has. Sir James Whitney had a chance to introduce the legislation asked for and take the question out of politics, but refused to do so. Mr. Rowell has taken the friends of temperance at their word, and it is up to them either to make good or be forever discredited.

Renewed Vigor In Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes: — "At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. THAT MONSTROUS MAP MISREPRESENTATION

A Falsified Map Prepared, Published and Paraded, on Keep-the-Bar Platforms, to State and Show a Lie as to What the "False" Friends of Temperance Have Done

Liberal and Temperance candidates and workers throughout the Province should take advantage of every opportunity during the next two weeks of exposing what Mr. Ben Spence calls the "monstrous absurdity of a map issued by the Government to prove how much greater the progress of temperance reform has been under Whitney than under the former Administration. It can be clearly demonstrated that the map is most misleading and deceptive. Once the electors understand this the faked map will become one of the strongest arguments that could be urged in favour of a change of Government. The men who sanctioned the preparation and distribution of the monstrous map did so with intent to deceive, and are not worthy of the trust of the people of Ontario.

Here are the facts as to the fraud. In the first part of the map we are shown Ontario at the end of Liberal rule, with the wet areas shaded and the dry left white. Practically the whole Province is "wet." There are only 23 small dry areas in the map, and this is supposed to represent the condition of affairs when Sir James Whitney came into office. Mr. Spence states that there are actually 184 dry municipalities in Ontario when the Whitney Government was formed. So determined was the draftsman to make a bad showing for the Liberals that he shaded even Algonquin Park, the great national playground in the North in which no licenses ever existed, (and in the map showing the gain of dry area under the Whitney government it is shown as white.)

Another glaring example is ePterborough county, which was largely "dry" in 1905, but which is shown as "wet." The same sort of gross misrepresentation has taken place in regard to other counties all over the Province, and men who know the facts as to the dry areas prior to 1905 can easily pick out their own localities and prove that the map lies.

But the deceit exercised in making what ought to be white black in the first map is not a whit worse than the ingenuity displayed in making black white in the second. Great areas are indicated as dry in which there are numerous licenses. The trick has been wrought by suppressing all indication of licenses other than township licenses. Mr. Spence points out that no way has been taken of showing on the white squares the scores of licenses that exist in villages and other municipalities within the townships. There are 114 such municipalities in Ontario with over 400 licenses that one would suppose to be non-existent were the map to be taken as a guide.

The Province has been flooded with copies of the deceiving map. It can be turned into most effective campaign material against those who are responsible for it. Let Liberal and Temperance speakers hammer home the fact that from 1906 to 1913 the people in local option, Scott Act and license reduction contests voted out 872 licenses, and that during the same period the License Commissioners of the Whitney Government, so far from aiding in this reduction, increased the number of bars by 95. This is the real record of the Government as indicated in the official returns of licenses in force. Ontario is not almost all "dry" as the second map falsely shows. There are 1,300 bars still open in the Province and 223 liquor shops. Every one of the 1,300 will be closed if Rowell becomes the Premier of Ontario. The opportunity is great. The matter is upon the conscience of the people —upon your conscience as an elector. Will your vote be cast for the retention of the 1,300 bars or for the protection of the thousands of boys who every year take their first drink at the bar? The bar or the boy. That is the issue.—Globe.

OLD ENGLISH RHUBARB PUDDING.

Make a suet crust with one cupful of nicely chopped beef suet, a pinch of salt and two cups of flour tossed well together. Then mix with just enough water to make a dough. Do not handle much. Roll into a sheet, line a buttered baking dish with the dough, reserving enough to cover the top. Wash, wipe and pare off the outside skin from six stalks of rhubarb, and cut into small pieces. Fill the basin with the suet, strewing a cup of moist sugar through it. Cover with the crust, pinching the edges together, tie up in a cloth, well floured inside, put into a deep saucepan and boil for two and a half hours continuously, or place in a steamer and steam for two hours, first cutting a hole in the middle of the top crust to allow the steam to escape. When done, turn from the basin and serve with sugar or a hard sauce as you prefer.

Plum Preserves.

Select ten pounds of firm, ripe plums; put the plums over the fire in a preserving kettle; cover with water, and when the boiling point is reached remove from the juice and drain. To the water and juice add ten pounds of brown sugar; boil until a thick syrup is formed; then add the plums and boil half an hour. Seal while hot.

Steamed Rhubarb.

Wash and cut the rhubarb into inch pieces without peeling. Put it into a granite double boiler, add one cup of sugar for a pint of fruit, and cook till the rhubarb is soft. Do not stir it. In case the rhubarb is very sour, steam it without sugar until the juice flows; then drain it, add the sugar and steam again till the sugar is dissolved. Or pour boiling water over it and let it stand five minutes, then drain and steam.

BAKED RHUBARB.

Wash and peel the stalks and cut in inch pieces, place in a covered bean pot, sprinkling each layer well with white sugar, allowing at least a cup to a quart of rhubarb. Bake in moderately hot oven about an hour and a half.

PEACH BUTTER.

Pare and cut into thin slices fully ripe, freestone peaches of good flavour; put on to boil in a third of a cupful of cold water to one pound of fruit; boil until soft, stirring and mashing all the time. Add three-fourths pound of sugar to one pound of fruit, weighed before boiling. Cook the butter until it will adhere to an inverted plate when cold. It must be stirred all the time, as it burns very easily. This can be put in most anything you have convenient, as it does not have to be air tight

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

CLERGY ON PLATFORM OF ROWELL CANDIDATES

Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist Ministers Speak Strongly Against the Bar--Enthusiastic Meeting in Northwest Toronto.

No wonder Mr. Duff, Minister of Agriculture, speaking in the Opera House, declared that the usefulness of a minister of the Gospel was gone when he entered politics. A minister of the Gospel, Rev. John Coburn, of Toronto, a Conservative and an Orangeman, is opposing Hon. Mr. Duff in West Simcoe, as a candidate of the Rowell policy, "abolish the bar."

Here is a report showing how other ministers of the Gospel in Toronto stand upon the supreme issue in this election:

"Conservatives are in the majority in Toronto; they are in the majority in the Methodist Church in Toronto, and they are in the majority in my own church; yet I have met very few men who have not given me the definite assurance that they are going to support Mr. Rowell, and, if not, they at least will refrain from voting at all."—Rev. A. Hone, pastor of Pauline Avenue Methodist Church.

"Though the first vote I ever cast was for a Liberal candidate, not all my votes were such. By my vote I helped to create the Whitney Government, and I realize that now the time has come to once more send a great political party into the cold shades of Opposition, that it may there learn British and democratic principles. I intend to ask my people of the Baptist Church if, on that day, they wish to stand with Mr. Rowell's opponents—with the brewers, the distillers, the saloonkeepers, the bartenders and the white slavers."—Rev. Mr. McLean, pastor Ossington Avenue Baptist Church.

"I want to assure Mr. McTaggart and Mr. Farmer that they can depend upon the Church vote in this campaign.

"The patriotism that breaks into cheering at some jingoistic utterance and then goes and marks its ballot for the retention of liquor in this Province is a patriotism that is not an asset to any Province.

"I have given you some of the reasons why, on June 29, I shall cast against Sir Jame Whitney the first vote I have ever cast in a Provincial election."—Rev. R. B. Whyte, assistant pastor West Presbyterian Vhurch.

One of the most significant meetings held in connection with Mr. Rowell's campaign anywhere in Ontario was the rally held last Saturday evening in Sovereign Hall on Dovercourt Road, Toronto. Though advertised as one of campaign meetings of Messrs. Farmer and McTaggart, Liberal candidates in Northwest Toronto, it resolved itself into an occasion for the formal declaration by prominent clergymen of the part to be played in the coming contest by three of the great Protestant bodies. In a very clarion call to combat, these three gentlemen, in earnest impassioned eloquence, threw down the gage of battle to those allied interests working against a Liberal victory in the constituency in question. There were no carefully-couched expressions of opinion, no platitudes, no compromising conditions; in plain terms that drew forth rounds of cheering three ministers of the Gospel pledged to Mr. N. W. Rowell and his candidates the votes and influence of three great denominations.

Where the Methodists Stand.

Rev. A. Hone, pastor of Pauline Avenue Methodist Church, was in the chair, and explained his reasons for being there in short order. He had, he said, the endorsation of the Methodist Church at large. He held in his hands the resolutions passed at the various Conferences, urging ministers of his Church to take an active part in bringing about the abolition of the bar. He had the endorsation of the Christian Church in Canada, and he had to encourage him the presence in the field as candidates of five ministers of the Gospel. Finally, he had for his supreme reason the fact that he was supporting the forces that, in a similar fight in His time, would have been led by the Master of men.

Reforms Preserved in Alcohol.

Then came Rev. Malcolm C. MacLean, pastor of Ossington Avenue Baptist Church. He regarded the present issue as, primarily, a moral one, and as such it demanded his activity. He had gone time and again on deputations to the Whitney Government, and had been received with barely scant courtesy.

"Where is the Whitney amendment providing for the abolition of the treating system?" asked Mr. MacLean. "We never heard of it again."

A voice: "You never will."

"No, it occurs to me that it has been preserved in alcohol. (Laughter and cheers.) I wonder who provided the alsohol?"

"The biggest issue for me in this campaign," he continued, "as the father of three growing boys, as a churchman, and as a man, who, I trust, by precept and act is setting an example to those who have fallen or have been tempted—the biggest issue for me, I say, is the issue of temperance."

What the Bar Does.

With eloquence such as is seldom heard on platform or in pulpit, Rev. R. B. Whyte, the youthful assistant from West Presbyterian Church, delivered a ringing address that fairly brought his hearers to their feet ere he had concluded. H came, he said, not to tune his remarks to the harmonies of any political machine, but to speak in the language of humanity. "As I was coming home on the car to-day with my Sunday school boys, coming back from a baseball match," he said, "four intoxicated men boarded the car. The moment they sat down a tremour ran through that car. Every father listened in anxiety lest his little boy should hear from the mouths of those men foul and blasphemous language; every lover blushed lest his sweetheart should be forced to listen to obscenity or filth. That, gentleman, is one reason why, on June 29, I got to cast against Sir James Whitney the first vote I have ever cast in a Provincial election.

"We hear sometimes that this is a political dodge, that the Liberal party is not sincere. Charles Doughty, a Conservative, pledged himself to support temperance; he was immediately read out of the Conservative party. Gustave Evanturel, a Liberal, pledged himself to the liquor interests; he was immediately read out of the Liberal party. What more evidence do we want?

Not Mere Stage Play.

"Thanks to the Liberal party in this Province," continued Mr. Whyte, "the temperance platform is not a place for mere stage-play, but a house of real life. As such, the Church must and will support it.

"It is a shame, if it be true, that there are some ministers in Ontario to-day unable to take an active part in this campaign because, forsooth, they are afraid of offending the interests of some members of their church. The Church, I believe, has arisen to a proper sense of her duty to the Liberal party, which is the temperance party in this instance. Temperance people have long prayed for a leader. Mr. Rowell is that leader, and it is up to the Church to stand by him."—Globe.

ONE MAN ONE VOTE.

Plural Voting Bill Gets Third Reading For Second Time.

LONDON, June 16. — The plural voting bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons last night by a vote of 320 to 243.

This bill was first introduced in April, 1913, and after passing its third reading was rejected in the House of Lords by a majority of 124. The bill passed its first reading for the second time last March. It embodies the principle of "one man one vote," and provides that before a general election a plural voter must select which of his votes he wishes to register.

MANY NEW MOTOR BOATS IN STONY LAKE THIS SEASON

Stony Lake will see a larger number of motor boats this year than before. A few owners have exchanged their old craft for newer and speedier ones, but the great majority of new boats will be in the hands of new owners.

They will gather experience as they go, unless they go too fast. Stony Lake has always been, as it were, a grave of shattered hopes, particularly to the novice, for no sooner does he begin the gentle art of "showing off," than from somewhere below the placid bosom of the lake a huge rock suddenly rises in his path, and, for a time at least, the new-comer remains quite "stuck up."

A couple of years ago a party of Americans were scudding along in their swell launch below "Catamaran" and soon bore down on the four-buoy channel (then without buoys). Everything was going along merrily, when lo! the bow gave a heave, the women gave a scream, the engine gave a squeak, and all was quietness — as silent as a funeral. The man at the wheel gradually "came to," and calmly surveyed the chalky faces of his once happy companions. Rising gently from his seat he peered over the elevated nose in front of him, and with a deep sigh remarked: "What a careless place to leave a rock!"

* * * * *

I am sure those who are new at the game will appreciate the following pointers:

When purchasing a motor boat do not fail to get all the tools you ever heard of—you may need them—the goodwill of the former owner or manufacturer — you cannot tell how ugly an engine can become — and above all the language necessary to run her, for unless you utter the right incantations at the right time the perky engine may not start.

A well chosen vocabulary is very essential if you would impress the looker-on, besides many words of the spicey kind will sometimes act as a good lubricant—in fact some particularly hot words have been known to do instead of fuel, especially when spelled into the gasoline tank.

Get several books on "How to Run a Motor Boat," and talk wise, especially in the presence of a small boy lest he put you down as a retired chauffeur of a vacuum cleaner.

Study the difference between a common rudder and one of the two-phase type.

Don't buy too large a boat, for after jogging around Stony Lake, if you take her down to Peterborough she may look like an ocean liner cut down to fit the river.

If you have any doubts about the crankiness of your engine be sure you take a nurse along—you may need her—many Peterborough young men do.

Above all, don't fail to get on good terms with the crank. It resembles the power plant of a cream separator. It is the same shape as that long crooked thing that hangs from the lower lip of an automobile—and is used for the same purpose—to hit beginners on the head when they try it with it.

Whatever you fail to do, master the starting of your engine, don't worry over the stopping, that will come soon enough.

PRINCE IS VICTORIOUS

PRINCE IS VICTORIOUS.

Albanian Ruler Personally Heads Government Forces.

DURAZZO, Albania, June 16.—Albanian Government troops, under the personal leadership of Prince William, yesterday repulsed a strong attack on the Albanian capital by Musoulman insurgents.

At the outset of the fighting the insurgents gained an advantageous position, but after Col. Thomson, the Dutch commander of the gendarmerie, had been killed, Prince William placed himself at the head of the defenders, who succeeded in silencing the rifle and military fire of their attacking force after three hours' fighting.

Score of People Lose Their Lives

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 16.—It is believed that a score of people lost their lives in the cavern of the big sewer when several houses and a church dropped into the abyss during a terrific rain storm. Ten persons were caught under the eaves of the church of St. Phillipe when it went through to destruction. Two hundred rescuers are at work this morning, and have recovered some bodies. All are horribly mangled.

Seven Are Burned To Death

Examiner Special:

MILLFORD, Mass., June 16.—Seven men were burned to death, three more are dying and several others badly hurt, following a fire in a tinder box boarding house here. Most of them were killed from jumping from a second storey window.

Many Precautions Against Suffs

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., June 6.—Never before have such precautions been taken to guard the members of the Royal family from the attacks of militant suffragettes as were taken to-day at the Ascot race course. Upwards of 1,000 men of the Metropolitan police and hundreds of detectives from Scotland Yard assembled on the historic course as reinforcements for the regular Berkshire police.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

A Variety of Cases Were Heard This Morning

In this morning's Police Court Joseph Sheardon, who came here on a holiday, was found drunk, and told to get out of town.

Mr. R. Turner had to appear in Court this morning for running his automobile through Bowmanville the other evening just at dark without having his lights turned on. The case comes up at Bowmanville on Friday.

The Fishery Inspector made an inspection of the hotels this week to see if any fish were being used which were caught out of season and as a result Mr. Frank Montgomery was fined $10 and costs for obtaining fish illegally caught.

Stephen Dempsey and Patrick Nolan, who blew into the City from nowhere were charged with being drunk but were let off so that they could betake themselves to other regions.

John Carey of the 45th Regiment of Lindsay became intoxicated while in the City and was charged with being drunk. He will join his Regiment to-day at Petawawa.

BETTER LUCK NEXT TIME

Italian Revolution Only a Rehearsal Say Organizers.

ROME, June 16.—The press generally, reviewing the risings which have occurred throughout Italy, concludes that these wer not due merely to the excitement of the moment, but constituted a regularly planned political revolution, which succeeded for forty-eight hours, in a somewhat grotesque manner, but was sufficiently grave to cause not only very considerable material damage, but enormous moral injury, and it resulted in overthrowing the authority of the state.

Those responsible for the revolutionary movement in Romagna which includes the Provinces of Bologna, Ferrara, Ravenna and Forli, now declare that the events of the past week have only been a general rehearsal and that the first presentation of the revolutionary drama will be given soon and will "go" better.

Gun-Running is Illegal.

DUBLIN, June 16.—By a majority of two to one the judges of the King's Bench Court yesterday decided that the Government's proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms into Ireland was valid.

This judgment reverses the decision of the assize court of Belfast, which on March 25 declared the proclamation invalid because the Act of Union provided that all subjects have the same privileges in respect of trade.

Little Hope for Krafchenko.

OTTAWA, June 16. — The review of the evidence in the capital case of Jack Krafchenko, at Winnipeg, has been completed by P. M. Cote, K.C., legal officer of the Justice Department. It is the most voluminous case ever reviewed, comprising 1,604 pages of evidence. It is extremely improbable that there will be any interference with the death sentence

ENQUIRY IS OPENED

Army of Persons Interested in Wreck Probe Invade Quebec

TWO POINTS ARE AT ISSUE

QUEBEC, June 16.—Preparations were completed yesterday for the enquiry by the commission appointed by the Dominion Government into the wreck of the Empress of Ireland on May 29, near Father Point, in the St. Lawrence, when over 1,000 lives were lost. The enquiry will take place in the court-house, which was yesterday morning crowded with newspaper men, telegraph operators, and Government officials making arrangements for the handling of their various duties, which began to-day.

So far as can be gathered, popular opinion seems to favor the side of the Empress, and the bulk of expert opinion that of the Storstad. Although the representatives of the latter were reticent, it is the general idea that they consider they have a strong case. There are probably two main points on which interest will centre, these being the question of the international rules governing the prevention of collisions, and the action taken by the captain of the Storstad subsequent to the calamity.

It is understood that on both these points the representatives of the Storstad owners think that they have a strong case. It is said that their contention will be that when the Empress of Ireland and the Storstad first sighted each other the latter was off the starboard bow of the C. P. R. liner and that therefore, according to the rules of the road at sea, the Empress was bound to keep out of the Storstad's way. That is to say, she was bound to keep her course, passing port to port and red light to red light. Instead of that, it is said the Storstad struck the Empress on the starboard, or green light, and therefore the onus of proof is likely to be on the owners of the Empress.

As for the charge that the Storstad drew away after the fatal accident, the opposing story will in all likelihood take the form that the Norwegian collier kept her engines going full speed ahead in order to fill the gap, but that the rate of speed at which the Empress was going swung the boat that rammed her around and wrenches the Storstad's bow out of the hole which she had made. It is argued that the condition of the Storstad's stem will corroborate this theory. Emphasis may also be laid on the fact that the faster boat, the Empress, was going down stream and the collier coming up.

As to the events following the collision, the representatives of the collier may put up the plea that when she was forced out of the rent in the side of the Empress she naturally dropped astern a little and for a few moments lost sight of the stricken vessel. It is presumed that witnesses will be brought to testify that after this the Storstad heard the cries of the drowning and whistled repeatedly to the Empress but could get no reply, probably because steam was shut off as a result of the accident, and further that the boats were immediately lowered while the Norwegian boat backed down to the wreck to help in the rescue work.

Lord Mersey and the other commissioners and assessors except Judge Routhier, who lives in this city, arrived here yesterday afternoon on the Sir Hugh Allan, the Montreal harbor commission boat which reached here between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

About eighty witnesses in all will appear before the commission, subpoenaed by both sides.

It is also considered possible that Mrs. Andersen, wife of the captain, may be called, besides a number of Empress' passengers whom the Storstad counsel are said to have in reserve, but who have not been subpoenaed as yet.

Children's Orchestra Recital

A most enjoyable and unique recital was given in the Conservatory Hall last evening when the children's orchestra of the Conservatory of Music entertained a large audience in a varied programme. The children's orchestra is a novel feature of the work of the local Conservatory, and affords the children an excellent opportunity for the study of music. The organization meets on Saturday mornings for rehearsal, under the direction of Mr. Rupert Gliddon, assisted by Miss Palmer and Miss Logan. The educational value of such an institution is readily recognised. Already the orchestra has achieved a marked degree of efficiency and their numbers last night demonstrated what capable painstaking teaching can accomplish. The orchestra has a membership of twenty-five and their playing leaves little to be desired. Their opening number, "Gloria in Excelsis" from Haydn's "First Mass," an ambitious offering for such a young organization, was charmingly played and was perhaps the feature of their programme.

In addition to the numbers by the orchestra, there was a splendid list of instrumental selections by individual members of the orchestra, all of whom acquitted themselves in a manner that indicated not only personal talent, but also clever teaching. A notable offering was the double number by the instrumental quintette, by Agnes Logan, Alexis Spellman, Otto Gliddon, Paul Gliddon and Bernard Park.

Following was the programme:

"Gloria in Excelsis" ..... Haydn
Children's Orchestra

Piano—Sonatina, Op. 36 (No. 1) Clementi
Mary Elizabeth Wright

Violin—"Boat Song" ..... Vogt
Harold Porter

Piano—"Pixie's Gavotte" ..... Brown

Piano—"Doll's Dream" ..... Oesten
Alice Cox

Clarinette—"Traumerei" ..... Schumann
Orville Crowe

Piano—"La Fontaine" ..... Bohm
Dorothy Ferguson

(a) "Slumber Sweetly" ..... Beaumont
(b) "Incline Thine Ear to Me" Himmel
Children's Orchestra

Piano—"Revery" .....
Margery Crowe

Piano—"Tarantelle" ..... Heller
Grant Braund

Cornet—"Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" ..... Feuris
Paul Gliddon

Piano—Sonatina, Op. 55 (No. 3) Kulauh
Bregetta Conroy

"Au Revoir" ..... Lichner
Children's Orchestra

Violin—"Serenade Badine" ..... Gabriel-Marie
Baden Greene

Piano—"Valse Chromatique" ..... Godard
Isobel Baird

Cello—"Simple Aveu" ..... Thome
Alexis Spellman

Clarinette—"Long, Long Ago" .....
Otto Gliddon

Piano—Variations ..... Beethoven
Agnes Logan

GIVE THE CREDIT WHERE THE CREDIT IS DUE

Peterborough, June 15, 1914.

The Examiner, City.

Dear Sirs,—I noticed in a recent edition of the Review, that Mayor Butler says the Government has done a great deal for Peterborough. I beg to say, that if it had not been for the Liberal members of the House, that the City of Peterborough would never have passed its Expropriation Bill in 1913, as the five Liberal members who voted for it were sufficient to make a majority, and Adam Beck was not able to control the Conservative line up. It would be well for Mayor Butler to remember this when he is telling the great good which has been done by the Conservative party for Peterborough.

It was the Liberals this time who gave them the municipal lighting plant and not the Conservatives alone.—Yours truly,

Opening of the Peterboro' Offices of the Capital Life Assurance Co'y of Canada

Peterborough has been chosen as one of the district agencies for the Capital Life Assurance Company, of Canada, and central and convenient offices have been opened out at No. 384 Water street, with Mr. W. J. Kennedy in charge.

Mr. Kennedy has been representing the company in Peterborough for the past two months, and during that shortp eriod, has met with such encouragement as to justify sanguine expectations for excellent business for this company.

Mr. Kennedy organized the Brandon district in the interests of the Capital Life; and his practical work there proved so satisfactory as to impress the company with the wisdom of giving him charge of the Peterborough district.

The Capital Life head offices are in Ottawa, and ranks among the officers and shareholders some of the most representative citizens of Canada, whose standing and financial interests must be a strength to this growing company. Included among the large list of shareholders are the following well-known Peterborough citizens: James Lynch, druggist; Dr. James V. Gallivan, physician; Bishop M. J. O'Brien; Richard Sheehy, contractor; Thos. McNamara, merchant; A. J. Grant, civil engineer.

B. HUDSON, ARTIST

Has removed his stock of pictures, mouldings and birds to his residence, 629 Stewart street, where he has a large collection of mounted specimens and deer heads for sale. He will also continue his framing business, and keeps on hand all kinds of pictures. Your patronage solicited. 28d-114

STONY LAKE COTTAGES OPEN FOR THE SEASON

Quite a Number of Visitors at the Summer Resort

STONY LAKE, June 15.—Kawartha Park store and post office have been opened for the season. Mr. Charlton of Lakefield is in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stock are holidaying at Kawartha Park.

Mr. Robert Neil's family have opened their summer home for the season.

Mr. John Carlisle spent a few days at his cottage getting things ready for fishing.

Miss Pearl Brock, soloist, of College Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, joined her mother at their new bungalow, Kawartha Park.

Mrs. Dr. F. C. Neal of Peterborough, is spending a few days on the lakes.

Mr. Sam Hunter, cartoonist of the Toronto World, is enjoying a short vacation at his cottage, "Pepacton."

Messrs Harry Beal and George Henderson spent Friday inspecting their cottages.

Rev. Mr. Smith returned to Belleville after spending a short vacation with Rev. Mr. Webb at "Bon Repos."

Mr. H. W. Stock of Juniper Island store will operate a supply boat on the lakes this season.

Mr. Harold E. Knapman is spending a short vacation at "Forest Home."

The annual "Y" camp will be held at Sandy Point as usual this season, the opening date being June 20th. Boys Secretary Galley and General Secretary Meserve have been up inspecting the property. They will put a floor in the kitchen and instal a new cook stove.

Mr. H. G. Fitzgerald has built a fence between his lot and that of the Y.M.C.A., which, being interpreted, means that the boys hereafter will have to "swim" when they wish to visit the Point.

Messrs. Hal Crane, Gordon McFarlane and their friend, Mills, are having an enjoyable time at "Gladhaken." "Hal" has a Gray detachable motor attached to his skiff and is making it "hum."

The Grove school of Lakefield held their annual picnic to Sandy Beach last week. Contrary to the usual programme, the weather man provided a fine day throughout.

Mr. Rayson of Toronto has purchased the Evinrude detachable motor operated by Mr. Edmunds last year. Mr. Edmunds has bought another Evinrude of the latest and most up-to-date type.

An unusual quantity of freight has been finding its way up to Stony Lake this season. Last week the "Stoney" was so busy one day that she continued her deliveries long into the night, using her searchlight to facilitate the work.

Mr. A. E. Tanner and family have opened up "Rock Mount" for the season.

Warden Shaw's Address Deals With Matters of Interest

The County Council met in the regular June session this afternoon in the County Council Chambers, with all the Councilors present. Warden Shaw presided and adressed the council as follows:

To the Members of the County Council, 1914:

Gentlemen,—At this the June session for the current year, as has been customary, I beg to address you briefly.

We have been honoured with a visit from H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, a visit we appreciate, not only because H.R.H. is our Governor-General, but also because he is the son of one of the best Queens that ever reigned, and uncle of our present beloved King.

I trust all are hopeful for a continuation of the progress of our country and join me in recognizing the hand of a kind Providence for the prospects of another satisfactory year.

I am sure I voice the sentiments of all when I extend to all concerned deep sympathy in the disaster that befell those in the sinking of the Empress of Ireland.

We are now confronted with a change in the construction and maintenance of our roads, particularly our main roads leading to market centres. As you are all aware nothing has been done by the government yet following the report of the Highways Commission, but the report is of such a character as would almost assure you that ample assistance will be given by the government where counties undertake to establish a system of county roads.

I will not refer to bridge matters that are being carried into effect this year but will leave it to the Chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee and the respective councillors under whose jurisdiction these bridges are.

The chairman of the Finance Committee has the same difficult problem to solve as has each chairman of counties in the province. As time rolls on prices increase and maintenance and construction of bridges increase. In one of our adjoining counties, although the assessment was raised 10 per cent., last year, they were forced to raise the rate this year 7-8 of a mill.

I have been asked by the chairman of the Finance Committee that he will ask you to approve of a rate that will be only 3-8 of a mill of a raise.

I would ask all for a continuance of the same zeal that has always been in evidence for the progress of the county, and to never fail to take advantage of anything that would be a benefit to the county.

As stated before, others who are chairmen of various committees will no doubt report to you, and in conclusion permit me to give expression of my appreciation of the honour you have conferred on me, and for the united assistance you have given me in my feeble efforts in the conduct of the business up to the present, and I respectfully solict the same for the balance of the year.

Respectfully yours,
ROBT. SHAW, Warden

Applications were received from Mr. James O'Leary and Mr. Thos. Black for the position of caretaker of the Chemong Bridge. On motion Mr. O'Leary was appointed caretaker.

Tenders were received for $10,000 worth of bonds at 5 per cent, payable in equal annual instalments of principle and interest in 20 years. The tender accepted was that of the Canadian Bond Corporation at $99.56, which is a good advance over the figures of 806.52 of last year.

PICKLING SEASON COMING ON

Small Melon Pickles— Select green muskmelons about the size of an egg; prick well and place in strong brine for three days. Soak until fresh, wipe dry, place in jars and pour over them hot spiced vinegar, and keep in a cool place.

Pickled Figs.—Pick figs which are not quite ripe but fully matured; leave the stems on the fruit. Place in a jar of fairly strong brine and let stand over night. Rinse well in fresh cold water, pack rather closely in jars, and pour over them hot, spiced vinegar.

Pickled Peaches—Select firm fruit and place it in brine for one week, then remove, wipe dry and place in a clean jar. Pour over the peaches boiling vinegar, one gallon to eight pounds of fruit, in which has been boiled a half ounce each of whole pepper, white mustard seed, a few cloves and one teaspoon of salt. Let them stand over night. Reheat the vinegar and again pour over the fruit. Reheat, pour over again, and add fresh vinegar enough to the spiced vinegar to fill up the jars in which the fruit is packed.

Pickled Beans.— String the beans, boil until tender in slightly salted water, drain in a colander and when cold put in jars. Add one tablespoonful of horse radish, sprinkle lightly with cayenne pepper, cover with good cider vinegar, seal and put in cool place.

Pickled onions—Take uniform, medium-sized onions, peel, put into boiling water and cook until quite clear. Take out, dry thoroughly between cloths and pack them into glass jars. Take good vinegar, put into several pieces of ginger, some whole pepper, bring to a boil, and when cold pour over the onions and seal the jars.

Cucumber Pickles.— Select medium or rather small cucumbers; for one peck make brine which will bear up an egg. Heat boiling hot and pour over the cucumbers; let them stand 24 hours; take out and wipe dry; heat to boiling vinegar sufficient to cover, and while boiling hot pour over the cucumbers; let them stand in this 24 hours. Now change the vinegar, putting on fresh vinegar, adding to it one gill of brown sugar, one half gill of white mustard seed, a teaspoonful of cloves and the same of stick cinnamon, a piece of alum the size of a hickory nut, and a teaspoonful of celery seed, if like. Heat all together boiling hot, pour over the cucumbers and seal up in quart jars.

Sweet Cucumber Pickles—Take ripe cucumbers, pare them and take out the seeds; cut them in strips and soak in weak brine for 24 hours; then put them in vinegar and water and soak for 24 hours longer; then put them in sweetened vinegar and cook until tender. Take a quart of vinegar, three pounds of brown sugar, a tablespoonful of ground cinnamon, a few cloves tied up in a cloth, boil all together and pour over the pickles.—Farm and Branch.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. boys' camp this year is certainly going to be one of the best camps in the history of the Association, as already 30 names of boys who are going have been handed in and any boys who wish to have a good outing had better hand their names in right away, as the list closes at the end of the week.

The senior Y.M.C.A. war canoe is rapidly rounding into shape and now that Mr. Parsons, the new physical director, is on hand to coach the boys, the 'Y' crew will be hard to beat this year.

Two Gillespie Meetings in Smith

the bars, not because they like the stuff, but because of the habit of treating that they are learning and as a result the evil habit of drinking. This is a great opportunity to strike a blow at this traffic. Suppose it does not touch each of us, that some of our families have not felt its baneful influence, still we must remember that we are our brother's keeper, and we will have to give an account of what we have done in that respect."

Mr. Jas. Middleton.

Mr. Middleton knows the Township of Smith as a man who spent the greater portion of his life on the second line. He spoke only a few words and upon the one subject that is uppermost in his mind at this election. "I am proud of our candidate," he said. "I know he is a temperance man, and I have every confidence in him and Mr. Rowell. Some of you may have no idea of the sentiment that is abroad to-day on the temperance question. I believe it will sweep the province. The temperance people are well united and they are going to give Mr. Rowell great support. It remains for the people in this riding to send Mr. Gillespie ahead at the polls as an assistant to Mr. Rowell."

Mr. John F. Thornton.

Mr. Thornton commented upon the presence of the ladies. I hope the time will soon come, he said, when the women will have right to vote. I believe we could then leave moral questions to them and they will be truer to the right than the men. He reviewed what the temperance events of recent history in Ontario which had practically forced upon Mr. Rowell his response to the sentiment of the people to wipe out the bars. On three occasions the people of the province have given an overwhelming vote against the liquor traffic. Many municipalities that should be dry kept on the wet way by the three-fifths clause, and other indications show conclusively that the mass of the people are demanding the abolition of the bar.

Rowell Has the Courage.

When Mr. Rowell was called to lead the party he made the temperance question the main plank in his platform. He refused to take the leadership unless he was given a free hand. He stood firm against objections from members of his own party, he gave the Whitney Government every chance to make the first step toward abolishing the liquor traffic and promised to join with the Conservatives in taking the question out of politics and support them in any advanced legislation they would bring forth. In his entire course Mr. Rowell has displayed the courage that invites and encourages the support of all men interested in this question. It is on the conscience of every man to give Mr. Rowell the necessary strength to carry out this great temperance measure.

Call to Temperance Men.

The Pioneer, the paper of the temperance advocates, calls upon all temperance workers to support the Rowell policy. Let us not be carried away by side issues. Don't be led away by any policy that does not stand for that which you believe to be right. You will never get there that way. Every elector who marks a ballot will vote for either Sir James Whitney or the abolition of the bar. One has the force of the brewers and distillers behind it and against the Rowell policy. Always look for the leader. I supported Conservatives several times in my life. Then I thought the candidates were preferable to those at the head of the Liberal party. The man you vote for should be clear cut in his platform.

Mr. Gillespie promises to vote for the abolition of the bar, the shop and the club, no matter which party introduces such measures. He also states that he will support the most advanced temperance legislation, thereby showing himself wholly in favour of any and all restrictions brought forward to restrict the liquor traffic.

Mr. Thornton read Mr. Soden's letter in the Toronto Star, and stated that the writer was hedging from former statements, and it was impossible to tell just where he did stand. There are just as many good Conservatives as Liberals, and just as many good temperance Conservatives. We appeal to them to help us in this great issue.

When Mr. Young Broke.

The chairman commenting upon Mr. Thornton's statements, said: "Mr. Thornton and I are on the same footing. We are both supposed to be Reformers. I recall one election when I was a young man. I had made up my mind that I could not vote for a certain Liberal candidate. I remember that my father asked me what I was going to do, and I told him. It was hard to refuse him, but I could not give my support to the man who was running on the Reform ticket at that time. The men who change their votes are the men who rule this country. If we were all to divide into two parties and never change, the Government would never change. Don't take offence at anyone on this question. If you think it is right to vote a certain way, that is when you should respond to your conscience. The home depends upon what we make it, and in the same way the Government is just what we make it. There is not a man in the City of Peterborough more respected than Mr. Gillespie. I have known him in a business way 16 or 17 years. A better man to deal with doesn't live.

The Candidate.

Mr. Gillespie was the next speaker. He did not make a political speech. He said he did not accept the nomination for political purposes. He reviewed the efforts of Mr. Rowell to give Sir James Whitney every opportunity of taking the lead on the temperance question. Regarding Mr. Soden, he said, I have nothing to say. I think he is an honorable man. He may be doing what he believes to be right, but I think he is mistaken if he believes he can make the people believe that he is right in what he has said on the principal question in this election.

Other Speakers.

Other speakers at this meeting were: Mr. F. E. Ellis and Mr. F. D. Kerr. A pleasing feature was a vocal solo contributed by Miss Tully.

Fourth Line Meeting.

Mr. Robert Graham was chairman at the meeting in the hall on the Fourth Line. Mr. Gillespie was given a very encouraging reception. In spite of the fact that the farmers find it difficult to get away from their homes now there were some sixty or more present. The speakers were Mr. Cowan, Mr. Hall and Mr. Gillespie. Mr. Graham also called upon the Rev. Mr. McLaren, pastor of the Gilmour Memorial Church.

"I had no intention of saying anything when I came here to-night," Mr. McLaren said, "but since listening to Mr. Cowan's address I feel like emphasizing what he said in regard to the County Temperance Convention in Peterborough. I was at that meeting. I have never voted for the Liberal Government yet, and I have seldom allowed anyone to know my leaning. But I see more than politics in this election. I have always maintained that a minister of the Gospel is better out of politics, but when a great moral question places itself before the people it becomes the duty of Christian men to support it.

I remember Mr. Soden's words at that convention. In the forenoon there had been an earnest discussion upon the policy to be drafted. When Mr. Soden arrived he wanted to go further. He wanted to make the people believe that he was not satisfied with what the convention proposed, but that it should go farther. It was a great surprise to me that he should accept a nomination after the remarks he made at that convention. Men who want to see the future of this country made brighter allow no one to pull the wool over your eyes. Vote as God-fearing men, and I am satisfied there will be a big upheaval on election day."

A vote of thanks was passed to the chairman, Mr. Graham, and the meeting concluded with the singing of the National Anthem, and with cheers for Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Rowell.

PETERBOROUGH WINS THE FIRST GAME OF THE HAMILTON SERIES

Belting Once More a Mystery to the Hams and the Petes Administer a 4 to 0 Whitewashing in Opening Game of Road Trip.

THEY BEAT DOUGHERTY

HAMILTON, June 15 — Peterborough, the cellar team in the Canadian League race, appears to have the jinx on the Hamilton team. Not content with taking two out of three from Yates crew at Peterborough last week, the team stepped on the diamond here to-day and shut out the locals by a score of 4 to 0. The Athletics could not hit Belting in the pinches. The visitors' first two runs were the result of loose play, but clouting earned the other two. Dougherty pitched good ball for Hamilton, but was not given the support that Belting was. Score:

Chance After Young Stars

Has Instructed His Scouts Not to Miss a League

CHICAGO, June 13. — Unofficially it has been learned that Frank Chance has notified Frank Farrell to turn loose all the baseball scouts he can employ and instruct them to buy all the material a million or two will purchase. Chance has come to the conclusion that a machine can be kept going by tinkering with it only for so long. After that the machine just sort o' naturally crumples up, rolls over and thereafter merely takes up a lot of space—sometimes valuable space that could be used for something else.

Chance has further decided there are some fellows on the Yankee payroll who are taking up a lot of valuable space, too. But now that he has made this discovery what is he going to do with the knowledge unless others can be found to take the places of the space fillers? It is a stupendous question, one requiring considerable undivided attention.

"It's a hard game," Chance was overheard to remark. "This building up a winning baseball club may look easy from the outside, but from the inside it's like being in a mystic maze.

"Mr. Farrell is one of the gamest men I have ever met. He is willing to go to the limit to try to get players to boost the team. He is willing to spend all kinds of money to get them. But nowadays good players are not for sale. You've got to trade for them.

"The Yankee scouts have been scouring the country looking for material. They have found some, but in nearly every instance the player in question is already the property of some big league club, which has turned him out for further seasoning with a halter attached to his neck.

"When a good player is found who does not belong to any club but the one he is playing for, the club wants either a million dollars for him or it wants $800,000 and five or six good players in exchange."

However, Chance is still full of fight. He knows there must be ball players hibernating some place in this broad expanse of land and his scouts have been instructed to delve into every thicket in the search. "Do not miss a league," they have been told.

Petes Made Big Gains

Their Showing Last Week Was the Third Best in the League

Peterborough's showing last week was the third best in the League. Only surpassed by St. Thomas and London. During the week the Petes lost half a game on St. Thomas and London. Gained a half game on Ottawa, a full game on Hamilton, one and one-half on Erie, two games on Toronto, and two and one-half on Brantford. The week's figures follow:

	W.	L.
St. Thomas	4	1
London	5	2
Peterborough	4	2
Ottawa	4	3
Hamilton	3	4
Erie	3	5
Toronto	2	4
Brantford	2	5

BASEBALL

Opponents of Sunday baseball at Ottawa have commenced a movement to have it stopped. The Sunday games of the Ottawa club are played across the river in Hull, Que., where Sabbath day games are legal. It is said that provincial legislation is necessary to prevent baseball on Sunday. In the event of such being enacted it would cut off the International League games in Montreal as well as semi-pro. and amateur games throughout the province.

They're off to a good start at Brantford. The Courier sport writer rids himself of the following:

We're going to be honest about it. The next new player signed by Rube Deneau will not be heralded as any wonder until he has delivered the goods. We hailed Mr. Asher with delight, because on his record he was a swell pitcher. We hailed Mr. Dolan along too because he had a rep as a fence buster. But no more for us. Asher's last two games have been far from the winning ball variety, while Dolan has shown himself to be a weak hitter, just like many that have been thrown into the discard heap after the once over. The moral is that players with reputations don't always make good in the Canadian League. They've got to come along with the goods as well.

Kills Bride Of 7 Days

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 16. — Enraged at the admission of his 18 year-old bride of less than a week, Tony Salenne, 26 years old, of 466 Oak Street, killed her with a razor as she lay sleeping at 6 o'clock the other morning. The woman's head was nearly severed from her body by the stroke of the sharp blade, and she appears to have been killed almost instantly, so that her family, who live on the lower floors of the same house, were not disturbed.

Salenne, after waiting a time to be sure that no one had heard her muffled shriek as he slashed at her throat with the razor, appears to have gone over to the wash stand and washed his hands. He then put on his clothes, his body being still stained with the blood which had spurted out, and went out on the street. He then went to the public baths in South Avenue, after wandering about for a time. When he had disrobed to enter the bath Attendant Frank Dyer noticed the bloodstains on his body.

"How did you get that blood on you?" asked Dyer.

"I have killed my wife," was the reply.

Dyer, who was formerly employed at Police Headquarters as engineer, lost no time in getting to the 'phone and calling up headquarters.

Captain of Detectives Whaley sent Acting Detective John A. Doyle over to the baths, and Salenne was arrested. Inspector Ryan, Doyle and Captain Whaley then went in taxicab with Salenne to the house. Captain Khubertans of the Lyell Avenue station arriving about the same time.

When they entered the yard Mrs Catolina Francioso, the murdered girl's mother, who had suspected that something was wrong when she found [illegible] leading to the four rooms occupied by the newly married couple on the third floor of the building, locked, began to scream.

The police went up the narrow stairway, and, opening the door with the key which Salenne had in his pockets, burst in. A gruesome sight met their eyes. The woman was lying on the bed with her head nearly severed from her body, and the little room was spattered with blood.

The girl, who was Francesca Francioso before her marriage, had come to this country with her parents 10 years ago. She met Salenne, who had been in this country about a year some three months ago. He was employed at a stove plant in Adams Street, and was a steady worker, so that the family were much pleased with the match.

He is said to have extorted from her admissions regarding her relations with other men before her marriage, and by brooding over this had worked himself into such a frenzy that he had resolved to kill her.

This is the explanation offered by Salenne himself for his actions, but the girl's family are inclined to doubt the truth of it, and to resent the reflection cast upon the murdered woman.

Francesco Francioso was a member of a large family. Her eldest brother, Antonio, is a young man about 22 years of age, and there are seven children in all. The bride and her husband took rooms in a portion of the frame house that runs up into a third storey in the rear. These four little rooms are reached by a stair way which runs up from the outside, and are thus isolated from the remainder of the house. The murdered woman could have had little or no warning, as she was probably sleeping at the time her husband attacked her. When he went out he locked the door behind him and placed the key in his pocket.

Captain of Detectives Whaley, with Detectives Murphy and Welker, were gathering information which might shed more light on the crime after reaching the house.

It was necessary for the police to order away the crowd of Italians who gathered as soon as the news of the affair spread. Friends of the family filled the house, and tried to comfort the mother. Katherine, a bright child of 12 years old, who speaks English well, acted as interpreter for the police when questions were asked of the family.

PIGEONS BRING MESSAGE

PORTLAND, Ore., June 15.— Special—Anxiety prevailed here last night regarding the fate of three of the four balloons which started from here late Thursday in the first national balloon race ever held in the Northwest. Shortly after their departure the air craft were caught in a terrific wind, thunder and lightning storm. This afternoon a carrier pigeon fluttered into the headquarters of the Aero Club here. Tied to it was a wad of paper, and on this was written:

"Balloon struck by lightning. Berry hurt. Come quick.—Morrison."

The balloon of which Captain John Berry is pilot is the Million Population of St. Louis. His passenger was George C. Morrison. It is thought here that if the balloon was not wrecked in the dense forests of the western slopes of the Cascade Mountains it may have been stranded in the sparsely settled plateau that stretches beyond.

Nothing has been heard from the Kansas City, Ill., piloted by John Watts, and the Springfield, piloted by Roy Donaldson. Officials of the race think it ominous that they have not released any of the carrier pigeons they took with them.

Every possible effort has been made to locate the missing balloons. The United States Forest Service has notified all its rangers to be on the lookout, and parties of exploration are planned.

WHAT HOUR DO YOU WANT GAMES TO START? FANS ASKED TO VOTE

For some time the directors of the Peterborough Ball Club have been debating the question as to the most popular hour for commencing local ball games. So far this season, as in the last two summers, week-day games have been started at 3.45 o'clock. This season the suggestion has been made that a later hour would enable more fans to see the game. The ball club directorate is anxious to meet the wishes of the fans and has therefore decided to hold a voting contest. On this page appears a coupon. Fans are asked to mark an X opposite the hour at which they want the games to start and send the coupon to Jas. Lynch, druggist, Hunter Street. The coupons will appear on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and the result will be announced on Friday.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR FIRST DAY'S RACING GOOD HORSES ENTERED

The races of the Peterborough Turf Club and Central Racing Association will open to-morrow afternoon with a number of events which are promised to provide more than the usual excitement for the spectators. A number of very speedy horses are entered and with the 2.30 and 2.15 classes scheduled for competition there should be plenty of fine racing. The track is in grand shape. Everything points to a great day's programme. Dr. Sinclair of Cannington will handle the bell. Here are the classes:

2.30 Pace.

Black Diamond — H. H. Ingrim, Lindsay.
LuckyLou—Wm. Elmerst, Keene.
Ora Medium—F. Montgomery, City

Any profit arising from the sale of flowers, ice cream, etc., etc., will be devoted towards the reparation of the school house. There will be no charge for admission.

WHITE STAR-DOMINION LINE INNOVATION.

The large travel by the one-class cabin steamers of the White Star-Dominion Line has prompted that company to place orchestras on the "Teutonic" and "Canada," which are now employed in this service. With this added facility one-class cabin steamers offer to-day almost every advantage of first-class passage on the larger liners, and people of moderate means who have hesitated to go abroad because of the expense involved, find that this type of vessel affords excellent accommodation at such moderate rates that there is no longer any reason for hesitancy on this score. This means that all White Star-Dominion Line steamers are now supplied with orchestras.

May Never Know

BALTIMORE, Md., June 15.—Whether Ella G. Winter, young, good-looking and popular, was murdered or killed herself because she believed the man to whom she had given her entire affections, had tired of her, may never be solved. The authorities admit they are groping in the dark.

D. Meredith Reese, Jr., wealthy lawyer, clubman and expert yachtsman, the "man in the case," suggests that the girl drowned herself. In the same breath he insists that he "never had any intention" of wedding the girl. The county authorities openly charge the girl was murdered. They assert that Reese has not been frank with them in solving the mystery. But up to the present no charge of complicity in the alleged crime has been made against Reese. He is free to go and come as he pleases. He indignantly denies any knowledge whatever regarding the manner in which the young stenographer met death.

The body of the girl was found floating in Curtis bay early last Monday. The Thursday night before, she met Reese at a boat float and accompanied him in a launch to a shore resort. Peter Bell, bartender at this place, saw the couple depart. Reese says he landed the girl at a float from which she planned to board a car for home shortly afterward. Lee Miller, boat attendant at this particular boat, says the girl did not land there that night. Her hat was found far to the northwest of where the body was picked up. It is admitted it could not have floated there.

"Our sister never had any intention of committing suicide," declared George Winter. "She may have been accidentally drowned, but she never killed herself."

Sheriff Potee and the brothers of the dead girl to-day searched a brick yard and woods near where the hat was found. This is one of the loneliest spots in the Cabin branch section. Whether they found anything to support the murder theory is not yet known. They are also seeking information from the "other woman," who shared Reese's affections. Her identity is closely guarded, as it is thought she knows little that would aid the inquiry.

Herbert Bennett, a Lowestoft fisherman, has died as the result of a scratch from the fins of a dogfish a few days ago.

OBITUARY

MRS. MICHAEL COLLINS.

The death occurred last evening at her home in Ennismore, of Mary Allen, wife of Mr. Michael Collins of that township. The deceased lady was 70 years of age, and was very widely known and highly respected throughout the township in which she had resided for years.

The late Mrs. Collins was born in the township of Dodge, where, as well as in Ennismore, her death will be deeply regretted. She is survived by her husband, five sons and one daughter, Daniel, John, James, William, Joseph, all of Ennismore, and Katie at home, as well as two sisters, Mrs. Michael Leahy and Mrs. Martin Leahy of Douro.

The funeral will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, from the family residence, lot 7, concession 8, Ennismore, to St. Martin's church and thence to St. Martin's cemetery.

MISS A. WATSON.

Miss Adenelle Watson, after a lingering illness, passed away at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. M. Clancy, this morning. The deceased was forty years of age and was born in Peterborough, where she resided all her life. She was very widely known and highly respected in this City and the news of her death will come as a shock to a large number of her friends in this City.

The late Miss Watson is survived by one brother, Mr. J. Watson, and one sister, Mrs. Clancy, both of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning to St. Peter's Church, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Ballade of Bum Golfers.

Experts, who look upon my game
With curling lip and sneering eye,
Who see four hundred things to blame
And tell me as I vainly try—
"Don't lift your bally wrists so high"
"Tilt in, to give the ball a run"—
"Don't use a brassie from that lie"—
I cry you mercy, everyone.

Star entries in the golfing frame
Who need no daily alibi,
In dreams I hear you still exclaim;
"Your grip, old top, is all awry"—
"My word—look how he shifts his thigh"—
"Such knee work all good golfers shun"—
"Now THIS is how Braid lets 'er fly"—
I cry you mercy, everyone.

My style, I know, is worse than lame—
My wretched scores bring forth a sigh;
My stance and grip and eke my aim
I know would make a baby cry;
But all I ask, or specify,
Is PEACE beneath the pleasant sun
Apart from every "How" and "Why"
I cry you mercy, everyone.

Call me a dub—a mutt—a guy—
But was golf built for war—or fun?
A duffer let me live—and die—
I cry you mercy, everyone.

WHAT MAKES THE FLEECY CLOUDS?

Many scientists have told us how clouds are made; most of the text books on physical geography tell us all about them, but, says a critic of these theories, it is all guesswork.

Clouds are a mystery. It is true they are composed of moisture floating in air, but how did the moisture get there? It is held that particles of moisture are evaporated from the earth's surface by the heat of the sun. This moisture does not form into clouds immediately for the passages of the moisture from the earth to the upper air is quite invisible.

It was formerly supposed that this moisture was condensed by the cold of the upper air into rain droplets which formed the clouds. But scientists hold that the tiny particles must have something to condense upon. They used to tell us that the moisture collected upon dust particles to form into rain drops. Now they are practically agreed that it is something else but they don't know what.

Anyway, when the drops get large enough they accumulate into vapour, forming clouds. When the droplets get too large and heavy to float in the air, they fall to earth in the form of rain, and that is about all we actually know about clouds.

Utterly Crushed.

It was a warm, radiant summer morning, the birds were singing sweetly, the flowers and dewy grass shimmered in the sparkling sunlight, and there, in the park, Robert Peeler—a very junior officer—was doing his utmost to make a favourable impression on the pretty maid, while the children busily chased elusive butterflies.

"Ah," sighed the dashing Robert, "I wish you were my governess!"

"So do I," replied the girl.

Hope sprang into Robert's heart.

"And what would you do with me?" he asked.

"Stop your smoking cigarettes, and get your hair cut—to say nothing of punishing you for talking nonsense during school hours!"

Then Robert ponderously continued on his beat.

BILL IS HASTENED

Government Accedes to Lord Lansdowne's Demand

REDMOND RULES "ARMY"

LONDON, June 17.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Although the Unionist vote of censure on the Government was not forced to a division in the House of Lords yesterday, it led to one result which augurs well for a peaceful settlement in the near future. The Government have yielded to Lord Lansdowne and his demand for the immediate production of the Irish amending bill, and will introduce it on Tuesday.

Lord Crewe also made an interesting statement that Sir Edward Carson had been in communication with the Prime Minister. The subject of the negotiations was not disclosed, but it is no secret that they were chiefly concerned with the suggestion of establishing a statutory Ulster for the purpose of exclusion.

Sir Edward has been invited to give his views on the delimitation of the area in the northeast of Ireland which is irrespective of the existing county boundaries, and would amount to a geographical definition of Protestant Ulster.

Sir Edward Carson stated last night that Lord Crewe was wrong when he indicated that certain communications regarding the "policy" of Home Rule had taken place between the Prime Minister and himself. "The only communication I have received," he said, "was a letter asking for a map showing the position of the different parties in Ulster. Such a map is open to anybody, and I sent the Prime Minister one."

Some of the Unionists who have been the strongest supporters of the Ulster volunteers, including Andrew Bonar Law, Lord Robert Cecil and Leopold Charles Amery, attacked the Government last night in the House of Commons for its failure to suppress the Nationalist volunteers. They declared that the Ulstermen should have been checked in the beginning.

The attack was received with laughter from the Liberal side. Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, said that the Nationalists were increasing by 15,000 weekly, but their purpose was purely defensive. The record of 300 years, he declared, showed the futility of British state prosecutions to suppress public opinion in any quarter of Ireland. There was more regard for the law there now than ever before.

A motion to censure the Government was lost by a vote of 288 to 233.

Redmond Gets Control.

DUBLIN, June 17. — John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, has gained control of the Nationalist volunteer movement. The committee in charge of this movement, after much demur, has accepted his suggestion that "the existing self-elected committee of the volunteers should be strengthened by the addition of 25 representatives of the Irish party."

May Salvage Lost Mail.

OTTAWA, June 17. — The Postoffice Department hopes to salvage the registered letters which went down on the Empress of Ireland. An arrangement has been made with the wrecking company, acting on behalf of the underwriters, and they are to be compensated if the registered matter is recovered.

Seven Years for Burglary.

CORNWALL, June 17. — Thomas Henderson, who last week entered A. J. McIntosh's house and demanded money and later was captured after breaking into Albert Robson's residence was yesterday sentenced to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Davis. The man claimed he was under the influence of liquor at the time, and knew nothing of what he was doing.

N.B. Lumberman Tells of Contribution to Campaign Fund

GO-BETWEEN IS ABSENT

ST. JOHN, N.B., June 17. — The royal commission investigating the charges made against Hon. James K. Flemming, Premier of New Brunswick, by L. A. Dugal, leader of the Opposition in the Legislature, in connection with the administration of crown lands, opened its session here yesterday morning, with Justice McKeown presiding, and ex-Judge W. Wells and W. S. Fisher, the other commissioners, present.

Mr. Dugal charged that Premier Flemming unlawfully extorted from the lumbermen who hold leases for upwards of a hundred miles $15 per mile.

Yesterday's session, while productive of no evidence against the Premier, indicated that the lumbermen agreed to establish a campaign fund.

John P. Burchill, a former member of the Legislature, and a prominent lumberman of the north shore, testified that he paid $2,000 to W. H. Berry, superintendent of lumber scales, over and above the bonus legitimately charged by the province, Berry having told him that this additional amount was for a political fund.

W. H. Berry's name was called three times by the court crier, but he failed to appear, and John W. Leighton, jr., then testified that he served a subpoena upon Berry at the Parker House, Boston, last week, and that Berry was then in excellent health and was fully able, mentally and physically, to answer the summons of the commission.

Col. T. G. Loggie, Deputy Minister of Lands and Mines, testified concerning the legislation fixing the amounts collected legitimately from holders of crown timber limits under the act of 1913, the bonuses ranging from $100 per square mile to down as low as $20 per square mile. This was the lawful revenue which the Crown Lands Department collected, in consideration of the extension of the leases, and Col. Loggie said that if any further or additional payments were made, nothing had been paid into the Treasury.

MACKAY IS FREED.

Judge Snider Acquits Hamilton Business Man of Charge.

HAMILTON, June 7.—The sequel to the sensational arrests of Adam B. Mackay and James N. Gow, who later committed suicide, on the charge of procuring girls under the age of eighteen for immoral purposes, occurred yesterday when Judge Snider acquitted Mackay. His honor held that there was no evidence to prove that the accused was guilty of the charge of procuring girls for immoral purposes, and also ruled that the prisoner being only a roomer at 194 South Hughson street, the residence of Gow, he could not be held responsible for criminal acts which might occur there.

At the outset of the trial Crown Attorney Washington made a motion to have the public excluded from the court which was strenuously objected to by: H. F. B. Johnston, K.C., and Geo. S. Kerr, K.C., who stated that the defendant had nothing whatever to conceal, and that the evidence was quite fit for the public to hear. Mr. Johnston quoted from an English case to show that the case should not be heard in camera. The judge, however, decided that the public should be kept from the court.

Hindus Have Not Hope of Meeting Expenses of Staying.

VANCOUVER, June 17.—The Komagata Maru and her 360 Hindu passengers are expected by the immigration officials to get away on the return trip to the orient before the end of the present week. A proposal for the continuation was made Monday by Capt. Johnson, Vancouver agent for the owner of the steamer, but the conditions the Hindus must fulfil before the vessel can be continued under the charter are made so onerous that there is practically no chance of the Hindus paying up. Nominally there is now $15,000 overdue on the charter. Vancouver Hindus have raised $11,000 of that amount.

The latter sum has been tendered to Capt. Johnson, who accepted it provisionally, but has since returned it to the Hindus, with an ultimatum that unless this amount is increased to approximately $40,000 for the payment of contingent expenses and the guarantee of charter for several months ahead, the ship will immediately be ordered back to Japan.

HOW TO CURE STOMACH TROUBLES

Excessive acid in the stomach or hyperacidity, as it is called, is primarily responsible for nearly all cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and flatulence which quite frequently lead to stomach ulcers. The successful treatment for the prevention of such cases depends entirely upon neutralising the excess acid, stopping the food fermentation and healing the inflamed mucous membrane that lines the stomach. For this purpose, specialists are now universally advising the use of pure bisurated magnesia which has recently been found to be unequalled in the treatment of even the severest cases. One to two teaspoonfuls in a little water immediately after eating stops all pains almost instantly, neutralises the acid and soothes the inflamed stomach and if regularly used, will quickly remove the cause of the trouble. Being well known, bisurated magnesia can be obtained from any druggist and will keep indefinitely if kept tightly corked.

Storstad Changed Course in Fog Says Captain Kendall

COLLIER'S MATE SAYS NOT

QUEBEC, June 17.— Evidence amplifying the known contentions in regard to the cause of the disaster to the Empress of Ireland at Father Point in the St. Lawrence, on May 29, was brought out at yesterday's opening session of the investigating Dominion commission, of which Lord Mersey is chairman.

So far the main arguments of Captain Kendall of the Empress that he was stationary when rammed by the collier Storstad and of the owners of the collier that the Empress placed herself in front of their vessel, which indisputably ha. the right of way, were only emphasized. Captain Kendall was on the stand for several hours, and gave a straightforward account of the events of the terrible morning along the lines of his testimony at the Rimouski inquest.

Questioned by Lord Mersey as to why he stopped his ship when he had turned his green light to that of the Storstad in conformity with navigation rules, he claimed he took the step as a safeguarding measure owing to the fog. He could not be got by the lawyer for the Storstad, C. S Haight of New York, to admit that his boat could have drifted in front of the Storstad unless the collier had changed her course after the fog hid her from him, which contingency he was of the opinion had taken place.

That the collier had not changed her course after first sighting the Empress, though abortive attempts had been made to port her helm after she had been slowed down and that the Empress was crossing her bows, was the principal points arising out of the testimony of Alfred Tuftenes, the first officer of the Storstad, who was examined during the afternoon. This witness also repeated the story that Empress sailors refused to go back in boats to carry on rescue work after once reaching the Storstad. Mr. Haight supplemented the evidence of Tuftenes at the request of Lord Mersey by giving as his explanation of the disaster a belief that the big liner thought she could cross the bow of the slow-going collier, that her helm was ordered ported by one officer and starboarded by another, a suggested confusion of orders that Captain Kendall indignantly repudiated.

New chapters illustrating the horror of the disaster were added by Captain Kendall in his testimony, the most startling being his description of how a sheet of flame burst from the Empress after she was rammed, the prow of the collier evidently penetrating clear through to her boilers. The first authentic account was also given of a distressing scene enacted when Captain Kendall, on the verge of a collapse, met Captain Andersen of the collier when the former reached the Storstad. Apparently, until Captain Kendall was taken away insensible, he vehemently argued that the collier had rammed him at full speed, while Captain Andersen contended that the liner was at fault.

No agreement could be secured from the testimony of the two witnesses heard yesterday as to the whistles blown by the vessels, though Lord Mersey discovered when examining the Storstad's first officer that he had blown a signal indicating that the collier was stopped and had immediatey afterwards given an order to go slow ahead.

Captain Kendall also acknowledged that though he knew a collision to be inevitable when the Storstad came at them in the fog, it was not till after it had occurred that the order to close the watertight bulkheads was given, by which three compartments had been exposed to the sea.

The speed which Lord Mersey directed the morning proceedings was continued during the afternoon, his lordship summarily shutting off examination that seemed to be superfluous.

The enquiry is remarkable for the fact that probably for the first time a British judge is chairman of a Canadian commission, and Butler Aspinall, K.C., an English lawyer, is leading one section of the interests involved, while an American lawyer, Mr. Haight, is conducting the case for other parties affected.

GREEKS ARE MASSACRED.

Refugees Say One Hundred Have Been Slain By Turks.

ATHENS, Greece, June 17.—Greek refugees from Asia Minor yesterday brought reports of the massacre by Turks of 100 Greeks, including priests, old men and children, in the town of Phokia, 25 miles northwest of Smyrna. The town, according to the official report, was invaded by a horde of armed men, who looted and then set fire to all the buildings. They are said to have been assisted by the Turkish police. All the inhabitants, most of whom were Greeks, fled, leaving their property behind them, and 3,000 of them have reached Salonika. They declare that the bodies of the massacred people were thrown into wells. The refugees, many of whom were suffering from wounds, were in a state of starvation on their arrival at Salonika.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

The climb to the open again was exhausting work. Once he thought he was done for when an apparently sound log snapped suddenly, and plunged him into a dark and fearsome network of dead wood, so swathed in soft and noisome fungus growths that he seemed to be unable to find sure hold for either hand of foot. Somehow, he clambered into daylight again, and found himself clinging to the root of a tree which thrived on the tangled husks of its ancestors. It took him three hours to reach a height of five hundred feet, at which point the treacherous forest belt yielded to a firmer area covered by alpine moss.

Then, utterly worn out, and unequal to further effort that day, he was thinking of gnawing some bulbs of resin which had exuded from the bigger firs, when he caught sight of of a small armadillo scuttling over the rocks. It was the first living creature, save for an occasional vulture, he had seen since leaving the snow-line. The discovery brought a spurious energy, and he dashed off in pursuit. The armadillo, which was far removed from its natural habitat —probably owing to the drought in the lowlands—ran very rapidly, and was evidently making for a burrow. Indeed, Power despaired of securing the creature when it headed for a fissure in the ground. As a last resource, he hurled the spear at it. The weapon turned in the air, fell vertically, and buried its broad blade in the animal's neck, striking the only vulnerable part of its body, since the whole remaining structure was covered with a strong, bony case of flexible plates.

The chances against any such haphazard casting of a javelin proving successful were simply incalculable; but Power took this piece of good fortune as further proof that he was being befriended by Providence. Leaving the armadillo where it had fallen, he searched the crevices in which it was about to seek refuge, and obtained some handfuls of dry moss. Then he gathered a bundle of the driest sticks he could find, and, by using a flint and steel, which, in his case, had long ago superseded all other means of lighting a fire, was soon enjoying a meal the like to which no chef in Paris could have prepared that night. True, there were but one course and one sauce; but the joint was eatable, with something of a pork flavour, and the sauce was ravenous hunger. Only the other day he told the most famous of contemporary head waiters that roast armadillo was vastly superior to sucking pig, at which the eminent one smiled, realizing that his patron was no gourmet.

Covering the remains of the feast with the creature's own armour, which, as an extra precaution against vultures, he waighted down with stones, Power arranged a bed of moss under an overhanging rock, and lay down to sleep. A wild storm of wind and rain raged during the night; but he was merely awakened for a minute or two by the unusual clamour, and slept soundly again, despite the fury of the elements. At dawn he was astir, and, after eating a few mouthfuls, tied the rest of the small joints to the spear by their own sinews, and began his march again.

As the armadillo supplied the only food he secured, or could have secured, during six days of a most arduous and nerve racking advance through a country which offered every sort of obstacle to the explorer, it is not to be wondered at if Power came to believe that he would yet emerge in safety from the perils confronting him. But his rate of movement was exasperatingly slow. On one day of the six he only succeeded in crossing one particularly troublesome ravine. On another, after skirting a mountain slope which positively bristled with dangers, he found himself on a receding angle, and was compelled to retrace his steps; although, a dozen times already, he had been called on to exercise every ounce of strength, every shred of resolution, in order to cross appallingly difficult places he must now tackle again.

Still, he kept on, and that gap in the hills grew ever wider and more distinct. He was gnawing the last bone of the armadillo, and asking himself how much longer it would be possible to maintain an unequal struggle against the grim forces which sought to crush him, when he had a stroke of luck. The Andes would be even more impregnable than they are were it not for an unusual geological formation which provided broad and often practicable rock ledges along the walls of the worst precipices. Farther north, in Peru, and to a less etxent in Chili, these roadways of Nature's own contriving are much utilised by mountaineers and their mules. When Power stumbled across one of them after getting out of a specially steep and timber-clogged ravine, he really did believe that his troubles were lessening. He fancied he could discern faint signs of others having passed that way, and he jumped to the conclusion that those most unfriendly Indians knew of this track, and could have piloted him to it in a quarter of the time he had consumed. Obviously, it led in the right direction. After climbing to a dizzy height, it dipped again into the next valley, and, despite a hazardous crossing of a mountain torrent, with complications caused by a recent landslide, he discerned another similar ledge on the oposite hill, and valiantly made for it.

There could be no doubt now that he was entering a more open country. The pass had broadened into a valley, and a flat blue smear on the horizon told of earth and sky meeting beyond a plain. The sight spurred him to a frenzy of hope and effort. He pressed on at far too rapid a pace, and, when hunger gripped him once more, he strived to stay its pangs by munching some dried berries, remnants of last year's autumn, which he gathered from a deciduous tree. He fancied, judging by the taste, that they were not poisonous; but, perhaps owing to his famished condition, they seemed to induce a curious excitation of mind, accompanied by dilated vision, which rendered colours entrancingly bright and clear. In the valley opening out before the descending ledge he imagined he could see patches of pink blossom which reminded him of the apple orchards of Colorado. He laughed aloud at the fantasy; nevertheless, he tore on in desperate haste to get into that attractive zone, where, surely, there must be animal life, and, with it, the prospect of a meal. Overjoyed, he sang as he went, rousing strange echoes. He, who had dwelt among the heathen like another Xavier, poured out his soul in the lilt and rhythm of "Marching through Georgia!" That stirring refrain had led many a gallant heart to the "crash of the cannonade and the desperate strife"; but never, surely, has it been heard amid such surroundings. Cliff spoke to cliff. Primeval nature was stirred, and answered his voice in rude harmonies:

"Hurrah! Hurrah! We bring the jubilee!
Hurrah! Hurrah! The flag that makes you free!
So we sang the chorus from Atlanta to the sea,
While we were marching through Georgia."

With a rush of wings and frantic clamour of screams, a flock of upland geese rose from some hidden marsh beneath, and fled in ordered phalanx to some distant sanctuary; whereupon Power yelled that ecstatic "Hurrah!" anew. Here was life! Here was a world that smiled and was not dumb! He must hurry, hurry, and enter into this Paradise!

Yet it came to pass, as so often happens in the most commonplace phases of man's life, that, at the very moment when the worst stage of the journey was nearing its end, when he had accomplished the almost impossible, when the leaping torrents of the hills were merging into a stream which, if turbid and noisy, bore some semblance to a river, he met with a disaster that brought death even nearer than it had come at any other crisis of his extraordinary career.

The track, rough as it was, offered comparatively easy going. Now winding round the inner curve of some huge fold in the hill, soon it would swing boldly out across the face of a promontory of rock; while passing one of these awesome precipices, which actually jutted out so far beyond its own base that Power could not see the river, though he could hear its mighty voice roaring among the boulders, he fell. That is to say, the broad ledge sank away beneath his feet, and, after a vain spring toward a section which still gripped the rocky wall, he fell with it.

He uttered no cry, made no plaint to Heaven. His brain worked with inconceivable rapidity, and he knew that he had been flung from a sheer height of well over a hundred feet. Thus, unless he dropped into deep water, and managed to retain his senses, either outcome of the acident being wildly improbable, he must be crushed into a pulp when he came to earth. He petitioned the Most High that if this was death, it might be instantaneous, that his soul might go out of its worn tabernacle in merciful oblivion, that he might not be called on to lie, maimed and inert, watching the gathering of vultures. Then some mighty hand seemd to seize him in an irresistible grip, and he lost consciousness.

When his senses returned, he found himself staring blankly at a blue sky, a sky that shone gloriously through a fairy lacework of branches of trees laden with apple blossom; while a sweet and subtle scent was pungent in his nostrils, and unodubtedly gave rise to the quaint notion which instantly possessed him, that he was already dead, and translated to a land of everlasting spring. Then he knew some liquid. It tasted like cider, and that he was still clothed in skins, that his bones ached, that he was hungry and athirst; so this could be neither death nor immortality. Suddenly, a savage face bent over him, his head was lifted, and he was given straight shaft into the stout skin coat he drank copiously. Then his brain reeled; for he was in no fit condition to withstand a draft of singular potency, and again the mists came, and he lapsed into void.

He did not recover full consciousness that day. The Indians, who had heard and been amazed at his singing, saw him drop from the precipice, and ran to its base, expecting to find a mangled corpse. But a tall and slender pine had thrust its straight shaft itno the stout skin coat he wore, and had bent until it yielded to the strain, and broke. Thus, he fell with enough forte to knock the wits out of him; but the major catastrophe was averted, and the Indians were awed by an incident which no patriarch of the tribe had witnessed before, nor would ever see again if he attained the age of Methuselah. The spear, which had left Power's hand when he was in the air, had buried its eight inches of blade in a fallen tree trunk, and had to be hewed out with an axe.

These things the white necromancer learned afterward. He found also that hi svision of apple blossom was no dream, but reality. Three centuries ago Jesuit missionaries had crossed the Andes by that very pass. They brought, as peace-offerings to the Indians, some of the fruit trees and cereals of more favoured climes; but they were murdered without parley. Curiosity, perhaps, led the savages to plant the trees and seeds; the apples alone, finding a congenial soil, thrived marvellously. All that region abounds in sweet, wild apples, from which the Indians concoct a fermented liquor which they call chi-chi. Those same apples, and the orgies of drunkenness to which they give rise, probably account for the legend of a great city existing within the untrodden depths of the Cordillera. But there is no city—no trace of civilisation save the apples, a kindly memento of the unfortunate Jesuits.

And now Power began his regenerative work anew.

Thanks to the phenomenal style of his coming among them, the savages spared his life; but their possession of an almost unlimited stock of chichi, and the truculent mood which strong drink induces, even in Indians, led them at first to treat him as a Koko-huinche, or "white fool." Though their hunting-grounds were hundreds of miles from the coast, and singularly remote from the influence of white settlers, they were aflame with vague resentment against the invaders, and gladly made one of the hated race the butt of their malevolent humour.

A DIRECT AND MOST EFFECTIVE TREATMENT For Cold in the Head and Catarrh

Some internal remedies, such as Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, undoubtedly help a great deal in checking a cold in the head. But you get the quickest action from Fossal Balm.

This is applied directly and conveniently through the new nozzle-shaped end of the collapsible tube in which it is put up. This little nozzle reaches well up into the nostril, and a gentle squeeze on the tube discharges enough of the Fossal Balm to spread over the membrane lining the nasal passages, kill the germs of the cold or catarrh, soothe the smarting inflammation, make breathing through the nostrils free and easy, and check the cold or relieve the catarrh at once.

The fact that this new means of applying the Fossal Balm is so handy, and gets it right up where it is needed, adds much to the value of this splendid remedy.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. KARSCENICK, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.

Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. SHERER, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Indigestion And Headaches

Arising from Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Atla., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NEARLY IN CONVULSIONS

With Acute Indigestion. "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Me.

NEWBURY, ONT., MAY 29th, 1913

"I am not a strenuous user of medicines or patent medicines, but I have taken nearly everything recommended for Indigestion and Constipation.

I have been so bad with Acute Indigestion that I was nearly in convulsions and had to be held. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" and I have not had another attack nor suffered at all with Indigestion since taking them.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy I ever used that did me any good, and I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives" for making me as well as I am today, and everyone agrees that I look in firstclass health.

My husband likes "Fruit-a-tives" very much and takes them whenever he has occasion to use a remedy for Constipation"

Asked To Be Beheaded.

Arrested for begging near Reading Eng., two Arabs — Ahmed Ali and Mohammed Ali—quite made up their minds that they would be sentenced to death. They had been guilty of the heinous offence of asking for alms from Miss Caroline Martin, a lady motorist, and their home experience told them that if they once got into the clutches of the law it would be all up with them. As they knew no English, they got aninterpreter to ask for a final boon from the bench at the local police court, namely, that if they were found guilty they would much rather be beheaded than hanged, the latter in their eyes being an undignified form of death. They made signs to the magistrates to have a rope put round their necks. The requests, however, was not granted, although they were found guilty of the crime, for the magistrates, to the astonishment and relief of the Arabs, decided to spare their lives and give them a week's hard labor each.

Dresden China Sale.

One of the finest Dresden china collections in private hands in England came to public auction when in the famous London sale room of Messrs. Christie the other day, there began the three days' auction of H. J. King's pieces of that Dresden porcelain of the Augustine period, which so curiously blends the graceful and grotesque. This collection of upwards of three hundred lots, specially rich in the groups which, at the moment, are making high prices, both in England and on the continent, is in the bulk the former collection of Massey-Mainwaring, which, after exhibiting at the Bethnal Green Museum, was sold en bloc in 1899 for £30,000. The best price of the day was 480 guineas.

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

BATTLESHIP MARVELS.

Maintenance of Navy Nothing Compared With Cost of Naval Defeat.

One wonders while listening to the present loud complaints regarding the growth of the Navy bill what the protests would be like should we be called upon to pay a naval war bill. It is not easy to estimate the cost of a big naval battle, but considering that two millions sterling has to be spent on a super-Dreadnought of the type of the Iron Duke, which has just been commissioned at Portsmouth, and that her guns use up powder and shot at the rate of £10,000 worth per minute, it would be a somewhat expensive business for the taxpayer if many such vessels were disabled or lost.

The Iron Duke is the world's most powerful ship, and has many unique features. She is the first battleship to be equipped with specially-designed guns for fighting enemies in the air. These guns are capable of sending projectiles, specially designed for the purpose, to a height of over 10,000 feet at the rate of twelve or thirteen a minute. The Iron Duke is also the first vessel to carry a battery of twelve six-inch quick-firers for beating off the attack of torpedo craft. Most of the earlier ships were armed with four-inch guns for this purpose, but torpedo craft have grown so rapidly, and it is now possible for torpedoes to be fired effectively from such long distances that the mounting of heavier guns has become imperative. Hence the six-inch guns, which throw a hundred-pound projectile, and are the largest man-handled guns in the British navy.

The latest scientific instruments with which the Iron Duke is fitted enables these big guns to be aimed with marvellous accuracy, a score of 100 per cent. hits being frequently made with them.

It is interesting to contrast this super-Dreadnought, which is 575 feet long, has a displacement of 25,000 tons, and is fitted with turbines of 29,000 horse-power, which enable her to travel over twenty-two knots an hour, with the last Iron Duke, a first-class battleship, launched almost exactly forty years ago, which was only 280 feet long, and displaced 6,010 tons.

Her armament consisted of ten nine-inch and four sixty-four-pounder muzzle-loaders. The total weight of her armor was 934 tons, about one-tenth of the weight of the new ship's protection. The hull and machinery of the ship of 1870 cost £146,314 and 250,165 respectively, the corresponding costs for the new vessel being £1,031,817 and £271,671, a striking illustration of the growth in the cost of battleships.

Horsehair Furniture In Demand.

England is said to have gone mad for antiques. Old wax flowers and wax fruit under glass and white stone figures and vases are in great demand and are bringing long prices at the antique shops. Old copper breakfast service and hot water kettles are very popular.

Most important of all, however, the old horsehair furniture of the Victorian era has returned. Early Victorian drawing-room chairs inlaid with mother-of-pearl and having gilt designs are fetching big prices.

The present generation just growing up will have no recollection of horsehair furniture, but it occupies an important place in the recollections of those now in middle age. Full many an equine quadruped gave up his or her innocent young life to decorate the palace of years agone. Anything more uncomfortable in the line of furniture than the old horsehair atrocities can scarcely be imagined. The crooked backed and crooked legged chairs were almost impossible to sit on and were valuable mainly as decorative effects.

Whistler and Strang.

Mr. Strang had an exhibition of his etchings in London, and one day Whistler came to look at them. He went about from one to another without saying anything or showing any sign of appreciation. Mr. Strang began to feel annoyed.

By and by Whistler stopped in front of a long mirror and, pretending that he thought his own reflection in the glass was one of the other artist's etchings, he said:

"Now, that's good!"

"Yes," Mr Strang replied tartly. "It ought to be hung."

A Cautious Highland Youth.

In the British House of Commons recently Lord Tullibardine told the story of an old lady in the highlands who engaged the son of a crofter as page and fitted him out with a livery which was to be worn only on special occasions. On the day of a dinner party the boy put his shock head just inside the door, and a voice inquired: "Please, ma'am, am I to put on my ain breeks or yours?"—Pall Mall Gazette.

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proved in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N. S., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most aggravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

Living Fish Net.

A peculiar method of fishing is employed by the natives of certain islands of Oceania. At stated intervals about 300 of them will assemble on the beach and all together plunge into the water, each carrying a branch of the cocoa palm. At a given distance from the shore they will turn toward it and form a compact half circle, each holding his palm branch perpendicularly in the water, thus forming a kind of seine. The leader of the party gives a signal, and this living net approaches the shore gradually, in perfect order, driving before it a multitude of fishes. Surrounded by this living wall and caught in the cocoa palm branches, many fish are cast on the sands, and others are killed with sticks.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. Saved Nelson's Log.

The late Mr. Thomas J. Barratt saved Nelson's log of the Victory from leaving this country and going to America. On the day of the sale, when the log was likely to be bought by an American, Mr. Barratt went to Downing Street and disturbed a Cabinet meeting to convey the news to the members of the Government. His suggestion was that the Government should become the purchaser. He was just in time to buy it for £3,500, and a representative of the Government afterwards offered to acquire it from Mr. Barratt for that amount, but discovering that the money was to come from a private individual Mr. Barratt preferred to retain possession of the historic document.—London Chronicle.

Must Break the Law.

Son of the late Dan Leno, John William Leno, appealed at London (Eng.) Sessions recently against a fine of $100 and the suspension of his license for three months for driving a car at 28 miles an hour at Albert Bridge road, Battersea. Mr. Leno said that as a motor firm's "demonstrator," he had to break the law because a prospective purchaser asked him to accelerate "to show what the car could do." Whilst affirming the convictios, with cost, and upholding the fine, the Bench agreed that the license should not be suspended.

"Old Master" at a City Church.

Among the art treasures of the City church of St. Swithin, London Stone, is a huge painting representing Christ and the Woman of Canaan, supposed to be an "Old Master," and the work of some member of the Tintoretto school. How or when this came to be acquired the church records do not reveal. Having no suitable space for so large a picture, and objecting to the periodical expense of cleaning and repair, the church officials propose to sell their artistic white elephant and devote the proceeds to some "practical" purpose.

REASON FOR PLAYING GHOST.

Enabled Shakespeare to Go Round and Count Money in Box Office.

When in June, 1886, Sir Henry Irving was requested to deliver an address before the members of the university schools, he explained that he knew nothing about anything but his own calling, but perhaps his audience would find it not an unpleasing variety to meet with some who know that they know nothing, and afterwards in a delightful manner spoke at length on the subject of the English actors from the earliest days of the theatre in England down to his own time. Of the friendship between Shakespeare and Burbage, the Elizabethan player whose memorial in Shoreditch Church has recently been unveiled, he said:

"Shakespeare came to London in 1585. Whether on this, his first visit, he became connected with the theatres is uncertain. At any rate, it is most probable that he saw Burbage in some of his favorite characters, and perhaps made his acquaintance; being first employed as a kind of servant in the theatre and afterwards as a player of inferior parts. It was not until about 1591-1592 that Shakespeare began to turn his attention seriously to dramatic authorship.

"Unfortunately, we have no record of the intercourse between Shakespeare and Burbage; but there can be little doubt that between the dramatist, who was himself an actor, and the actor who gave life to the greatest creations of his imagination, and who, probably, amazed no less than delighted the great master by the vividness and power of his impersonations, there must have existed a close friendship. Shakespeare, unlike most men of genius, was no bad man of business; and, indeed, a friend of mine who prides himself upon being practical, once imagined that he selected the part of the ghost in 'Hamlet' because it enabled him to go in front of the house between the acts and count the money. Burbage was universally acknowledged as the greatest tragic actor of his time. In 'Bartholomew Fair,' Ben Jonson uses Burbage's name as a synonym for 'the best actor.' . . . He numbered among his friends such 'common players' as Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Beaumont and Fletcher, and others whose names were destined to become the most honored in the annals of English literature. Burbage was the first great actor that England ever saw, the original representative of many of Shakespeare's noblest creations."

Australian Furs.

Australian furs were not considered of any importance until opossum skins came into vogue some short time ago. Before that France did not consider Australia as a fur exporting country, and it was only the scarcity of Siberian and Canadian products which made buyers look to other countries, states the French vice-consul in Sydney in a report recently issued. Now, however, he adds, Australia has taken a fairly prominent position, especially since new processes have been found permitting rabbit skins to be used as imitations of scarcer furs. The fur skin most in demand is that of the wild Australian rabbit which is becoming more and more numerous, in spite of the restrictive measures adopted. These skins are sold by auction in Melbourne and Sydney, from June to the middle of September. The opossum follows, but these have reached such high prices that the Government has been obliged to close the export till the end of 1915, and the native bear and platypus till the end of 1924. The grey or red kangaroo is also in large demand on account of its resisting hide. To the different fur-skinned animals must be added the fox, of which several hundreds of thousands of skins are exported annually.

Alfred Noyes Protests.

Alfred Noyes has recently seized an opportunity to set right the mistaken reports of his attitude about the commercial side of poetry. In a recent letter he said in part. "I hope you will allow me to make the strongest protest in my power against the statement that has appeared in your columns and in many other quarters during the past year that I have been 'insistent' on making literature and poetry pay.' No such phrase has ever, at any time, passed my lips; and I have a hundred friends, a hundred witnesses, including my publishers, who will testify to the persistent effort I have made to put an end to this parrot-like reptition of a catch word. Nothing could be quite so abhorrent, or seem quite so vulgar, so cheap, to any artist who stands in any sensitive relation to his art, as the parading of such an aspect of his work before the world. It is like accusing a man of marrying for money. The thing is so crude that it is with the greatest difficulty that I can bring myself to write even this disclaimer."

FAMOUS COOK PASSES.

Knew Many Bright Lights of Past In Literary World.

Thomas Davey, the man who had cooked roast beef of old England for over forty-seven years at Simpson's-in-the-Strand, London, passed away a few weeks ago. His death caused genuine sorrow in the old London eating house where he had been so long a conspicuous figure.

Davey was a man who became famous in his own time through doing one thing and doing it well. He specialized from his youth in cooking traditional English fare—the sirloin of English beef and the saddle of Southdown mutton—and at the time of his death was recognized as the leading exponent of purely English cookery.

"English cookery, mark you," as Davey would have said, "none of your new fangled French fal-de-lals." It was as much his boast that he knew nothing of French cookery as it was his justifiable claim that he knew all there was to be known about English.

And his contempt for French cookery extended to modern methods of roasting and boiling. He used to say that he had never cooked a sirloin by any other means than the open roasting fire, and as he stood by that in Simpson's kitchens talking to a visitor he would give an affectionate glance at the sizzling joints in front of it and trenchantly add, "And you may take it from me, sir, Davey never will."

Simpson's - in - the - Strand, where Davey served so long, dates its reputation for providing traditional English cookery by traditional English methods from the seventeenth century, and the memories of many celebrities cling round it from then onward. But probably the place never had a cook with a greater fund of anecdote than he.

For he was at Simpson's in the days of the bohemians of mid-Victorian times, and the old house was one of their great haunts.

He knew Dickens, Thackeray, Toole, Irving, George Augustus Sala, and many another, and had stories to tell of them all. One of his recollection is that he cooked dinner for William Terris on the night when the fine actor was murdered by Prince at the Adelphia a few years back.

He was acquainted, too, with most of the leading London actors, who foregather at Simpson's to-day, many of them round the historic table used by the Knights's club, a piece of furniture which is famous because it was too large to get back again through the door or window when the house was reconstructed and therefore had a new room built round it, a room which forms part of the building of to-day.

Davey's successor, Hide, comes of a well-known family of English cooks, his father having been chief cook at Lucas', the great resort of members of Parliament in the days before catering was done within the precincts of Westminster itself.

Optimism is a fine thing, but it should not be permitted to blind us to real dangers.

Don't consider a man absolutely worthless so long as he carries life insurance.

Shoals of Faked Pictures.

Picture purchasing in London is apparently an occupation that must be followed with considerable caution. It is stated on good authority that at present there is a large number of "faked" pictures on the market, and some of these are such good imitations that frequently they deceive even good judges.

A well-known Pall Mall expert pointed out that these "faked" pictures are not sold by any respectable dealer. "They are purchased at the various auctions," he said, "and the auctioneer naturally does not give any guarantee. They find their way into private collections, and, perhaps, when they have to be sold for family reasons years later it comes to light that they are 'fakes'."

From various sources it is learned that Belgium is the home of the "fakers." The trade is carried on there extensively, and experts are employed to make new pictures look old. London is the dumping-ground for these rubbish replicas.

Singer In a Workhouse.

Some time ago it was brought to the notice of the West Ham (Eng.) Guardians that there was in their workhouse a girl named Mabel Clark, who possessed a very remarkable contralto voice. Several of the guardians took occasion to hear the child, who was employed as a domestic servant, and were so much impressed that they took expert advice on the matter. The Royal College of Music reported that the girl had the makings of a very unusual contralto voice, and recommended that her musical education should be carefully watched. The guardians have determined to give the girl every chance of developing her gift.

Too True.

Lady de Bathe (Mrs. Langtry) once made the piquant remark that she was "a foe of dissipation or anything of that kind, and I would urge every girl to say 'No' to the dissipated man who would marry her. The man a girl is obliged to stand up for before marriage, she will have to sit up for afterward."

BLACK HAND SECRETS REVEALED BY CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE

The Black Hand's Covenant with Death

By WILLIAM J. FLYNN,
Chief of the United States Secret Service

TERROR is the weapon of the Black Hand. Through terror the society wrings gold from its helpless victims. Through terror it holds its members to the horrible purposes for which it is organized and squeezes from them the last ounce of energy in its service. Men like Cumito the Sheep and Ne Salvatore Romano have sought to break the fetters, to rise above the life of crime they must lead as members of the Black Hand, but terror, inspired by the vengeance they themselves have helped to wreak on others, chills their hearts and kills the good purpose in them. They are like birds struggling with their feet in the lime.

To so hopelessly baffle men with fear the society must have an intricate and harmonious organization, and this it has. Many persons will be convinced of the grim purposes of the Black Hand when they know that the society has its own physicians.

This is to maintain secrecy. Naturally enough, many disputes arise. There are fights, and Sicilians do not fight with their fists. Knife wounds or bullet wounds result from these quarrels. Should an ambulance be called, or even a physician who is not a member of the Black Hand, a report would of necessity be made to the police. This is the last thing desired.

It is for this reason that the Black Hand society has a corps of physicians. It is not only to attend those injured in petty quarrels that the physicians are needed. The code of the Black Hand prescribes certain offences for which a man must fight to preserve his honor. These affairs of honor call merely for the drawing of blood by one of the principals.

Then there are fights between members of the Black Hand and other criminals, between Black Handers and the police, and sometimes even the victim of a vendetta has an opportunity to put up a fight and those who carry out the decrees of the society need medical attention.

Dr. Salvatore Romano was one of the physicians of the Black Hand society. How he was drawn into the net and what he was forced to do, though not actually a member of the society, is a remarkable story and throws a great deal of light on the methods and organization of the system of which Lupo and Morello were the heads.

Dr. Romano lived in New York with his mother, who was from Corleone, Sicily, where she and her mother had been very friendly with the family of Morello.

While young Romano was a student in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, a branch of Columbia University in the city of New York, his mother received a letter demanding a certain amount of money under penalty of Salvatore's death. The young man's mother and grandmother were very much frightened. Because they feared to excite him and cause him to fail in his examinations they told the boy nothing of the letter, but the grandmother went to Morello and showed it to him. She knew that he had dealings with men of questionable character, and thought that possibly he might be able to use his acquaintance to help them.

"Don't worry," said Morello to the aged woman, who had been a friend of his mother. "These men will not act too quickly. They would rather get the money than take the life of the boy. But above all do not let this matter get to the ears of the police. That would mean his certain death—death in its worst form.

"Do not send the money either. Wait for a second letter, which will certainly come; then we can decide upon the best course of action."

Two more letters were received by the Romanos and each time the grandmother went to Morello, who took the letters from her because he said he wished to study them. Morello never gave the letters back. When the fourth letter was received Morello took it as he had the others and after a few days in which he said he was studying the handwriting, announced that he had discovered the origin of the letter.

This he never divulged to the Romanos, merely telling them that he found the blackmailers were willing to settle for $1,000, but that he would offer them $100. The family would have been glad to pay the money in order to safeguard Salvatore, but Morello would not hear of this.

"I will pay the $100," he told Mrs. Romano, "and later I will recover it. Circumstances will not permit of my refusing to pay at all, but be assured that when I have had time to reach the blackmailers through certain channels the money will be returned to me."

The mother and grandmother of the young physician were deeply touched by what they considered Morello's unselfish friendship for them. The whole affair seemed settled to the satisfaction of all, and young Romano was told about it. His mother and grandmother impressed upon him the gratitude that he should entertain toward Morello for possibly saving his life, and certainly saving the family from great suffering.

Shortly after Salvatore Romano graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons he was called to attend Morello, and of an opportunity to repay in a measure the kindness which the Sicilian had shown his family, when Morello did not offer to pay for Dr. Romano's professional services the young physician felt that he was only discharging a debt.

Later Salvatore was called upon to attend Morello's brothers-in-law Lima, Salina and Lupo. It was then but a short step to having him treat members of their families, and before long Dr. Romano was the regular physician for a number of men, all of whom were members of the Black Hand Society. Never a penny did he receive for his services, and at last he arrived in Buffalo, where he established a practice, because he could not make money in New York, while all his time was required to attend Black Handers and their families.

The feeling of gratitude which Dr. Romano felt wore off after a time, but he forbore to break entirely with Morello, for he feared vengeance. Shortly after he went to Buffalo Lupo, Morello and other counterfeiters were arrested and put on trial in New York city. Knowing that Morello's only hope lay in establishing an alibi, the counterfeiter's mother and wife went to Mrs. Romano and urged her to beg her son to testify to clear Morello.

Mrs. Romano was still grateful for what she considered an act of friendship on the part of Morello and though she feared her son would get into trouble if he testified, she wrote to him advising him to go to New York and for the last time do a favor for Morello.

Dr. Romano knew that to save Morello he must commit perjury. He did not wish to do so, and he felt that he had more than settled accounts with the Black Hander and his friends. Yet he knew the type of men with whom he was dealing. There was no longer any doubt in his mind that Morello was one of the Black Hand members. If the society had been ready to take his life for $1,000, would they hesitate to kill his mother if he refused to testify for them?

There was no sleep for the physician. In his dreams he saw his mother leaving her home on her daily missions while black browed Sicilians trailed her, ready to strike at the word of the chief. This mother, whom he loved above all other women, was in danger of death, perhaps worse than death, every minute that he delayed.

It was a telegram sent by "Nick" Terranova that decided him. There was no threat in the telegram. It was simply worded:—

"Be in New York to-morrow to appear in court."

As he read the message he seemed to hear the voice of his mother, crying out in fear and anguish.

THE BLACK HAND HAD TORTURED WOMEN BEFORE THIS.

The telegram slipped from Dr. Romano's nerveless fingers.

The next train from Buffalo bore him to New York.

According to his testimony when brought to trial for perjury, he went first to his mother's, where he met Nick Terranova, who explained that it was desired that he testify that Morello was not out of the house from the last of December to the first of March.

"How often are you going to say you saw him?" asked Terranova.

"Once a week," replied the physician. "I want to go as lightly as possible, so that I will not get into trouble."

"You cannot get into trouble not by sticking to us." Terranova told him very pointedly. "But once a week is not enough to say you saw him. You must say, 'Twice a week.' There will be no trouble. He was so pale and so well disguised that no one seeing him would have known him during the time regarding which you will testify."

When Morello was being taken from the Tombs to the court room Dr. Romano managed to speak a few words to him, telling him that he would testify to having visited him twice a week throughout January and February because he was so affected with rheumatism that he could not leave the house.

The physician did as he promised and the result was he was indicted by the Grand Jury for perjury, but was not convicted.

Eight men had been watching Morello continually throughout January and February and I know positively that Dr. Romano's testimony was not correct. When I brought him to New York and questioned him he told me the whole story substantially as I have presented it to you.

Dr. Brancato also attended Lupo, Morello and other Black Handers on several occasions. Romano was a dope of the society. He told me that he believed Dr. Brancato was also a dope. I had my opinion as to that, but at any rate he was not convicted of perjury, though he was brought to trial.

Although Dr. Romano was never initiated into the Black Hand Society, other physicians were, and they were utilized for the purposes I have described. I said that the rules of the society called for a certain line of conduct under certain circumstances and that as a result the offices of a physician were frequently in demand.

The rules of the Black Hand were actually codified. The society is not governed merely by unwritten laws. In the possession of Rudolph Fontana, one of the men arrested for counterfeiting, I found a note book in which were inscribed the laws of the society. As nearly as possible they are translated word for word as they were written in the note book.

FIRST.—Whoever confides to a person not belonging to the society the operations of his companions, or by word or deed, seriously or in fooling, offends a companion, or who is not signified or does not respect the results (who must be commanded in nothing save the affairs of the society) or who refuses to mount guard on his day, gets drunk or quarrels with a companion, or when called by a companion on business of the society refuses to comply, or who leaves town for more than one day without letting it be known, shall be punished by a fine of $20 and can not come to his place.

But the companions who judge him must be all of one accord, pro or con. When any companion of the society goes away he must leave his address and must vest in some other companion, or when called by a companion for the business of the society he must go to the place specified at the expense of the parties interested.

SECOND.—He who swears falsely on his admission, who draws a weapon without his companion draws another of the same dimension, always with the point uncovered, if it is a knife, or who fights a duel with a companion of the society without the permission of the society, shall be undressed (summarily deprived of his rights).

THIRD.—The companion who knows of the fault of another and does not inform the society at large is liable to the same penalty.

FOURTH.—He that does not attend at the precise hour of the meeting of the BLACKMAILERS OF THE DAY, to do his duty without any orders, shall be punished. If he explains his lateness in a manner satisfactory to the society he will be pardoned and may take his place. Otherwise he may not participate at the next division.

FIFTH.—A recruit who produces ... to the society is entitled to one-... it as his own share.

SIXTH.—The society cannot act ... the assent of all the companions ... the opposition of one mouth ... enough to overrule the opinions of all the others, always provided ... person objecting gives a reasonable explanation for his views.

SEVENTH.—No companion who becomes a member of the society may in any way alter its rules.

EIGHTH.—Every meeting of the society must be announced to those on duty on the day of the meeting at least twenty-four hours before it takes place, except in cases of emergency.

NINTH.—The date and place of meetings is absolutely in the hands of the head of the society, and none may oppose him.

Those are the rules which bind the men who thrive on blackmail, murder, counterfeiting and the kidnapping of children.

I know men who worked their way into the very inner councils of the Black Hand. Men who advise with the leaders, who know what is afoot before the rank and file of the society so much as guess at it. To mention the name of one of these men would be to pronounce his death sentence. To tell how they worked their way into the society would be to disclose their identity to those who hate them. When it became known that certain members of the society were informing the secret service of the workings of the gang there occurred a series of murders which astounded New York and baffled the police.

I may safely say that some of these murders were committed in the blind efforts to still the tongues which were prattling of the affairs of the society. As I tell elsewhere, the guilty men were never slain.

One of these men, I am not saying whether he was a secret service operative or a Sicilian who turned informer, told me of his initiation into the society.

He was conducted to the place of meeting in the ground floor room of a certain house, he was informed later, in the building where the initiation took place. When he was led into the room he found it in darkness, save for a single candle which burned on a table in the centre of the room. Around the table were seated a number of men, their faces concealed by black masks. Behind each man was a high backed chair.

"Don't Worry," Said Morello to the Aged Woman.

The recruit was led to the centre of the room and told to stand before the table. Then the leader of the band asked him a number of questions, the answers to which were supposed to indicate his fitness for membership in the society. Many of the questions and answers were merely formal, but others had a deep significance.

"Why do you wish to join the society?" asked the leader.

"Because I am in need of money," replied the recruit.

"Are you willing to risk your life in the service of the society?"

"I am."

"Are you willing to kill a man who betrays the society?"

"I am."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ROMANCE OF THE GREY BONNET

It would not have happened more than once in a thousand years, but this chanced to be the time.

Bending low over his steering wheel, Batwell was coming down Sheridan road at a pace warranted to have sent a virtuous policeman into convulsions. He barely noticed the grey car as it approached him going north. There was a flash and a crash and the muffled thud. But Batwell had gone two whole blocks before his sub-conscious brain induced him to slow up and glance over the side at the running board. Clinging to the angle made by the board and the side of the car was a fluttering wad of grey and rose colour. Having fished it up, Batwell made out that it was a feminine gew-gaw known to science as a motor bonnet and veil.

"Well!" Batwell blinked foolishly as he turned the thing around on his hand. Then he remembered the grey car. Looking hastily around, he saw a blank road. The grey car had either turned a corner or had entered its own garage. Manifestly, Batwell could not go up and down Sheridan road ringing doorbells and peddling a grey bonnet with tight little bunches of pink roses.

Anyhow, how could a motor bonnet tied on with these fine grey satin ribbons fly off a person's head? Had the woman taken a dislike to him as she shot by, and yielding to feminine emotion which is always erratic, hurled the thing at him as an expression of her sentiments?

"I'll bet she's pretty," Batwell found himself saying aloud after his tenth stare at the tight pink rosebuds. Half humourously he picked the bonnet up to look it over more closely—her name might be inside. He was down near Lincoln Park now, and as he held the bonnet in his hand an amazing thing happened.

A car coming north almost ran into him, and as he hastily swerved Batwell became aware that its driver, a youngish man, had snatched off his goggles and was glaring at him malevolently. The near collision had been the stranger's fault anyhow, and there was no occasion for the other's rage. As Batwell stared in surprise he saw the young man open his lips, then close them. Then the stranger proceeded on his way at imminent risk to other motorists as he kept glaring back at Batwell instead of straight ahead. Three blocks farther and his car ran alongside of Batwell's. Manifestly he was too wrathful to be polite.

"Here!" he called imperiously. "What you doing with that bonnet?"

It was not so much his words as the way he said them. Batwell glared back.

"None of your confounded business!" he yelled sweetly, and put on speed. When he reached home he was still mad at the stranger's impertinence.

Batwell put the motor bonnet carefully on his mantel and smoked his cigar at home that evening, considering it. The whole affair was funny. In two days he grew to look for the bunch of grey and pink the first think when he opened his door every time he came home. The third day he reluctantly turned to the lost and found column in the paper. He had known from the first that he should have done so at once. He found it!

"Lost — On Sheridan road, grey motor bonnet and veil with pink rosebuds. Finder please return to —— Avenue, and receive reward."

"Serves me right for looking," Batwell said gloomily, as he wrapped up his treasure in tissue paper taken from a shirt box. He liked seeing it on his mantel. After dinner he took the bonnet and started north.

"Yes," Batwell heard himself babbling foolishly, after she had entered the reception room questioningly. "I was surprised, you may imagine, when I rescued it. I was——"

He had a right to be surprised because she was sufficient to deprive a man of words, so overwhelming was the pink rosebud sight of her. She smiled at him with just the right shade of amiability.

"It was so careless of me," she mourned. "I had untied the ribbons to fix my hair and it just flew off. You can't imagine the—the trouble its loss has caused me, Mr. Batwell."

Suddenly Batwell remembered the glaring young man and his heart sank as his mind comprehended. No wonder the fiancee of a girl like this fell into a rage at seeing her headgear in the car of a stranger! He probably had been deuced unpleasant to her in his demands for an explanation.

"I—er—I had an odd experience that day right after I get your bonnet," Batwell said. He told the incithat day right after I got your bonfor no confidence. She coloured delightfully.

"Ye-e-s," she murmured. "It was a friend of mine who—well, he really made quite a fuss about it!"

"Doubtless," said Batwell, stolidly. "I—er—I can't blame him!"

He rose to go, but he could not control his eyes. The pink rosebud girl looked down and then looked up. "He—well, he hasn't a bit of right to act so!" she murmured hastily. "He just assumed—he has no right."

Batwell discovered a sudden flood of sunshine. "I'm so glad he hasn't that! I'm quite sorry for him!" he confided daringly. "And pardon me for hurying away, but I've got an important engagement—I've got to find somebody who knows us both, somebody who can properly introduce me to you!"

HAD INDIGESTION.

Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

HEAD OF GREAT CLAN

LATE DUKE OF ARGYLL WAS CHIEFTAIN OF CAMPBELLS.

The Argyll Campbells Are Related to Royalty at Various Places All Down Their Family Tree—Duke's Father Was a Foremost Scientist and Late Holder of the Title Was No Mean Literary Man.

With the passing of John George Edward Henry Douglas Sutherland Campbell, late Duke of Argyle, or properly Argyll, it is once more impressed upon us that modernism has eaten into the very stones on which the glory of the ancient big houses was founded. Either they crumble or are replaced by new stones and stand by a fresh glory. The new stones are only achieved by mental effort, and by this standard the house of Argyll still stands firm.

The father of the late Duke was one of the foremost scientists and statesmen of his time, and his son, had he been left to choose his own course in life, would probably have attained some literary distinction. As it was, with all his environment, training, and social bondage against him, he was able to accomplish the libretto of an opera, the "Psalms in English Verse," and a number of praiseworthy minor literary efforts.

But it is a far cry from the writing of an opera to the wild days of the Campbell glory, when title deeds were searched with a claymore and all the clan of Macgregor were routed from the lands of Glenorchy before breakfast that the Campbells of Argyll might spread themselves. Now the bagpipes have been attached to motors and play "The Campbells Are Comin'" at a pace not to exceed by law twenty miles an hour. According to Scottish writers of this generation, most of the minor Campbells have migrated, and the castles are used as lures to envious American tourists, save when royalty has a fancy to shoot grouse.

The translation of the family name makes it evident that the founder of the house of Campbell had no part in his christening, though he evidently did his best to make things interesting for those who did, in after life.

In Gaelic it is Cam-beul or "Wry-mouth," and was evidently given because of some facial deformity. Records of the Cambells appear as far back as 1216. They appear to have been a wise family, and were always on the best of terms with the reigning house. In 1216 Gillespie Cambell was returned in the Exchequer Rolls as holding lands of Menstrie and Sauchie in Stirling; and he witnessed the charter of the Burgh of Newburgh, Fife, in 1266. In 1292 Colin Cambell supported the Bruce, and in 1296 Neil Cambell was made King Edward First's bailie over the lands from Lochfyne to Kilmartin in Argyll. This Neil Cambell is really the founder of the Argyll Cambells. His wife was a sister of Bruce.

The long records of the Argyll Cambells show a race of men brave in battle, and infinitely wise and prudent in the handling of kings. All down the line they touch royalty, in position and through marriage, and each time royalty was touched the Cambell lands and power increased greatly.

Sir Colin Campbell (the letter "p" came in unexplained about this time) in 1372 was greatly in favor of Robert II. and was employed to curb the impulses of the wild Highlanders; the record simply adding, "for which he received large grants of lands." He was succeeded by Duncan the Fortunate, who was created Lord Campbell by James II. in 1445, and was the first of the family to take the title of Argyll. In the little church at Kilmun there is still a life-size monument of Duncan, erected at his death in 1453.

The son of Duncan the Fortunate, Archibald Roy, continued to be polite to kings, and in 1457 was created Earl of Argyll; in 1470 Baron of Lorne, and in 1481 he received a large grant of lands in Knapdale. His son came on troubled times, and died at Flodden with James IV. in 1513. The chief enemies of the Campbells were the MacGregors, and each time they met in battle, the Campbells in some way carried off large slices of the MacGregor lands in Glenorchy.

The eight Earl of Argyll had a brief and glorious career, being created Marquis of Argyll in 1641, and beheaded in 1661. On his death his title and estates were, of course, forfeited, but were later restored to his son, Archibald, by Charles II. This son also met a tragic end, common in those "golden days," by being beheaded for taking part in Monmouth's rebellion.

The title of Duke of Argyll was conferred on the tenth earl, Archibald, in 1701. The family tree from this time on has been allowed to flourish in peace, its branches dropping quietly from old age and without the aid of the axe. The battle cry of the Argyll Campbells, "Cruachan," no longer rings over the hills of the Highlands and the clan-pipe music of "Failte 'Mharcuis," "Bail'-lonaraora," "The Campbells are Comin'," and "Cumha 'Mharcuis," the lament of the clan, and welded into medleys for the delectment of lodge concerts. The tartan of the Argyll Campbells is a dark green with small check in lighter green, and marked off with a thin yellow bar in large plaid.

Until 1746, when the clan system was ended, all the Campbells, as all the members of other clans believed themselves to, and practically did, belong to one large family, of which the chief was the head.

The emblem of the clan is wild myrtle or fir club moss.

The new Duke of Argyll is Niall Diarmid, son of the late Lord Archibald Campbell, brother of the late duke, and was born in 1873.

Villa's Men Seize Telegraphs.

EL PASO, Texas, June 17.—The bureau of information and the telegraph office at Juarez in control of Carranza officials, were taken over forcefully last night by soldiers under Col. Tomas Arnelas, military commander of Juarez, and a Villa supporter.

Just after the bureau of information had announced to the press the receipt of a message from the front above Zacatecas, Arnelas' soldiers entered the telegraph office and the bureau and ordered that no paper be touched. These soldiers, in personal command of the Juarez commander, shortly before had taken over supervision of the telegraph office adjoining the bureau.

Italy Regaining Equilibrium.

ROME, June 17.—Italy, which last week was facing revolutionary risings in various parts of the kingdom, has apparently come back to a normal state of affairs. The threatened strike of the railwaymen and the general strike, which included only a comparatively small section of the working people, seem to have come to a definite ending and resumption of work everywhere has served to re-establish normal conditions.

Immense material damage has been done; a few persons have been killed and many wounded; possibly fifty of those caught red-handed in acts of violence have already been convicted and many others under arrest are awaiting trial.

NINE BODIES FOUND.

As Many More Are Missing as Result of Paris Disaster.

PARIS, June 17.—It seems probable that the terrible storm which broke over Paris Monday night will claim at least a score of victims. Up to the present moment nine bodies have been recovered from the chasms in which they were engulfed. Fully that number have since been reported missing. Among the missing is John Lantley, a self-taught artist-tailor, whose clever water colors were exhibited a few months ago at the Galleries Georges Petit. It is a mercy that the catastrophe happened no later than it did, otherwise the exodus of workers would have been in full swing, and the roll of victims terrible.

A gas-pipe exploded, and a sheet of flames shot up as high as second storey. This was followed by the explosion of a compressed air pipe, and a fireman and two other persons were dragged away from the very brink of the abyss, which was 20 feet deep. The first body recovered was that of Georges Bedoineau, identified by his brother, who was walking by his side at the moment of the catastrophe, and who just managed to spring aside.

At the chasm in the Rue St. Philipe du Roule there are still three bodies to be accounted for, that of a man aged 60, and two children, aged 10 and 12. Between the Church of St. Augustine and Felix Pointin's is a chasm much smaller, but its depth is now over 30 feet. The chasm opened about 6.30 as a taxicab was crossing the square carrying Mme. Lavolte, a rich woman, who lives near the Arc de Triomphe. Before the horrified spectators, who were taking shelter around the square, realized what had happened the taxicab vanished. Mme. Lavolte and the chauffeur were killed.

FIVE STEAMERS NEEDED.

Government Gets Ready To Send Supplies To Port Nelson.

OTTAWA, June 7. — During the first week in July the Government will send five steamers from Halifax with materials and supplies for the construction of the railway terminals, elevators and harbor work at Port Nelson. There are altogether 20,000 tons of freight to be taken in this summer. If these first vessels are not unduly delayed by ice in Hudson Straits or the bay they should reach their destination much earlier than the first vessel last year, which arrived only on Aug. 7. The Government has been busy on the construction of dockage, and has also three small steamers built to serve as lighters. The troubles of last year in discharging cargoes are not likely to be repeated.

The completion of wireless communication by means of the stations erected at Port Nelson and at Le Pas, 418 miles west, enables the railway department to keep in constant touch with the work. Over six million dollars has been spent to date on the railway and terminals, and the appropriations voted at the session just closed included $4,500,000 for the railway terminals and elevators.

The Hudson Bay Railway which is being built from Le Pas is now just half finished. The Government will also proceed this year with the establishing of the necessary aids to navigation along the northern route. These will include lighthouses and wireless stations on the Hudson Straits.

A very important feature of this transportation route from western Canada to the old country must be faced by the Government at an early date. It is the question of a line of specially-built steamers. If a private company cannot be induced to undertake such a contract or demands too large a subsidy the Government will have to build and operate a line of steamers of its own.

MANITOBA ELECTION DATE.

Premier Roblin Fixes July 10 as Day of Polling.

WINNIPEG, June 17. — Premier Roblin announced in an address at Carman that the provincial elections would be held Friday, July 10, with nominations a week earlier. "I have no fear of the result," he said. He predicted forty or more out of the forty-nine to be elected would be his supporters. In the first day's registration between 10,000 and 12,000 names were put on the list. Speaking of the Liberal advocacy of direct legislation, the Premier declared that "the Liberal party, if returned to power, propose to abolish responsible government in this province. They propose to introduce an element of republicanism that is foreign and repugnant to every man that loves British institutions and the British flag. Members of the Legislature under direct legislation are so many pawns on the chess board, creatures having no power, nothing to stimulate them to action."

HAS HE FOUND RADIUM?

Assyrian Is Hurrying To Get His $25,000 From Province.

TORONTO, June 17. — Word has reached Toronto of a reputed strike of radium ore at Sesamika in the district 30 miles to the north of Kirkland Lake. In consequence the lucky prospector, an Assyrian, is on his way to the seat of the Provincial Government to claim the $25,000 reward arranged during the recent session of the Legislature.

T. W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, has not yet heard of this latest strike, nor has any communication yet been received at the Parliament buildings, but it is thought that the discovery may have been made as the mineral is understood to exist in northern districts.

Mr. Gibson stated last evening that already several applicants to the boards had appeared, but in each case disappointment followed. Minerals which they failed to analyse, they considered must be radium.

Radium is nearly always found in pitchblende ore.

Different!

A good story is told of Signor Mattei, the composer, whose death was announced the other day.

Of one of his values Mattei used to tell the yarn how he played it through at a soiree in a certain London drawing-room, when his hostess approached him with the request that he would play it.

Mattei, of course, explained as tactfully as possible that he had already just played it. The hostess, quite unmoved, then said:

"Oh! but that is not the real 'Mattei Valse.' My daughter plays that, and it is not a bit like what you just played."

PREFERRED THE TRAIL OF THE POLO PONY TO THE TRAIL OF THE BOOKWORM—Mr. John Trail was recently chosen to join the polo team Lord Wimborne is taking to America to contest the cup. Mr. Trail played back in the final practice match of the team at Hurlingham the other day.

TOOK NO CHANCES.

Officials Put Police Along Six Mile Route of Royal Procession.

LONDON, June 17.—Never before have such precautions been taken to guard members of the royal family from the attentions of the militant suffragettes as were taken yesterday at the Ascot race course. The opening of the leading society race meeting found upwards of 1,000 men of the Metropolitan police and hundreds of detectives from Scotland Yard assembled on the historic course as reinforcements for the regular Berkshire county police force, which had been mobilized in full strength.

The six-mile route from Windsor Castle to the course, over which the King and Queen and their guests were to drive in the state procession, was lined practically all the way by policemen.

The track also was closely guarded to prevent a recurrence of last year's sensational incident when Tracey was interfered with and thrown by a madman.

BRITAIN GETS POLO CUP.

Visitors Administer Decisive Defeat To American Team.

MEADOWBROOK CLUB, WESTBURY, L. I., June 17.—The international polo cup, emblematic of the world's championship, will cross the ocean again, having been won here yesterday by the English team, in the second games of the series, by a score of 4 to 2½. Although the American defenders made a desperate last ditch stand they were not quite equal to winning.

When the eighth and final period opened the American four were leading by a fraction of a point, but despite their desperate efforts they could not hold the advantage. Each team scored a goal in this period, but the defenders, in their anxiety to clinch the victory, transgressed the rules by sharp crossing, and were penalized for fouling. And so it came about that just as the sun sank in the west, the Britons secured the cup.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any drug-

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, June 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 73 cars, comprising 560 cattle; 2630 hogs, 661 sheep and lambs and 274 calves.

Choice butchers' steers by the load sold at $8.25 to $8.40; choice steers and heifers at $8 to $8.25; medium to good at $7.50 to $8.10; common, $7.30 to $7.65; choice cows, 7 to $7.25; good cows at $6.50 to $6.90; medium cows, $6.75 to $6; canners and cutters, 3.75 to $4.75; bulls, $6.50 to $7.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

An indifferent demand, showed that stockers and feeders were not selling as high as they were even last week. The top price reported was $7.50, the range being from $6 to $7.50, which is still very high when the quality is considered.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were moderate. There was a fair demand, especially for the best grades. Prices ranged from $60 to $85 for the bulk, but 2 extra quality cows, one a Shorthorn grade, the other a Holstein, both fresh milkers, sold at $90 and $100 respectively.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was again firm, and prices ranged from $7 to $11 each, the bulk selling from $8.50 to $10.50, the market closing very strong.

Sheep and Lambs.

When quality was taken into consideration the sheep and lamb prices were as firm as they were on Monday. Light sheep sold at $6 to $6.25; heavy at $4.25 to $4.75; spring lambs at $8 to $8.50.

Hogs.

The hog market ruled about steady. Selects, fed and watered, $7.85; $7.90 f.o.b. cars, and $8.10 weighed off cars.

DEADLY DIARIES.

Little Entries Which Led Criminals to the Gallows.

If you are out to be a murderer do not keep a diary—keep silent, for it will pay better. Many are the criminals whose capture and ultimate punishment have been the outcome of scribbled notes. Take the case of James Neill, better known as Neill Cream, who was arrested for the murder by poison of Matilda Clover and another girl. The evidence against Cream was purely circumstantial, but it was entries from his own diary found in his rooms after his arrest which practically sealed his fate. In pencil were the initials M. C., those of the murdered girl, Matilda Clover, under the date Oct. 20, 1891, which was the day of her death. Later, under April 11, 1892, were the initials E. S., those of Emma Shrivell, the second of his victims. A quantity of small capsules filled with strychnine was also discovered in his rooms, and strychnine was the poison found in the bodies of the murdered women. Cream was hanged.

Thieves as well as murderers have been known to provide the police with evidence in their own handwriting. Some years ago two men were found loitering under suspicious circumstances at the back of a warehouse in Hill's place, Oxford street, London. They were arrested, but, though they were suspected of having committed several burglaries, evidence was lacking. The police searched their lodgings, which were in Tufnell Park road, and there discovered, hidden under a loose board in the floor, a penny memorandum book which proved most interesting reading. Neatly arranged in alphabetical order were the names and addresses of a number of wealthy people, with spaces opposite containing such remarks as: "Windows good." "Try fastenings." "No dogs here." In several cases roughly-drawn plans were below the addresses, and twice there were dates which were found to correspond with robberies at the houses so designated. The upshot was that the owner of that expensive pennyworth got five years' penal, while his companion got off cheap with ten months' hard.

Some burglars there are who go about their nefarious business as methodically as any bank cashier. Recently a released convict was arrested in Paris charged with being in unlawful possession of a quantity of linen. He told the police that the linen had been given him by one Joseph Chicot, in payment of a debt. The police went to Chicot's house. Chicot, like Taffy in the nursery rhyme, was not at home. They took the liberty of making a search and found the place stored like a pawnshop with silver, clocks, watches, linen, as well as $15,000 in gold and silver. They found more—a neatly-written record extending over five years, and comprising brief details of over 1,500 burglaries. At first they could hardly believe their eyes, but the address, the date, and the value of the articles stolen were given in every case, and they were able to verify the extraordinary record. Chicot was caught and has been sent to prison for ten years. It was undoubtedly his diary that sent him there.

Dinner In the Morning.

The Lancet, the famous medical periodical of London, says that learned scientists have proved that the proper time for dinner is half-past 7 o'clock in the morning.

The least suitable hours for meals are between noon and one o'clock and between 7 and 8 in the evening. These are precisely the hours that Europe has set apart for meals.

According to one scientific experimenter the meal hours in a system of rational hygiene would be as follows: The principal meal of the day at 7.30 a.m., or as soon after that time as possible, so as to obtain all the necessary energy for the day's work and restore the liver, emptied by the night's abstinence; a second meal of 200 to 400 calories, consisting of milk, sugar and cakes, at 4.30; a light repast of 700 to 800 calories at 8.30 or 9 p.m.

Prince Fought Vanman.

The Prince of Wales has just had his first encounter with a British workman, in the shape of a brief bout at fisticuffs with the driver of a laundry wagon at Oxford. The driver was worsted.

The man was delivering baskets at Keble College, when three students drove the wagon away and left it in a side street. The culprits were joined by the prince, when another driver rushed at the group, selecting the prince for attack. He tapped the princely claret and bruised the royal chest. The next instant the prince landed a blow on the driver's face that staggered him.

The prince soothed his opponent's feelings with a cigar and a gold coin. When the vanman learned whom he had punched he declared: "For such a sickly lookin' feller, 'e can 'it 'ard an' rough."

A Way They Have.

When a young lady and gentleman have a controversy about kissing, they generally put their heads together.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

Sea Captain and John Ruskin.

Mrs. T. G. Talbot, of Tyn-y-ffnon, Barmouth, who has just celebrated her ninetieth birthday, was a great friend of John Ruskin. In 1878 she gave twelve cottages and a piece of land for the St. George's Guild, and when Ruskin came to see the cottages in the following year one of the occupants, an eccentric old sea captain, said to him, with a smile, "If you would write better English, Mr. Ruskin, I could understand your books better."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1914.

Big Mass Meeting At The Grand Opera House To-morrow Evening To Be Addressed By N. W. ROWELL, K. C., and G. A. GILLESPIE.

THE BRIDGENORTH FARMERS GAVE MR. GILLESPIE A FINE RECEPTION

Rowell Candidate Spoke at Zion Church and at Bridgenorth--Mr. H. B. Cowan' Mr. D. O'Connell and Others Supported Him.

STRONG TEMPERANCE SENTIMENT

Among old friends and acquaintances even a political candidate is naturally reticent in referring to what he has done and what he may do. In the first place modesty demands it, and secondly, there is nothing to be gained in speaking of that which is already known.

For such a reason George Gillespie's meetings in Smith have not been marked by protracted speeches by the candidate. With Mr. Gillespie the temperance question is foremost. The consideration of it swayed him to accept the nomination. But in Smith, what can he tell the electors? For sixteen years or less he has known the great majority of them in one way or another. His friends are both Conservatives and Liberals. They know whether he is a worthy temperance candidate or not. They know that sobriety has always been one of his virtues. They know he is a man of his word, that his promises are fulfilled. They know he is alert, resourceful and progressive, and that his own efforts have brought him material success.

Hence, in announcing his stand on the temperance question at his meetings in Smith Mr. Gillespie doubtless realized that his audiences knew practically all there was to be known. He promised to support without any equivocation temperance legislation to abolish the bar, the shops and the clubs. The Smith farmers were not appealed to on the ground of friendship or acquaintanceship. On every point Mr. Gillespie was equally clear. He said he felt a man should vote as his conscience directed him. The temperance issue was long expected, and it was too great to be passed over lightly. If the Smith electors desired to give their support to Mr. Rowell, in his legislation against the liquor traffic they could confidently register their votes for the local Reform candidate and know that their wishes would be faithfully presented in the Legislature.

Fine Meetings.

That is a synopsis of what Mr. Gillespie told the farmers on Monday night, on the 2nd and 4th Concessions, and repeated last night at Zion Church, on the 7th Concession, and at Bridgenorth. At the latter place he received a splendid reception, being assisted by Mr. H. B. Cowan, Mr. D. O'Connell, Rev. Robt. Pogue and Rev. Mr. Cragg, the latter gentlemen calling for a few minutes on their way home from Selwyn, where a big temperance meeting was held.

At the old Zion Church he was helped by Ald. J. C. Anderson, Mr. F. E. Ellis and Mr. R. R. Hall. This meeting was decidedly inspiring, although the attendance was not as large as at Bridgenorth.

Good Speakers.

Mr. Cowan and Mr. O'Connell covered the Rowell policy thoroughly. The former dealt with the legislative aspect and Mr. O'Connell spoke of the evil effects of the liquor traffic concluding with a striking arraignment of the extravagance of the Government, its lack of initiative and failure to rise to its responsibilities.

There is a moral issue before this province, Mr. O'Connell stated, that is presenting a wonderful appeal and has its object the present and future well being of the people. It strikes at a degrading evil, and it depends upon the moral sense of the sons of the old stalwarts who hewed down the forest primeval and made this the banner province of the Dominion.

People Must Decide.

The question has been exhaustively presented to you by Mr. Cowan. It remains for you to decide. You are the masters of the situation, and it is in your hands. If you want to kill this evil for all time, the power is yours. And also the responsibility is yours if you have a conscience.

The traffic which Mr. Rowell has made a stand against is one of the greatest evils any civilized country was ever cursed with. Consider all the misery, all the suffering that has flowed in the train of liquor! Thousands and tens of thousands of young men are on the way to drunkards' graves. Young men graced with great minds and intellects, one of the greatest assets this country possesses, have wrecked the constitutions with which God blessed them. Liquor has destroyed, and is destroying the best

CHEESE MUST BE MAINTAINED AT HIGH QUALITY

Word of Advice From English Firm of Buyers at Board Meeting This Morning

GILLESPIE CLEARED UP

The regular meeting of the Cheese Board this morning was featured by an address from Mr. Hodgson of Hodgson & Rowson, Montreal, for whom Mr G. A. Gillespie is buyer. Both gentlemen are in the City on a visit, Mr. Rowson having come from England on a mid-season business trip. There were 2,115 cheese boarded, all of which Mr. Gillespie bought on the third bid. The factories boarded as follows: Keene 90, Warminster 75, Shearer 120, Selwyn 120, Villiers 110, Warsaw 110, Westwood 160, Daisy D 90, Myrtle 140, Oakdale 85, Ormonde 140, Young's Point 70, Lang 95, Indian River 100, East Emily 130, Trewern 120, Norwood 170, Fleetwood 100, Killarney 90. Total 2,115.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle of Lindsay opened at 12 5-8c. and Mr. Watkins raised to 3-4. Mr. Gillespie bid 12 13-16 and cleaned the board.

An adjournment was made for three weeks.

Warning to the Makers.

In responding to President Switzer's invitation to speak a few words, Mr. Hodgson said it was 23 years since he was in Peterborough. "I congratulate the citizens upon the growth of the town since that time." He referred to the service rendered by Mr. Switzer and Mr. Gillespie at the investigation made by the Royal Commission to investigate the question of weights at Montreal. The chairman, a lawyer, commented upon the knowledge and the intelligent manner in which the Peterborough representatives presented their evidence.

"I have always been proud of Peterborough and Peterborough cheese. It represents the high water mark in the English markets. But last year I noticed evidences of a tendency to depart from the standard which has been set up and maintained on this board. There were no serious changes, but there was a tendency that might easily become serious unless it is checked. Peterborough cheese has always been second to none in texture, quality and finish. Last year I noticed that one end of some of the cheese was mouldy at times. This is simply the result of laziness on the part of the makers. When you go home you should warn them on this point.

I also detected a disposition to work on an average. If ever Canada was called upon to put its best foot forward in order to hold her position on the English market, that time was never more apparent than the present. New Zealand is out to beat Canada. This country stands on a higher plane to-day, but if makers are trying to make one pound of cheese out of nine pounds of milk it is good-bye to the ascendancy of Canada. Your makers know how to make good cheese. Let us have the good old quality and texture.

Appearance Counts.

Mr. Hodgson impressed upon his salesmen the necessity of cheese making a good appearance. Cool curing rooms contained an element of danger in that mould may sometimes appear. Sprinkle the floor and shelves with formaline and the cheese will be turned out as bright as a dollar. We want to give the Englishman what he wants, and he wants the cheese to be just as fine on the outside as on the inside. He cautioned the factory patrons to turn back boxes that appear thin. Box makers in the Brockville district have been cutting their boxes thin and when they arrive in the Old Country they are scarcely recognizable. There is no complaint from Peterborough on this score yet, but Mr. Hodgson advised the cheese men to watch their boxes.

The latest pattern of steam compression devices for providing them with air have been made ready.

A STRAW THAT SHOWS HOW THE WIND BLOWS

A Former "Blind Pigger" Nominated by Government Party—Hot Time at Fretful Porcupine

Reports received by The Globe from several sources yesterday state that the most bitterly contested convention in the history of New Ontario was held at South Porcupine on Saturday, when R. A. Douglas of Matheson defeated Gordon Gauthier of South Porcupine as the Conservative nominee for Cochrane, the final figures being: Douglas 73, Gauthier 64. There were no fewer than five candidates in the field — namely: R. A. Douglas of Matheson, D. Dempsey of Cochrane, Gordon Gauthier of Porcupine, Thomas Torrance of South Porcupine, and J. H. Black of Haileybury. Mr. Black was nominated at the convention only and against his own wishes. He was never a serious candidate. Torrance represented the old municipal party in the township of Tisdale, which was ejected last January; Gauthier the reform party in the same township, and the chief rivalry was between them.

It is stated that the "blind pigs" in town were running wide open, with a bottle on the counter for all who liked to pay for it, all day. R. A. Douglas, the nominee, is a merchant of Matheson. He was convicted before Magistate (now Judge) Harman for "blind pigging" some years ago and fined $600.

Many Conservatives Are Angry.

It was owing to disqualification by the Credentials Committee of many of the Gauthier delegates that Douglas won. Hundreds of Tories who supported Gordon Gauthier are now so angry with the stand taken by the Credentials Committee in disqualifying their delegates that they are openly declaring they will vote for Mac Lang, the Liberal candidate, and many of them are working for him.

The convention was held behind closed doors, even the press being asked to withdraw. It took the Credentials Committee from 8 o'clock in the morning to 3 in the afternoon to settle the disputes of warring delegates, and four ballots were taken at the convention before a final result could be obtained.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Dominion Minister of Railways and Canals, attended the convention and made a short speech. He said that if a Liberal was returned for the riding he would be inclined to ask the Government to change its name. Hon. W. H. Hearst, Provincial Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, also spoke briefly, accusing Mr. Rowell of investing all his money in British Columbia and not spending a cent in Northern Ontario as the Government was doing.

ILL HEALTH WAS CAUSE

The funeral of the late Walter Darling, who committed suicide on the Lakefield Road, on Monday last, by taking strychnine, was held from the family residence, Smith Township, this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, to the Lakefield Cemetery. A large number of friends of the deceased were present, and testified to the respect and esteem in which the late Mr. Darling was held.

Friends attribute Mr. Darling's rash action in taking the poison to the poor condition of health which he has suffered of late. Despondency over this is the only reason they can give for his taking his own life, as his commercial prospects were said to be of the very brightest, to be of the very brightest. Darling and is survived by a widow and one infant child.

FELL OFF ROOF FRACTURED HIP

Springville Man Was Shingling Barn Alone, When He Lost His Footing and Fell to the Ground

HE WILL RECOVER

Yesterday about noon Mr. W. G. Atchison, of Springville, was the victim of a very painful accident, as a result of which he lies in the Nicholls Hospital to-day, with prospects of complete recovery a long way off.

Mr. Atchison yesterday morning, was shingling the roof of Mr. Jos. Madill's barn, in Cavan Township. He was working alone, and there was no one in the vicinity of the barn who saw the accident. Shortly before noon he lost his footing in some manner and sliding down the roof of the barn, which is a high one, he was precipitated with great force onto the ground. His injuries rendered him unable to move from where he struck, and after calling for help for several minutes he managed to attract the attention of Mr. Bowles, who ran to his assistance. He was taken to the house, and on the 3.30 C.P.R. train yesterday afternoon was brought to this city, and taken to the Nicholls Hospital by Belleghem's ambulance. Dr. Frederick attended him.

It was found that Mr. Atchison had his hip fractured, but it is hoped that he sustained no internal injuries. His recovery is regarded as likely if no complications set in, and no further injuries are discovered.

What Will Become of "The Drunks"?

If the Bar is Abolished, Asks Magistrate Dumble

"Abolish the bar and what will become of these poor fellows?" was the query of Magistrate Dumble as a bunch of "morning-afters" faced him this morning.

Henry Peters, who was found drunk was unable to pay his fine of $2. He will go up to Castle Nesbitt for ten days.

Andrew V. Mann faced the same charge and was taxed $2 or ten days.

Michael Shazgalk, an Austrian, who came here from Toronto, looking for work, was told to get out of town right away.

Stephen Dempsey, charged with being drunk, yesterday, was again charged with being intoxicated, this morning and the Magistrate told him to leave the City and if he came back again he would get six months in the Central Prison.

NEW BAIL FOR "FITZ."

Second Bond Found for Indicted ex-Pugilist and Woman.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 13—Robert Fitzsimmons, former champion heavyweight pugilist, and Miss Temo Sloan, who were indicted by the Middlesex Grand Jury on a charge of immorality, were recently arrested at the home of Fitzsimmons in Dunellen by Sheriff Appleby and Under Sheriff Houghton.

Fitzsimmons submitted quietly to arrest, but Miss Sloan pleaded with the Sheriff to shoot her rather than arrest her. Both denied the charges. Bail of $1,000 each was furnished for them by a New Brunswick undertaker after Miss Sloan's offer of her jewellery had been refused.

This morning, however, while Fitzsimmons was consulting with his lawyer, ex-Judge Cowenhoven of New Brunswick, he received word that the bondsman had surrendered them and that the Sheriff was seeking to re-arrest them. By the time the Sheriff found Fitzsimmons his lawyer had procured new bail.

One of the principal witnesses against Fitzsimmons was Mrs. John Mack, whose husband, the former manager of Fitzsimmons, brought suit last month for $2,100 for services in procuring the pugilist engagements on the stage. Fitzsimmons said yesterday that his quarrel with his manager was the cause of the charges against him.

Suit for divorce on the ground of cruelty was filed against Fitzsimmons in Chicago on May 23 by Mrs. Julia Clifford Fitzsimmons, who married him in 1903.

MANY "IFS" IN EMPRESS OF IRELAND ENQUIRY

Trifles of Omission and Commission That Proved to be of Tremendous Import--First Officer of Storstad Made Great Admission.

GETTING AT FACTS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

QUEBEC, June 17. — There were tense moments this morning in the high-ceilinged court room where the Royal Commission is investigating the collision which toppled the Empress of Ireland to her doom and sent one thousand people to death all in a few short minutes.

It was a moment of breathless listening when Butler Aspinall, K.C., cross-examining the chief officer, Tuffenes of the Storstad, demanded why he had not called his captain the moment the fog had descended, shutting out the stars.

Tuffenes answered that it was usual for him to wait until he was sure that the weather was not going to clear.

With tenseness expressed in their attitudes, the crowd listened for the answer of the witness who was on the stand practically all the morning, to the question as to why the stem of the collier penetrated twelve feet into the steel sheathed side of the liner when the collision occurred. And he corroborated all he has said by replying that it was the speed of the Empress coming forward at an angle that gave an impetus to the collision, his ship having a speedway of not more than a mile an hour.

Then there came the probe for the reason why the helm of the Storstad was put hard aport when the Empress was signalling that she was stationary somewhere to starboard of the liner.

Mr. Aspinall asked the witness if the collision did not result from this steering order. Witness replied that he put his helm over in order to prevent her head sheering to starboard with the current. Had this occurred he would have lossed control and would have had to get under way to gain steerage way.

Result of Trifles.

Thus it would seem that the most terrible disaster in the annals of Canadian marine history was not the result of a great blunder, but of trifles that at the moment seemed of little consequence. It was the tremendous details that, it would seem, counted. The chief officer did not call the captain at once. He signalled the Empress that he was stationary and then ordered his engines to slow ahead without giving any new signals. He ported his helm, thinking that the Empress was at a safe distance.

Mrs. Kendall There.

Up around the high walls of the court room runs a narrow gallery just under the ceiling. Unknown to the majority in the court room there was one who was more than interested, wearing a simply-made, vari-coloured hat and a plain but effective gown. She rarely moved her eyes except to follow questions from examiner to witness during the hours that passed. At intervals, however, she looked directly below her. There was a man seated there, one of the principals of the investigation. At times, for minutes her gaze was directed upon him. The man was Capt. Kendall. The woman was Mrs. Kendall, his wife. No one in the court room followed the proceedings with the avidity she showed.

A Critical Admission.

It was in the cross examination by Mr. Aspinall that Chief Officer Tuffenes of the Storstad made his most critical admission, indicating that he omitted to signal the Empress all his movements in the fog that terrible night.

Mr. Aspinall asked him—"According to your evidence yesterday you blew two long blasts and immediately ordered your engines ahead."

"Yes."

"That is not a very seaman-like thing to do, to blow two long blasts to tell another man you are stopped and at the same time order your engines ahead."

"I thought it was right at the time."

Lord Mersey—"Why did you think it was right?"

"The signal was not to indicate what I was going to do; it was to indicate the position I was in."

Mr. Aspinall—"You were giving information to the other ship were you not—that was the object of the two long blasts, and the information you were giving to the officer in charge of the Empress was, "I am stopped in the water?"

FOG CAUSES A COLLISION IN CHANNEL

Passenger Steamer Kaiser Wilhelm Badly Crippled as Result of Colliding with Unknown Steamer

IMMIGRATION TROUBLES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., June 17—Wireless messages received to-night said the liner "Kaiser Wilhelm" was badly injured in a collision with an unnamed steamer in a fog in the English Channel and was limping into Southampton for repairs, escorted by two British cruisers. No other details are forthcoming.

Examiner Special:

VANCOUVER, B. C., June 17. — There is some anxiety to-day following the arrival of two Japanese cruisers off Victoria and there are rumours of serious complications over the Hindu immigrant matter. The Komagata Maru, on board of which are the Hindus, is a Japanese steamer, commanded by a Japanese Captain, and it is thought here that the cruisers are here to show Japan's hand in the matter.
